RIVERFRONT BILL WITH $2,640,000 GRANT HEADS FOR HOUSE APPROVAL

OK Expected Tomorrow on Fund Compromise —Missourians in Congress Gratified by Action.

Approval of a $2,640,000 appropriation for preliminary work on the Jefferson National Expansion Memorial is expected when the allocation comes up for a vote in the House tomorrow.

Members of the Missouri delegation in Congress expressed gratification at the action of a Senate-House conference committee which reached agreement Friday on a compromise appropriation.

Representative Clarence Cannon (Dem.) Missouri, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, and Representatives Leonor K. Sullivan and Frank M. Karsten, St. Louis Democrats, all predicted that the House would approve the allocation.

"I am very grateful that the money has been approved by the conference committee," Senator Stuart Symington (Dem.), Missouri, declared. "I hope we will go ahead without further delay on a project that means so much to St. Louis and the state."

The office of Senator Thomas C. Hennings Jr. (Dem.), Missouri, likewise praised the conference report.

Other Comment.

Mrs. Sullivan, a leader in the movement to get federal aid for the riverfront memorial, said she was confident that additional appropriations to carry the project to completion would be made as needed.

Representative Thomas C. Curtis (Rep.), Webster Groves, said that House and Senate approval of the committee action would enable St. Louis to begin negotiations for relocating the railroad tracks on the Mississippi levee.

Negotiations will begin immediately after Congress assures federal aid, the Post-Dispatch was informed yesterday by Julian Spotts, superintendent of the memorial. The $2,640,000 would be the federal contribution to the cost of relocating the tracks and grading the memorial site.

Under a formula requiring the City of St. Louis to put up $1 for every $3 in federal aid, the city would be called upon to match the appropriation of $2,640,000 with a local contribution of $880,000. This would present no difficulty since a municipal bond issue of $7,500,000 for development of the memorial was passed in 1935, and only $2,250,000 of the bonds have been issued to date.

The tracks are to be carried past the memorial in a tunnel. The Missouri Pacific and Terminal Railroads will be called upon to share the cost of the relocation. In 1949 the railroads expressed willingness to negotiate on sharing the expense.

Estimate of Cost.

It has been estimated that entire cost of relocating the tracks will be between $6,000,000 and $7,000,000. When Congress in 1949 authorized the Federal Government to participate in the memorial development to the extent of $5,000,000 it set $1,875,000 as the federal contribution for the track project.

The city and the railroads will have to divide the remainder of the cost.

The $2,640,000 allocation for the memorial was included in an omnibus supplemental bill to finance various governmental activities in the current fiscal year, but it carries a provision which will make the memorial money available until spent.

H-BOMB DROP POSTPONED INDEFINITELY BECAUSE OF ADVERSE WIND PATTERNS

ABOARD U.S.S. McKINLEY at Eniwetok, Sunday, May 13 (UP).

AMERICA'S on-again, off-again airburst of a hydrogen bomb scheduled for tomorrow was postponed indefinitely today.

For the sixth time since last Tuesday adverse wind patterns forced Operation Redwing officials to put off America's first air-drop of an H-bomb. The winds raised the danger of dusting inhabited areas with radioactive fallout.

The official word after this morning's weather briefing was: "The wind pattern forecast for Monday morning, May 14 (Sunday St. Louis time), is not acceptable. The outlook for Tuesday morning, May 15, is not encouraging."

Task force officials said the operation would continue to practice in D-day minus two status until the wind pattern improves enough to warrant kicking off D minus one operations. Hence, today's gloomy forecast constituted an indefinite postponement.

FARMER REFUSING TO SIGN REPORT ON ACREAGE IS JAILED

PENSACOLA, Fla., May 12 (AP)—Farmer Walter T. Carroll went to jail for contempt rather than sign a crop acreage report for the Department of Agriculture.

Carroll, 44 years old, told federal officers he didn't think it was any of the Government's business how much he planted. He ignored a summons to show cause why he should not be held in contempt, and was arrested with his brother, Roy, on their farm Thursday after a scuffle with United States deputy marshals.

When Carroll refused before Federal Judge Dozier A. Devane to sign the acreage report, Devane ordered him jailed indefinitely for contempt. The judge also placed him under $2500 bond on a cahrge of resisting arrest, and released Roy Carroll in $2500 on a charge of inerfering with an officer.

The acreage allotment program was approved by farmers in a vote, and thus is compulsory.

Postal Checks Lost In Mail.

STATE MUST GIVE GREENSPAN LOOK AT ITS EVIDENCE

Court Orders Dowd to Show Pay-Off Case Material to Policeman's Attorneys.

Authority to inspect certain material held as evidence by the state was granted to Detective Capt. William Greenspan, charged with receiving bribes from brothel operators, in rulings yesterday by Circuit Judge J. Casey Walsh.

All pending defense motions have been disposed of, but it appeared unlikely the trial will be held tomorrow as scheduled since Greenspan's attorney, Morris A. Shenker, is engaged in a trial in federal court.

The court ruled yesterday that Circuit Attorney Edward L. Dowd must produce for defense inspection any documents, books and papers obtained by the state in the course of an investigation which resulted in indictment of Greenspan or which are to be offered in evidence at his trial.

Greenspan Statements.

Judge Walsh also said the defense had the right to see any signed statements given by Greenspan to the circuit attorney, police officers or others in the investigation into alleged pay-offs.

Recordings of any personal or telephone interviews by the circuit attorney or his representatives in the course of the investigation should be made available to the defense, regardless of whether the person interviewed consented to such recording, Judge Walsh ruled.

He rejected a defense motion asking for a bill of particulars on thei ndictments. Last month Judge Walsh overruled motions seeking dismissal of the charges.

Before the court made its ruling yesterday, Dowd objected to motions seeking to inspect material in his possession, saying the defense does not have an "absolute right" to such evidence.

Dowd's Contention.

He said the defense did not show the existence of any specific documents or records and failed to prove that the articles desired were material to the case or admissible as evidence.

"The law holds that a motion does not prove itself," he declared.

Dowd said there were no recordings of any telephone conversations related to the investigation.

Greenspan was one of three

2-Day Checkup Shows No Signs of Heart Muscle Weakness — Scar Well Healed.

(Text of Medical Report on Page 6A)

By JAMES DEAKIN
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 12—President Eisenhower is "physically active and mentally alert" and the general condition of his health is "good," his physicians said today.

Summarizing results of a two-day physical examination of the chief executive at Walter Reed Hospital here, the doctors gave Mr. Eisenhower a highly favorable report.

The findings were certain to have significance for this fall's presidential campaign, in which Democrats are expected to make Mr. Eisenhower's health a central issue, in view of the heart attack he suffered last Sept. 24.

Discussing the head-to-toe physical check-up, which included tests of the heart condition, the doctors said Mr. Eisenhower's blood pressure is normal, and there are no signs of weakness of the heart muscle or of "coronary insufficiency" (angina).

Scar Well Healed.

The scar left on his heart muscle by the attack of coronary thrombosis is now "well-healed" and covers an area of about 2.5 centimeters, approximately the width of a thumb nail, they reported.

"The President has shown good tolerance to increasing physical activity over the past six months" since his heart attack, the report stated. It added that Mr. Eisenhower's heart sounds and "circulatory tone" were "good."

The report, signed by Maj. Gen. Howard M. Snyder, the President's personal physician, and Maj. Gen. Leonard D. Heaton, commanding general of the hospital, summed up Mr. Eisenhower's health in these words:

"His general condition continues good. He is physically active and mentally alert. His appearance, appetite and digestion are excellent."

Leaves for Golf Game.

White House press secretary James C. Hagerty described the report as "excellent." Mr. Eisenhower left the hospital shortly before noon today and went to nearby Burning Tree Country Club for a round of golf. He plans to spend Sunday

BOY, 12, TO ENTER COLLEGE IN FALL TO STUDY ATOMS

SAN FRANCISCO, May 12 (UP) — Twelve-year-old Fred Saifer Jr. announced yesterday he would enter the University of California this fall to study nuclear physics, calculus and analytical geometry.

He is a senior at Drew school in San Francisco, and in his spare time reads French, German and Latin and a "smattering" of Hebrew, Arabic and Spanish.

The boy who learned to read when he was 3 years old, admits he is "lazy" in such matters as history and civics, but vows to help in the "elimination of war and nuclear explosions."

Adm. Herbert Schonland, USN (ret.) dean of Drew, agreed that young Saifer would undoubtedly do just that.

Schonland said the boy was already ahead of his future college classmates, having completed his second year of a college level course in calculus.

Fred, who stands 4 feet 8 inches and weighs 75 younds, receives his diploma from Drew next month. His father, a retired university professor, says his brilliant son "is no more industrious than others his age."

WILSON INVITED TO EXPLAIN DELAY IN ANNOUNCING SECURITY CODE

Hennings Subcommittee Wants to Know About Six-Month Wait on Army's Change of Rules.

By a Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 12—Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson was invited today to appear before the Senate Constitutional Rights subcommittee to explain a six-month delay in making public a sweeping revision of the Army's security procedures.

Announcing the invitation, Senator Thomas C. Hennings Jr. (Dem.), Missouri, subcommittee chairman, said the delay had cast a cloud on testimony presented by Defense spokesman in previous hearings on Defense Department security rules.

He asked Wilson to testify on "any steps" taken by the department to extend to all branches of the armed services the "common-sense principles" set forth in the Army directive.

Hennings said the subcommittee believes the new procedures set forth by Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker should be applied to the Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps as well.

Dates Given in Letter.

The Brucker directorive, he said in a letter to Wilson, was issued last Oct. 17 but not communicated to the subcommittee until April 6. In November, the subcommittee heard Defense Department witnesses on security matters.

Hennings told Wilson "the failure of any witness or official to disclose the existence of the (Brucker) directive served to becloud, if not partially nullify, the value of opinions and evidence presented by your department . . ."

Hennings told Wilson the new directive, in the judgment of the subcommittee, "applied common-sense principles in accord with fundamental considerations of justice to the individual."

The directive, he said, "recognized in substance that the facts in each case should be evaluated on their own merits to determine whether, for example, an association with a questioned person or an affiliation with a questioned organization had actually influenced the individual in any degree inimical to his duties and the public security."

Subcommittee Reluctant.

Pointing out that none of the Defense Department witnesses last November had referred to the Brucker directive, Hennings said the subcommittee was reluctant to write its report on the hearings until Wilson had an opportunity to discuss the new security rules.

He said the directive "could have automatically cleared up" one security case heard by the subcommittee, that of Pvt. Harley Ross. The directive was "eminently pertinent" to another case, that of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Foster, Hennings added.

"This directive, in addition to being withheld unaccountably for six months, in our judgment had another major defect," he said.

"It applied only to the military personnel of the Army . . . and did not extend to the civilian personnel in that department, to the personnel of contractors with whom the Defense Department deals, nor did it extend or apply to the Air Force or the Navy."

DELINQUENCY RISE LINKED TO DECLINE OF GRANDMOTHERS

BABBACOMBE, England, May 12 (AP)—The way to make a nice, sweet boy out of the family's little terror is to supply him with a good grandmother, the British Marriage Guidance Council was told yesterday by Mrs. Douglas Jay, mother of four and wife of a Laborite member of Parliament.

"I feel you cannot bring up a family without a grandmother or a great-aunt," she said in an address.

She cited statistics indicating juvenile delinquency is higher in England's slick new housing estates than in some squalid quarters and commented:

"I think it is due to the fact that grandmother was left behind when the family moved."

But Mrs. Wilma Strange, herself a grandmother, said:

"I think grandmothers should be in the offing, but not always in the daughter's home."

12 KILLED IN EXPLOSION IN SOUTH AFRICA GOLD MINE

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa, May 12 (UP)—Twelve miners were killed and many were injured in a methane gas explosion in a gold mine today.

One European and 11 African miners were among the dead. Hospital authorities said many of the injured were in serious condition and may not live.

The explosion occurred at the Anglo-American Co.'s Welkom gold mine.

FRENCH KILL 175 ALGERIANS IN FIGHTS AND AMBUSHES; TERRORISTS RAID BIG CITY

REBEL LEAFLETS URGE ALL GREEKS IN CYPRUS TO TRY TO KILL HARDING

Assassination of British Governor Is Duty, Says EOKA — U.S. Fleet Calls Off Crete Visit.

NICOSIA, Cyprus, May 12 (AP)—The EOKA underground today called on every Greek in Cyprus to try to assassinate the British military governor, Sir John Harding.

The call was made in leaflets scattered about Nicosia and bearing the typed signature of the EOKA leader Dighenis. He is the man who signed the leaflets yesterday announcing the hanging of two British soldiers in reprisal for the execution of two EOKA members on Thursday.

The battle of leaflets filled an otherwise ominous calm in this troubled city.

Fleet Visit to Crete Off.

In Athens, a United States spokesman announced the American Sixth Fleet had canceled a visit to Crete next week "at the suggestion of the Greek government." No reason was given, but it was clear that the Greeks wished to avoid any possible anti-American demonstrations arising from the Cyprus question.

(The United States was in no way involved in the execution of the two young Cypriots Thursday; in fact Secretary of State John Foster Dulles was reported to have counseled the British against carrying out the executions. However, Greek resentment was partly directed at the United States, as shown by the demonstration at the United States Information Agency offices in Athens Friday.

(The United Press reported the Cretan newspaper Kirix, published at Canea, warned that American sailors might not get a friendly reception if they visited the Greek island at this time. The Sixth Fleet was reported planning to visit other Greek ports on its current cruise, however.)

Leaflets Given Out in Greece.

The leaflet campaign also extended to Greece. Anti-British leaflets were distributed to foreigners passing through Hellinkon, Athens international airport. A white-coated bar attendant passed out the leaflets, signed by the Federation of the Students' Boards of Greece. They charged British methods in Cyprus "are the same as those used by the gestapo in Hitler's time."

"An appeal pasted on walls in Nicosia called Gov. Harding "Gauleiter Sir John" and said "it is the duty of all Greeks" to kill him.

Dighenis, the unidentified leader of the EOKA organization which seeks union of this crown colony with Greece, is believed to be Col. George Grivas, former Greek army officer, who has a $28,000 price on his head.

"Instead of a material reward which can emanate only from scum and can be accepted only by scum," the leaflet said, "we shall make the executioner of the sadistic tormentor of the Cypriot people a national hero whose name will be written in gold letters in the roll of honor of the heroes of the Cypriot struggle."

Police Pass Out Leaflets.

There already has been one attempt on Harding's life. Last March 23 an unexploded time bomb was found in the bed in which he had slept all night.

Cypriot police passed out leaflets, too. They asked the Greek population, which make

HATKIN IS PUT BACK ON DUTY WITH AIR FORCE

Nonsensitive Post Given to Man Suspended as Suspected Security Risk.

The New York Times News Service.
(Copyright, 1956, by the New York Times Co.)

WASHINGTON, May 12 — Sidney Hatkin was restored to duty on the Air Force today after being suspended 14 months without pay as a suspected security risk.

He will not return, however, to the highly classified job he formerly held as an economist in the directorate of statistical services. Donald A. Quarles, Secretary of the Air Force, said that after a personal review of the case he had "found it necessary to conclude that it would not be clearly consistent with the interests of national security to retain Mr. Hatkin in (that) sensitive position."

Hatkin and his attorney, Joseph H. Freehill, welcomed the decision. They said they believed that in time Hatkin's status would be adjusted to make him eligible for classified work.

One Week to Settle.

Thus it took just one week to settle Hatkin's year-old case after it had been made public. Former Senator Harry P. Cain, a member of the Subversive Activities Control Board, brought the case to public attention a week ago tonight in a speech in New York. He did not mention Hatkin's name, but a Washington newspaper learned it and published it within hours.

What distinguished Hatkin's case from others that have been described in the Administration's security program is that he was approached during his suspension by a Soviet embassy employe.

The man, who did not identify himself, wanted Hatkin to write him a report on the American aircraft industry. Hatkin went to the Federal Bureau of Investigation and picked out a picture of the mysterious visitor. It turned out to be one of Vladimir P. Mikheev, a translator and clerk at the Soviet embassy.

Informed Air Force.

Hatkin told the Air Force about the episode. Nevertheless, last April 23 the service wrote him that it had tentatively decided to fire him as a security risk. It pointed in the letter to three matters:

1. The fact that Hatkin had belonged to the Washington Bookshop, an organization later listed as subversive. Hatkin said he had joined like other unsuspecting persons, to get discounts. He paid $1 once and never renewed his membership.

2. The fact that Hatkin had

CONSTANTINE IS STORMED IN DARING ATTACK, NATIVES ROUTED

Troops Blast Way Out of Two Traps With Heavy Losses for Nationalists—Clashes in Rabat, Tunisia.

ALGIERS, May 12 (AP)—The French army reported more than 175 Algerian rebels killed in ambushes and running battles across eastern Algeria today.

The nationalists countered with a daring raid into the heart of the city of Constantine as they pressed their 18-month-old fight for independence.

Screaming sirens alerted the 118,000 people of Constantine, the big metropolis of the interior, as the nationalists stormed in, throwing grenades and shooting down Arabs friendly to the French.

Cafe Bombed at Noon.

Thirteen pro-French Moslems were cut down by the deadly rebel hail and nine other persons wounded when a bomb was thrown into a crowded Jewish cafe at noon. Two policemen and a French paratrooper fell as French forces counter-attacked and drove the raiders out of the city.

About 50 miles to the northwest, French paratroopers combing the countryside blasted out of a rebel ambush arranged with the help of the local Moslem population. The French said 80 rebels were killed and admitted to one paratrooper dead and another wounded.

A French army detachment in the same region fought its way out of another rebel ambush, killing 30 of the attackers. French losses were said to be one dead and two wounded.

In the Kabylie mountains, French troops carried out a big sweep and listed 20 rebels killed. Thirty suspects were arrested.

French officials hailed the gallant defense of the little village of Ahfir, west of Constantine, which came under heavy rebel attack at 2 a.m. today. The villagers' own defense system went into action and the rebels were said to have been repulsed with heavy losses.

Guerrilla Actions.

French military dispatchers said 12 rebels were killed in operations around Lafayette and reports of scattered small guerrilla actions brought the total of rebel dead reported to more than 175.

The nationalists here have no radio broadcasts or other information media which would make it possible to record their claims of losses inflicted on the French. Contact with rebel forces is illegal under French law.

In western Algeria, French forces reported 15 rebels killed. The rebels burned three French settler farms in the Temouchent sector not far from the Moroccan border. Otherwise western Algeria was relatively quiet after the swath cut through the French settlements last week by the fire terrorists.

In Rabat, capital of Morocco, a feeling of uneasiness prevailed after the sudden disappearance of a French sergeant and his squad of six Moroccans from a guard post near the military school. There were reports of heavy rebel activity on the outskirts of the city.

In Tunisia, French fighter planes strafed a 50-camel caravan bearing rebel supplies and a spokesman said it was nearly wiped out. In other fighting, as the Moslem fast month of Ramadan came to an end, at least 17 Tunisian nationalists were reported killed and the French reported losses of five killed and 12 wounded.

One Adult in 12 Is a 'Functional Illiterate,' Reading Expert Says

CHICAGO, May 12 (INS)—Reading, and the lack of it, was talked about today at the first annual meeting of the International Reading Association in Chicago.

Reading experts heard John J. De Boer, University of Illinois reading specialist, declare that about one adult in 12 is a "functional illiterate." That means, De Boer explained, he has less than a fifth-grade education and is unable to read with reasonable comprehension.

But, the specialist added, illiteracy in the sense of not being able to read or write one's name has declined from 20 per cent in 1870 to 2.5 per cent today.

De Boer also said that one-half of all adults read no books, another 25 per cent read one to nine books a year, 18 per cent read more than 10 and only 7 per cent read 50 or more a year.

"We have been congratulating ourselves," he continued, "upon the fact that the reading abilities of children are on the whole better today than they were in the past.

"We are justified in stressing this fact when we meet public criticisms of current methods of teaching reading.

"But among ourselves we must face the fact that modern life demands significantly better results than those that may have been considered adequate in past years."

He added that only through wide reading and leisurely reflection "can we assess current events in the perspective of history."

British Tories Fret Over Threat Of Guitarist Plunking for Votes

LONDON, May 12 (INS)—Britain's Labor party has unleashed a powerful but terrifying campaign weapon against the Conservative government—the singing politician with a guitar.

This tuneful tactic was sprung without warning for the first time in the land of Disraeli, Gladstone and Churchill by the Right Honorable Kenneth Younger during the nation-wide municipal elections. The Manchester Guardian commented: "A new era in British politics has arrived."

Younger is no obscure "backbencher" but a former minister of state, son of the second Viscount Younger of Leckie, and, it now develops, a tenor of no mean ability and a gifted guitar-plunker.

After the voters had listened to Conservative Minister of Supply Duncan Sandys discuss housing subsidies and differential rents they twirled their radio dials for the Laborite reply and heard the strains of the old tune "What Can the Matter Be?"

The words were Younger's own:

Oh, dear, what is the matter?
Our purses grow thinner, inflation grow fatter
The whole Tory team's gone as mad as a hatter
It's time that you told them to go.

Laborite spokesmen came to the microphone after Younger's opening verse to criticize Conservative policies in the traditional manner.

There is said to be no truth to reports that Sir Anthony Eden is practicing the accordion.

GIRL, 4, WHO FELL INTO POOL, SAVED BY CRYING BOY, 3

DALLAS, Tex., May 12 (AP)—A crying 3-year-old boy saved the life of a 4-year-old playmate yesterday by gripping her arm after she fell into a swimming pool.

The boy's cries attracted Mrs. Josie Washington, a house maid, who ran to the pool and found Bob Bellamy holding the arm of Lucy McCall.

The girl was pulled from the pool and revived by firemen.

Police said the children had wandered to a pool in the yard of a nearby home.

Bobby, unable to pull the girl from the pool, grabbed her arm and cried.

Mrs. Washington said that when she arrived at the pool the girl's head was barely under the water.

Floor Fight Ahead in Senate Over House-Passed Bill for Social Security Liberalization

Measure Severely Amended in Committee but George and Johnson Will Back It —Issues Are Disability Benefits and Lower Age for Women.

By EDWARD F. WOODS
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 12—A floor fight is shaping up in the Senate over proposals of the Democratic leadership for sweeping liberalization of benefits under the Social Security Law.

The measure, with Representative Frank Karsten of Missouri and Representative Jere Cooper of Tennessee, both Democrats, in the forefront of the drive, sailed through the House by a vote of 372 to 31.

Its major provisions were:

1. Insured workers who have become totally and permanently disabled would receive Social Security benefits at the age of 50. The present age requirement is 65.

2. Working women, wives and widows would become eligible for Social Security benefits at the age of 62, instead of the present 65.

3. Disabled children would continue to receive benefits after they reach the age of 18. Under present law the benefits are terminated when they become 18.

4. Coverage would be extended to about 200,000 persons, including lawyers, dentists, osteopaths, chiropractors and veterinarians, all of whom are presently excluded as self-employed.

Battered in Committee.

This week, the Senate Finance Committee gave the House bill a thumping. Under Administration pressure, Republican members of the committee, obviously joined by at least one Democrat, voted to amend the bill to kill off the provision to lower the retirement age for disabled workers and revised the lowering of the age limit for women so that it would apply only to widows.

Next Wednesday, the Senate Finance Committee probably will complete its work of amending the House bill and report it out for Senate consideration. The fight then will be on.

Senator Walter F. George, Georgia Democrat, and dean of the Senate, will be on the side of the bill as passed by the House. He predicts that there will be a better chance of keeping the House bill intact on the Senate floor than was possible in the Finance Committee, of which he is a member.

Johnson Calls it a 'Must.'

Senator Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas, majority leader of the Senate, has labeled the House bill a "must" as far as the Senate is concerned. Hence, the measure has powerful support.

The Finance Committee hearings have been in executive session, with the press and public barred. It is known, however, that the arguments against the House bill by Administration spokesman have been on the ground that the Democratic plan was fiscally unsound and would over the long haul tend to destroy the social security system because of higher contributions required both of employes and employers and a drain on the social security trust fund which it could not sustain.

It is known that Democrats in the committee argued that cost aspects of the liberalization plan had been carefully considered and that the tax schedule suggested would make the system actuarially sound, with the system being self-supporting as nearly as could be foreseen. The Democrats conceded that under both the present Social Security Law and the one they advocated that benefit payments would by 1990 start exceeding Social Security tax collections, but they also pointed out that this difference could be made up by the interest the Government pays the Social Security trust fund for the use of the money therein.

Adds Million to Rolls.

The overall effect of the major points in the Democratic proposal would be to add in the first year of operation more than 1,000,000 women and disabled workers to the rolls for old age and survivors insurance at a cost of about $600,000,000 annually in benefits. It has been contended that eventually the cost of all the extended benefits would go as high as two billion dollars a year.

Under the House-passed bill the costs of the liberalized benefits would be financed by increasing Social Security taxes by $1,700,000,000 annually, or approximately 25 per cent.

In the Senate Finance committee, it is known, the question of the taxes that employers and employes will have to pay to finance the broadened coverage has been raised.

As matters stand now, a worker and his employer have to pay 2 per cent on the first $4,200 of the worker's annual income and self employed workers pay 3 per cent. Under the bill the finance committee is wrestling with, these rates would be increased to two and one-half per cent for the employer and employe and to three and three-quarters per cent for the self-employed.

Application of these increases would be on top of of those already set out under the current social security law for 1960, 1965, 1970 and 1975. Hence, opponents of the bill have argued in committee, by 1975 the employer and employe each would be paying four and one-half per cent tax and the self-employed individual would be paying six and three-quarters per cent. Under the existing law, in 1975 emlpoyers and employes would pay 4 per cent each and the self-employed 6 per cent.

In the Finance Committee sessions much has been made of the impact of these increased rates on the low-income groups.

It has been cited, that a tenant farmer with an income in 1975 of $4200—with a wife and two children and the sandard 10 per cent deduction for federal income tax purposes—would have under present social security tax rates an income tax bill of $276.

However, under the proposed social security bill, he would have added to this a social security tax bill for $283.50, computed on his income before exemptions and deductions, making his total tax bill $559.50.

Going further into objections to the bill, its opponents have brought up the case of a family of four with an income of only $2000 a year, which is recognized as right on the poverty line. Such a family is exempt from federal income tax but would have to pay $135 a year social security tax.

Benefits For Women.

Going into the lower retirement age for women workers and widows, the Democrats claim that about 780,000 new beneficiaries would receive payments of $389,000,000 in the first year of the program and 1,300,000 women would receive more than one billion dollars in 1970.

The supporters of this provision argue that a married couple should not have to get along on the same amount as is required for a single person. Since wives are generally a few years younger than their husbands, many retired couples must live on the husband's benefits until the wife reaches 65.

The opponents of the House bill argue that to extend benefits at a lower age to non-working wives and working women runs contrary to increasing life expectancy in this country. They point out that, whereas in 1900 there were about 3,000,000 persons aged 65 or older, about 4.1 per cent of the total population, today about 14,000,000, about 8.5 per cent of the total, are above 65 years. And by 1975, some experts say, there will be about 21,000,000 citizens in this age bracket, about 10 per cent of the expected population.

Disibility Benefits at 50.

As for the disability payments to persons at the age of 50, the opponents of that provision are taking the position that while the proposal has a strong human appeal there are factors having nothing to do with human appeal which must be taken into account. The real question is how disability aids can best be handled.

At present the opponents of this provision point out that the efforts of relief agencies to cull the fake cases from those which are genuine and to adjust benefits individually according to need are inadequate.

To burden the old-age pension system according to the opponents of this bill, with disability cases is to transform it into a duplicate relief agency and to give up the flexibility and adaptability to local conditions in the presence of federal-state systems.

There has been presented to the Senate Finance committee testimony on behalf of the Eisenhower Administation that about 250,000 disabled persons would receive upwards of $200,000,000 in the first year of this program, and that in 25 years that number of persons would go over 1,000,000 and the benefits above $860,000,000.

Held in Cyprus Disorders

BRITISH DOUBT CYPRIOTS KILLED TWO SOLDIERS

Authorities Say Terrorists Would Have Offered Proof of Reprisals.

By RICHARD DUDMAN
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NICOSIA, Cyprus, May 12—Success of Britain's new get-tougher policy toward Greek Cypriot opposition appeared to swing in the balance today after the hanging of two Cypriots and the claim that two British soldiers had been hanged in reprisal.

British authorities scoffed at the retaliation claim, made yesterday in leaflets bearing the name EOKA, the Greek terrorist organization. They contended the terrorists would have put forth some proof if they really had executed the two soldiers.

The leaflets, passed out surreptitiously on the main streets of Nicosia, were addressed "to British soldiers" and promised to "answer hanging with hanging and torture with torture."

"Is it worthwhile to pay with your lives for the stupid obstinacy of your leaders?" the leaflets asked.

Leaflet Barrage.

Inquiry among British troops indicated they were not in the least intimidated by the leaflet barrage. A corporal in the constabulary force called the story of the reprisal hangings "a lot of tripe." A sergeant argued that the two missing soldiers would have been used as hostages before yesterday if they really were prisoners of the terrorists.

Quite another matter, however, was the effect of the leaflet campaign on the EOKA movement. Even the British spokesmen acknowledge that most Greek Cypriots must believe the story of the retaliatory executions, regardless of the fact that no photograph or identification tag has been submitted as proof.

EOKA morale suffered a heavy blow two months ago when the British exiled Archbishop Makarios, who was religious and cultural leader of the Greek Cypriots and head of the movement for Enosis (Union with Greece).

A second blow came Thursday, when the British hanged Michael Karaolis, convicted of murdering a Greek Cypriot policeman in Nicosia last August, and Andreas Demetriou, who shot and wounded an English business man in Famagust last November.

Busses Being Stopped.

The claim that EOKA has put to death two British soldiers thus seems more a bid to maintain popular support than an effort to terrorize the British. As a morale builder it may have succeeded. Soldiers with rifles or submachine guns held ready patrol the streets on foot and in jeep-like Land Rovers. Trucks and busses are stopped at unexpected roadblocks for surprise searches for bombs and firearms.

Maroon-bereted paratroopers today were stopping busses on a main road and escorting them into the yard of the prison where Thursday's hangings took place for a surprise shakedown.

The paratroopers, armed with submachine guns and pistols, ordered the passengers and drivers out and directed them to hold their hands above their heads. Then each was searched carefully and herded aside until the examination was completed. The paratroopers also checked the inside of each bus and dumped out baskets of potatoes and squash tied to the back to see that no contraband was hidden under the produce.

A noncommissioned officer said his unit had found nothing today, but earlier in the week he detained a man with £6000 in a briefcase and what seemed to be an inadequate explanation. The man was turned over to the police for investigation to make sure that the money was not a transfer of EOKA funds.

A woman soldier, assigned to search women passengers in the busses, said she recently had discovered dynamite caps hidden under a woman's clothing. Another time, she said, she found a slingshot in possession of a woman carrying an eight-month-old baby. The woman said the slingshot was a plaything for the baby, but it was confiscated because terrorists commonly use slingshots to hurl rocks or grenades.

Slogans on Walls.

Inside the old city surrounded by moat and circular wall with 11 evenly spaced bastions, newly-painted blue slogans could be seen on the stone and adobe walls that lined the twisting streets.

They said "Enosis" (Union With Greece), "Zito to Akel" (Long Live the Greek Communists) and "Vokan" (A slogan of the Turkish Cypriots who want union with Turkey if the British leave).

Revelation of Notes on Frogman Called a 'Bitter Shock' to Eden

Government Admits It Told Russia Details of Case on Very Day It Refused to Tell Parliament.

LONDON, May 12 (UP)—The embarrassed government of Prime Minister Eden admitted today that it told Russia details of the hush-hush case of the missing Navy frogman on the very day it refused to discuss the matter in Parliament.

Russia's sudden revelation last night of a secret exchange of notes over the disappearance of Commander Lionel Crabb near the Soviet cruiser Ordzhonikidze in Portsmouth harbor April 19 was a "bitter shock" to Eden, sources said. The Socialist opposition was sure to try to capitalize on it.

The Foreign Office obviously was taken by surprise by the Moscow radio report of a Soviet note of May 4 and a British reply of May 9 regretting the incident. It was 14 hours before the Foreign Office, with Eden's permission, admitted that the Moscow radio was accurate.

On May 9, the same day that Britain told Russia about the "presumed" death, Eden told Commons he could not discuss the case "in the public interest."

Details Withheld.

When Labor Leader Hugh Gaitskell charged that the 46-year-old Crabb was engaged in espionage, Eden refused to confirm or deny the charge. He did not tell Parliament that Russia had officially protested or that Britain had told the Kremlin that Crabb apparently was swimming near the cruiser.

In Moscow, a London dispatch in the government newspaper Izvestia said the Laborite leaders are using the Crabb case to distract the public from their own anti-Russian actions during the visit of Soviet Premier Nikolai Bulganin and Communist party chief Nikita Khrushchev. They had traveled to Britain aboard the Ordzhonikidze.

Gaitskell immediately replied that the Communists are angry "because we dared to raise the question of Social Democrats imprisoned in Communist countries."

"They now try to make out that we are sorry we did so and want to obscure this matter by having a debate on the frogman episode.

"How little they understand us."

Domestic Affair.

He made it plain he considered the frogman issue now to be a domestic affair, and said it is the duty of the opposition to probe into "such an extraordinary story of muddle and incompetence of a government department."

In a parting shot at the Russians, Gaitskell said "it is no doubt difficult for the Communists to understand this, since they do not allow opposition of any kind in the countries they control."

Former Socialist Minister of Defense Emanuel Shinwell today demanded a shakeup of the service ministries as a result of the frogman case. His attack was a prelude to debate on the case scheduled for Monday in commons when Eden will speak for the government. Laborites have demanded a censure vote.

Referring to the fact that Eden said the government had no knowledge of Crabb's activities, Shinwell said:

"When governments resort to espionage, we can understand it. But when private individuals take a hand in the game, even when inspired by some clever people in the Admiralty, it is time they were dealt with."

Eden has promised "disciplinary action" against those involved.

RUSSIA BOASTS IT CAN ATTACK ANY BASE IN WORLD

U.S. Has No Monopoly on Massed Blow, Reds Assert in Reply to Gruenther.

LONDON, May 12 (UP)—The Moscow radio, expanding recent warnings by Communist Boss Nikita Khrushchev, said today Russia has the power to strike a "massed blow" at any major military base in the world.

The broadcast, quoting an attack by the Communist organ Pravda on United States Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther, retiring NATO commander, said it was about time America's leaders realized the United States had no corner on military striking power.

"There is no considerable military base in the world which would be out of reach of present-day military equipment," the broadcast said.

"It is high time for certain generals to realize that the massed blow of which they so much love to speak . . . is in no way a monopoly of the armed forces of the U.S.A."

Khrushchev said last month Russia hoped "soon" to have guided missiles capable of carrying hydrogen bombs anywhere in the world. Today's broadcast implied that Russia already could match the tactical atomic weapons of the West.

Gruenther warned earlier this week that these short-range nuclear weapons would be hurled against any Soviet force that might attack any member nation of the Atlantic pact.

The Red radio described the supreme allied commander as a "bellicose general . . . looking for cheap publicity," and accused him of telling "deliberate lies . . . to hold up the collapsed scarecrow of an imaginary Soviet danger."

"The warlike general threatens to launch against the U.S.S.R. atom bombs with the aid of the most diverse technical means of delivery — aircraft, guided missiles, rockets and artillery," it said.

"It is as if it had never occurred to him that all these means of delivering atomic weapons are not held only by American generals."

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., May 12 (AP)—Mrs. Cleo Maletis, a 31-year old former New York dress designed from Oregon, wha was so overwhelmed she couldn't talk, was crowned Mrs. America tonight.

Mrs. Maletis is a member of the Greek Orthodox church and her husband, Chris Maletis, is a vice president of a beverage company in Portland. She is the mother of three children.

When she regained her composure, she said "I feel very humble. I owe this honor to my family, to my mother, my father and my God."

She is 5 foot 5, weighs 122 pounds, has brown eyes, brown hair and a sparkling personality.

Mrs. Louisiana, Anne Mitchell of Monroe, was second, and Mrs. Ohio, Gloria Buth of Columbus, was third.

HOUSE UNIT APPROVES BILL FOR MORE SCIENCE EXPERTS

WASHINGTON, May 12 (UP)—The House Civil Service committee yesterday approved legislation to boost by 370 the number of scientific and research experts in the Defense Department and other government agencies.

The measure would create 215 new scientific and professional jobs in the Defense Department and 50 in the National Security Agency. The Pentagon now has 60 such job classifications.

A committee spokesman said some of the added personnel would work on guided missile research.

The bill would also allot 35 new scientific and research job classifications to the Commerce Department, 60 to the national advisory committee on aeronautics and 10 to the Interior Department's bureau of mines.

FOLLOWERS OF JUAN PERON REMOVED FROM PRISON SHIP

BUENOS AIRES, May 12 (AP)—Argentina's post-Peron Government has emptied its floating prisons of followers of the fallen dictator but they still are jailed.

President Pedro Aramburu's provisional government disclosed the transfer of the prisoners from the prison ship Paris to Magdalena prison.

EISENHOWER BACKS STAND ON NATURALIZED CITIZENS

NEW YORK, May 12 (AP)—President Eisenhower says he agrees with former President Theodore Roosevelt that naturalized citizens, while they owe undivided allegiance to the United States, are entitled to freedom from discrimination.

The Theodore Roosevelt Association annually awards a silver plaque to the "naturalized citizen who has made the greatest contribution to the American way of life."

In a letter yesterday to the association, Mr. Eisenhower wrote: "The award brings to mind Theodore Roosevelt's forceful demand for undivided loyalty on the part of naturalized citizens, and his equally forceful insistence that discrimination against any citizen because of his place of birth is 'utterly un-American and profoundly unpatriotic.'"

12 MORE FRENCH JET PLANES FOR ISRAEL

U.S. Sanctions Sale of Additional Mystere Fighters.

WASHINGTON, May 12 (AP)—France is getting ready to sell 12 more Mystere jet fighter planes to Israel.

Like 12 others of the speedy French aircraft shipped to Israel last month, these 12 are being taken out of production ordered by the United States.

United States approval in both cases was needed to divert the planes from their original destination—the defense forces of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, but in both cases the United States refused to share with France the responsibility for sending them to Israel.

At Paris tonight the French Foreign Ministry said the United States cleared the way for France to fulfill Israel's request to buy the aircraft. Officials here said the United States approved diverting the planes from NATO but left it up to France to decide where they would then be sent.

This is in line with what is termed the United States policy of "friendly impartiality" to both sides in the Arab-Israeli dispute. It also is in line with the policy of United States reluctance to ship arms to the area while "facilitating" arms sales to Israel by other Western powers.

CONCEDES RACE TO TYDINGS

BALTIMORE, May 12 (AP)—George P. Mahoney today formally conceded that Millard E. Tydings had defeated him for the Democratic nomination to the Senate in the closest primary election in Maryland's history.

Both candidates received 76 unit votes under a system of indirect election similar to the electoral college in selecting presidents. But Tydings received the larger number of popular votes, which made him the winner.

SYMINGTON GIVEN INDORSEMENT IN COUNTY MEETING OF DEMOCRATS

Delegates Directed to Work at State Level for Support of Senator for Presidential Nomination.

United States Senator Stuart Symington of Missouri, was indorsed yesterday by the St. Louis county Democratic convention as the Democratic nominee for President.

Meeting at the Courthouse in Clayton, the delegates from the various townships selected 160 delegates to the State Democratic convention in Jefferson City May 28 which will elect delegates-at-large to the national convention which meets in Chicago Aug. 13.

Symington's indorsement came on a motion by William J. Becker, a Gravois township delegate, to "favor" the nomination of Symington for President. Its effect is to direct the St. Louis county delegates to work for instruction of the state's delegates-at-large to support Symington at the national convention.

The meeting was orderly and the candidates to the state convention were quickly named from slates prepared in advance. Airport Township was represented by a split delegation that resulted from a factional dispute at the township meeting Friday night. The factions had been led by Robert A. Young, committeeman, and Mrs. Elsie C. McBride, committeewoman. The dispute was not continued at the county convention but the delegation remained divided.

Attend Other Meetings.

The delegates named yesterday will also attend meetings of the First and Second Congressional districts which cover portions of both the city and county. They will be joined in these meetings by delegates elected at ward meetings in the city tomorrow night.

Because the Third Congressional District is wholly within the city, it will be attended only by delegates elected in tomorrow night's ward meetings.

Each of the Congressional district meetings will elect four delegates to the national convention, each delegate holding a half vote. Thus, the St. Louis area will be represented at Chicago by at least six of the 1372 votes to be cast at the convention. It is likely that the state convention later this month will name one or more delegates-at-large from among St. Louis area Democrats.

The ward mass meetings tomorrow night at 8 o'clock will elect delegates that will serve at both the state convention and at the Congressional district conventions. They are open to all Democrats in each of the wards.

Where Meetings Will Be Held.

Locations of the city's ward mass meetings are as follows:

First Ward, 5470 North Kingshighway; Second, 4264 North Twentieth street; Third, 2513 North Florissant avenue; Fourth, 4106 St. Louis avenue; Fifth, 1446 Cass avenue; Sixth, 103½ North Eighth street; Seventh, St. Louis House, 2345 Lafayette avenue; Eighth, St. Joseph's parish hall, Twelfth street and Russell boulevard; Ninth, 3107 California avenue.

5 DIE AS TORNADOES STRIKE S. MICHIGAN

At Least 100 Are Injured—4 of Dead Were From Flint.

FLINT, Mich., May 12 (AP)—Six tornadoes struck in the populous industrial and residential areas of southern Michigan late today. Five persons were killed and more than 100 injured.

Three of the dead were from a single family in Flint, where a twister killed four as it moved along a seven-mile path through the eastern outskirts.

An elderly woman was killed near Ithaca, 30 miles northwest of Flint, when a barn fell on her.

One death was reported in Grand Blanc, a Flint suburb.

Flint counted at least 80 injured. The Detroit suburbs of Lincoln Park and Allen Park had more than 20 hurt. A scattering of injuries also was reported elsewhere in southeastern Michigan.

Flint was hit by three separate tornadoes. Western Michigan, which had been warned of tornadoes earlier in the day, apparently escaped except for heavy winds.

Flint counted around 200 homes down or damaged in the Dort highway-Vassar road region. At least 10 homes were damaged in Allen Park and around a half dozen in Lincoln Park, the Detroit suburbs.

These were the dead: Louis Hubbard, 35 years old, and his wife, Ruth, 32, and their daughter, Sheryl, 8, and Thomas Stevens, 76, all of Flint, and Mrs. Edith Edwards, 60, of Ithaca.

COUNTY G.O.P CHIEF PARKER COMES OUT FOR LON HOCKER

Norman C. Parker, chairman of the St. Louis County Republican Committee, announced yesterday his indorsement of Lon Hocker for the Republican nomination for Governor.

Parker, who was elected as a delegate to the G.O.P. national convention at a stormy First Congressional District meeting Thursday, declared Hocker, a St. Louis attorney, is not a candidate of any party faction or person, and has outstanding qualifications for Governor.

"We Republicans must close ranks and heal the factionalism which has weakened the party in the past," Parker said. "I think the nomination of Mr. Hocker at the head of the Republican state ticket will unite the party and make the election of a statewide ticket possible in November."

ANTIQUE SHOP OPERATOR ROBBED OF $18 AND JEWELS

Mrs. Mollie Bilinsky, operator of an antique shop at 4253 Olive street, was robbed of $18 and jewelry valued at $200 yesterday by an unarmed man.

She told police she was alone in the shop when the man, a Negro, entered and grabbed her arm. After seizing her wrist watch and a diamond ring, he ransacked a desk and found her wallet, then unlocked a rear door and fled through an alley.

Mrs. Bilinsky, who is 72 years old, was treated for shock at Jewish Hospital.

TWO SUSPICIOUS GUN-TOTERS ARE ROOKIE OFFICERS

An observant Wellston citizen was watching two young men play a pinball machine last week in a tavern at Lucas-Hunt road and Easton avenue. As he watched, one of the men, trying to guide a ball by applying a little body English, leaned forward so far his coat spread apart, revealing a holstered pistol.

The citizen double-checked by brushing against the pinball player and hurried next door. He phoned the Wellston police station. Two squad cars responded within minutes to his call and intercepted the young men as they left the tavern.

Hands on pistol butts, the Wellston police approached them. A sergeant demanded, "Who are you?" One of the young men hastily raised his hands.

"We're St. Louis county policemen," he explained. "We were just out trying to get evidence of payoffs on pinball machines."

The sergeant, grinning now, released the two rookie officers after giving them a brief lecture on the art of concealing a concealed weapon.

NO GREENLEASE BILLS FOUND IN LAST 4 MONTHS

Four months have elapsed since any of the missing Greenlease ransom bills have been recovered by authorities, the Post-Dispatch was told yesterday.

The last bill found was a $20 note that turned up Jan. 14 at the Federal Reserve Bank at Kansas City. It was the eighty-fifth bill recovered from among the 16,971 tens and twenties in the $303,720 originally reported missing.

The first of the ransom notes appeared last Aug. 3 at Minot, N.D. They were then discovered throughout the country for two months thereafter. Since Oct. 5 only four bills have been found.

No explanation has been advanced by the Federal Bureau of Investigation as to why the bills have stopped turning up. They were part of the $600,000 ransom paid the kidnap-killers of Bobby Greenlease of Kansas City in 1953.

CLUB PREVUE LICENSE SUIT TAKEN UNDER ADVISEMENT

A petition for an injunction filed by Jack Langer, whose liquor license for Club Prevue, in Madison county, was ordered revoked by the Illinois Liquor Commission March 27, was taken under advisement yesterday by Acting Circuit Judge F. D. Meyer at Edwardsville.

G. E. Cook, attorney for Langer, attacked the constitutionality of the section of the Illinois liquor control law that prescribes the procedure by the state commission can order revocation of a county or municipal license. The injunction suit seeks to prevent the County Liquor Commission from carrying out the state order.

Langer's license was revoked on complaint of Madison county ministers, following a hearing at Springfield at which Langer did not appear. His application for a temporary restraining order was denied last month.

PLANS BILL TO BAR NEW ROOMING HOUSES

Alderman Proposes Also to Require Parents to Pay for Damages by Children.

Alderman Alfred L. Harris said yesterday he would introduce bills to halt the establishment of additional rooming houses anywhere in the city, make parents responsible for property destroyed by their children and require the floodlighting of the exteriors of school buildings.

The halt in the spread of rooming houses would be accomplished by a change in the zoning laws of the kind recently imposed to upgrade some 32 blocks in the West End. It would not interfere with existing rooming houses that are not in violation of present zoning restrictions.

Another proposed bill would subject the parents of child vandals to a maximum fine of $500 or imprisonment in the Workhouse for one year is they failed to pay for the damage done by their children within 30 days. The school lighting proposal is already being carried out by the Board of Education.

PRICE TO MILK PRODUCERS OFF 52 CENTS IN MONTH

The average price paid to producers of 3.5 per cent milk in the St. Louis area in April was $3.83 per hundredweight, Market Administrator Fred L. Shipley announced yesterday. The figure is 52 cents less than the March average, and 26 more than was paid in April 1955.

Class 1 products (fluid milk, cream, skim milk, buttermilk and flavored milk drinks) were $4.08, and Class II (milk used in manufactured dairy products) was $2.92.

Average daily production per farm for 3920 producers was 486 pounds—a new high for this market. This was 55 pounds more than in March, and 65 pounds more than in April 1955.

BABY FOUND DEAD WITH HEAD CAUGHT BETWEEN CRIB SLATS

A seven-month-old baby, Hank Morales, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Morales of 3835 South First street, was found dead yesterday with his head between the slats of his crib, apparently having accidentally strangled.

The baby's body was discovered by his brother Eugene, 6, and a playmate, when they came in from playing outside the house. The parents were away from home at the time.

Police were summoned and the child was pronounced dead on arrival at City Hospital. An inquest will be held.

BOY MARCHERS OF 10 CITY CENTERS IN 'GRAND REVIEW'

Boys of 10 city recreation centers proudly demonstrated their marching ability, after weeks of training, in a "grand review" at Sherman Park yesterday marking the climax of a "March for Fun" program.

Led by a color guard of United States Marines, fundamentals of marching had been taught the instructors by a Marine recruiting officer, and with music furnished by the Tom Powell American Legion post drum and bugle corps, more than 200 youngsters proudly exhibited their skill, both at regular and "trick" marching.

Each team received an award for some feature denoting superiority. For example, the Marquette team was recognized for "achieving the most with the least amount of practice," and Vashon marchers for "clicking their heels together louder than any other drill team in the city."

PLACES IN SKYLADY DERBY

Mrs. Mickey Clark of Florissant won the $100 third prize in the Skylady Derby last week, it was announced yesterday at Little Rock, Ark., the finish line of the race for women flyers.

Miss Ann Waddell, Garden City, Kan., won the race, in which 13 women started. She received $300. Second place, $200, was won by Miss Betty Sue Lyons of Shreveport, La.

UNION SUPPORTS FIREMEN SILENT AT FIRE INQUIRY

President Says East St. Louis Officers Were Denied Advice of Counsel.

A statement defending 12 East St. Louis firemen who refused to testify at a City Council hearing was issued yesterday by Glen Cadell, president of Local 23, Firefighters' Association of East St. Louis.

The firemen—three assistant chiefs and nine captains—declined Friday to answer a list of questions about their handling of a fire at St. Philip's Church on April 18.

Cadel asserted that the men had been denied advice of counsel or guidance from their union officers when they were summoned by the City Council. They refused to testify because they had been informed that their evidence might be used as a basis for charges of neglect of duty, he declared, adding that the men refused to be "sacrificial lambs."

The firemen would be glad to co-operate, in any investigation held in public and designed to "increase the efficiency of the fire department," Cadell continued.

The 65-year-old church at 8200 Church lane was destroyed and a nearby convent was damaged when the fire, which appeared to be a minor blaze at first, flared up again and East St. Louis firemen were able to obtain only a trickle of water from hydrants. Members of the French Village fire department complained that they were ordered away and that the assistance of volunteer firefighters was rejected.

Cadell said the East St. Louis fire department had on hand tank trucks and other equipment sufficient to supply water in an amount equivalent to that available to the volunteer firemen.

He charged that the failure to extinguish the fire was "a failure on the part of the East St. Louis & Interurban Water Co. to provide sufficient pressure." The councilmanic investigation is designed to shift the blame from the water company and "appease" the volunteer fire departments of outlying communities, he contended.

DESIGN DETAILS FOR NEW LIBRARY AT WASHINGTON U.

(Related Story in PICTURES.)

Details of a prize-winning design for Washington University's $3,500,000 new John M. Olin Library, submitted by the St. Louis architectural firm of Murphy & Mackey, were revealed yesterday. Construction is expected to start next spring and the building should be completed by September, 1958.

The winning design was chosen in a national competition in which three St. Louis firms and three from other cities participated. The new structure will be on the campus west of the overcrowded Ridgley Library, for which it will be a replacement.

Plans submitted by Murphy & Mackey call for a five-story, air-conditioned building. Walls of the ground floor will be of glass. Exterior stone will be of Missouri pink granite.

Members of the architectural firm are Joseph D. Murphy, former dean of the university's school of architecture, and Eugene J. Mackey, former professor of architecture there.

John M. Olin, Alton industrialist, has given more than $1,000,000 toward the library's cost.

ANIMAL SHOWS OPEN AT ZOO; TIMES LISTED

The St. Louis zoo's animal shows opened their 1956 season yesterday in Forest Park with bigger elephants, smaller lions and chimpanzees as nimble as ever.

Elephant trainer Floyd Smith's eight youthful performers are a year older and proportionately larger. Their act has grown, too, and is 20 minutes long. Playful cubs have replaced older animals in a new low comedy lion show. Theme of the chimp show this year is "Showboat" and includes "aquatic" numbers on a dry stage.

Sunday and holiday show schedules through Oct. 14, beginning today, are: Elephants at 10:30 a.m., lions at 11 and chimps at 12 noon, with all shows simultaneously at 2 and 4 p.m. On weekdays, the morning schedule is the same; afternoon shows are: Elephants at 2, lions at 2:30 and chimps at 3:30 p.m. There are no shows on Monday.

WORKHOUSE DRUG RING INQUIRY TO OPEN TOMORROW

Grand Jury to Check on Suppliers — Prisoners Expected to Be Called.

A federal grand jury will begin an investigation tomorrow of a ring supplying narcotics and drugs to inmates of the City Workhouse, which has been rocked with three major uprisings of prisoners in recent months.

Assistant United States Attorney Robert C. Tucker, who is in charge of the inquiry, refused to reveal the identity of the first witnesses. Prisoners are expected to be called from the Workhouse for questioning. Seven witnesses have been subpenaed.

Police who made an intensive two-month check of conditions at the Workhouse reported one of the main suppliers was Nathaniel J. Harris, former convict, gambler and politician. Harris, a Negro, was sentenced to 10 years in prison in another narcotics case last April 27.

The jury will begin the narcotics inquiry in the afternoon after hearing witnesses in an investigation of possible anti-trust violations by waste rag dealers in the morning. This investigation, being conducted by Raymond Hunter, an attorney in the Anti-Trust Division of the Justice Department, was expected to be recessed until June.

Twelve witnesses were presented in the anti-trust inquiry last week.

United States Attorney Harry Richards said he planned to call two witnesses before the grand jury soon in a brief further investigation of the missing Greenlease ransom.

He identified the witnesses as Mrs. Louis Shoulders, whose husband received the tip that led to the arrest of the kidnapers of Bobby Greenlease, and former Patrolman Elmer Dolan, who made the arrest with Shoulders, then a police lieutenant. Dolan and Shoulders were convicted of perjury in the subsequent investigation of what happened to the money and Shoulders is still in prison.

The grand jury was impaneled May 2 and directed by United States Judge George H. Moore to inquire into use of campaign funds in this year's primary and election campaigns. So far the jury has not undertaken this investigation. Another grand jury is investigating tax scandals in the Truman administration.

EISENHOWER'S HEALTH IS GOOD, PHYSICIANS FIND

at his Gettysburg (Pa.) farm.

The President, wearing a light tan suit, and hatless despite threatening skies, was smiling and in good spirits as he left the hospital. A crowd of patients and hospital officials had gathered to see him leave. He stopped to say hello to one little girl.

He was carrying a copy of the first volume of Sir Winston Churchill's "History of the English Speaking Peoples," which he had read in the hospital.

Several other physicians, among them Col. Thomas W. Mattingly, chief of the heart section at Walter Reed, took part in the examinations, the first full check-up Mr. Eisenhower had undergone since early in February. Gen. Heaton signed the report on behalf of the other hospital staff physicians.

No Changes in Heart.

The doctors said X-rays of Mr. Eisenhower's chest and heart, when compared with similar films dating back to 1946, showed no changes in the shape or size of the heart. Nor, they said, was there any change in the lungs.

Hagerty called the X-ray findings "very important." As Mr. Eisenhower gradually increased his physical activity, the doctors had watched closely for any enlargement of the heart.

Dr. Paul Dudley White, noted Boston heart specialist who was the President's chief medical consultant in the earlier phases of his recovery, did not take part in the latest tests. He was in Washington this week, however, and examined Mr. Eisenhower briefly.

The report covered every aspect of the President's health, but the most important findings were those concerning his heart and cardiovascular system.

Except for the statement that Mr. Eisenhower has shown "good tolerance" to increased physical activity, there was no direct reference to his ability to stand up under the pressures of the presidency.

Dealt With Earlier.

This issue, however, was dealt with in the February medical report, when Dr. White and the other examining physicians said there was no medical reason why Mr. Eisenhower could not serve another term in the White House.

One Democratic charge already raised, notably by Paul M. Butler, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, has been that Mr. Eisenhower, because of his heart condition, would be only a "part-time" President if re-elected.

Today's report said Mr. Eisenhower's systolic blood pressure was 118 and his diastolic blood pressure 80, or 118 over 80. During his convalescence, the doctors said, his blood pressure has averaged 120 over 80.

"It has seldom reached higher levels and occasionally has been lower," the report continued. "The heart sounds were good. The pulse was 70 per minute."

Weighs 168 Now.

The physicians gave no hint that they were concerned about Mr. Eisenhower's recent loss of weight. When he entered the hospital Thursday night, he weighed 168 pounds, compared with 178 before his heart attack.

His doctors consider his best weight to be about 172 pounds, considering his age, 65, and his height, five feet, 11 inches. A semirigid diet and increased activity, including golf at least once a week and daily swimming, have been given by the physicians as the reasons for loss of weight.

Discussing his heart condition in specific terms, the medical report said:

"The myocardial infarction of September 1955 was well-healed, as evidenced by X-ray and cardiographic findings. The electrocardiogram showed residual changes consistent with healed infarction.

"There were no symptoms or findings of myocardial insufficiency (muscle weakness) or coronary insufficiency (angina). The arteries of the extremities showed no evidence of sclerosis. The circulatory tone was good."

Usual Progress.

Hagerty told reporters the doctors had explained that the electrocardiogram tracings showed "the usual evolutionary progress" in the healing of the scar on the heart muscle.

The report added that Mr. Eisenhower was still receiving anticoagulant medicine to slow down the rate of blood clotting. Hagerty declined to name the specific medicine being taken, because it has a trade name.

The report included these findings on other parts of the body:

Eyesight—There has been a very slight change in the prescription for Mr. Eisenhower's glasses since his last full check-up, but no organic disease of the eyes.

Chest—The lungs were clear of "auscultation," which means that nothing out of the way was heard through stethoscopes.

Nerves, Muscles, Bones and Joints—All normal. With the exception of a non-disabling injury to the left knee, which Mr. Eisenhower suffered playing football at West Point in 1912. In this connection, the report said the President's bursitis in his left shoulder, which has bothered him occasionally, "was found to be inactive" at this time.

Digestive Tract, Genito-Urinary System, Abdomen, Ear, Nose, Throat and Sinuses, Teeth, Thyroid and Gallbladder—All normal. Laboratory findings, the report said, were within normal limits.

EOKA ON CYPRUS CALLS ON GREEKS TO KILL HARDING

up four-fifths of the island's half million, to "disown bloodstained fanatical terrorists."

"These murderers do not help our national cause. On the contrary, they retard it and smear it. The whole world considered our island a peace-ful haven of Greek civilization . . . Now they see our island bloodstained. They consider us barbarians who shoot sick women in hospital beds, kill Christians in churches, throw bombs in little children's bedrooms and kill holy abbots in monasteries.

"You Cypriots who feel for our beloved island—show your courage and free spirit. Protect the good name of our country and the high level of our Greek culture."

The paper war began yesterday with the EOKA leaflets claiming two British soldiers—Lance Cpl. Gordon Hill and Pvt. Ronnie Shilton—had been hanged in reprisal for the British executions. The British have not confirmed the deaths of Hill and Shilton, although acknowledging they are missing.

Soldier Kills Youth.

A british soldier shot and killed a 19-year-old cypriot distributing leaflets last night. The authorities said he failed to halt when ordered to do so and was shot while running away. That was the only major incident in Nicosia in the last three days. In the rest of the island, the guerrilla war against authorities went on unabated, with sporadic grenade throwings and bombings.

Last night six masked men armed with automatic weapons raided a security post outside Nicosia and escaped with a small quantity of ammunition. There were no casualties.

In Nicosia proper all Greek-owned stores, businesses, cafes and places of amusement have been shut tight in protest against the execution of the two Cypriots.

The tight grip of the police and army on the city is chiefly responsible for the present calm and there is no evidence the authorities plan to release the strict control soon. A bar on all unofficial use of motor vehicle and bicycles remained in force in the city leaving the streets virtually free to heavy security patrols.

police officers indicted as the result of an investigation which began June 1 into reports that brothel operators had paid off policemen. The others charged were Lt. F. Lyman Davis and Cpl. George R. Wood.

Judge Walsh has under advisement motions made in behalf of Wood similar to those filed for Greenspan. A hearing is scheduled for Monday on defense motions in the Davis case.

CIVIL ANTI-TRUST SUIT AGAINST FIVE BOOK FIRMS

WASHINGTON, May 12 (AP)—Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr. announced yesterday the filing of a civil anti-trust action against Meredith Publishing Co. of Des Moines, Ia., and four eastern book distributors, charging them with boycotting practices.

The suit was filed in the United States District Court at New York City. It charged Meredith and the four distributors conspired to boycott discount houses and other retailers in the New York metropolitan area who sell Meredith books at prices lower than those prescribed by the publisher.

In addition to Meredith, the suit named as defendants: Periodical Publishers of Greater New York, Dimonstein Book Co. and Bookazine Co., all of New York City, and Baker Taylor Co. of Hillside, N.J.

Injured by 'Flying Canoe.'

IRON RIVER, Mich., May 12 (UP)—Wilfred Verville reported to his insurance company that his wife suffered injuries when a "flying canoe" struck his car. Verville said the canoe fell from the top of a passing car, shattering his windshield. He said broken glass from the windshield injured his wife.

HATKIN IS PUT BACK ON DUTY WITH AIR FORCE

belonged to the United Public Workers, a union expelled from the CIO in 1950 as Communist-dominated. Hatkin said he had left the union in early 1948, had taken no great part in its affairs and knew nothing of any suspect activity.

3. The fact that he had failed to list the Bookshop on a personnel form which asked him to name any "Communist organizations" he had belonged to. Hatkin said that he did not know it as a Communist group but that he had never made any attempt to conceal membership and had admitted it every time the Government asked.

When a reporter asked for comment on today's action, Hatkin said, "You feel as if you're back from limbo, from the living dead. You feel as if you've had your whole life restored to you. . . ."

14 Months' Back Pay.

Under terms of the decision Hatkin will receive full back pay for the 14 months he did not work, less the small amount he managed to earn on the outside during that period. He was earning about $6000 a year at the time of his suspension.

Secretary Quarles did not elaborate on the reasons for his decision. The Air Force announcement said merely that the Secretary "emphasized that in exercising his responsibility for administering the personnel security program in the Air Force, he is vitally interested in insuring that both the interests of the Government and the rights of individuals are accorded maximum protection."

One unsettled aspect of the case is the future of the Russian in the story, Mikheev. In staff hearings this week the House Committee on Un-American Activities found that Mikheev had approached two other military employes as well as Hatkin.

Today the committee released the transcript of its sessions with the three men. One new touch of color was added to the picture of Mikheev as a singularly ineffectual information-seeker.

Robert W. Davis, an Army historian, said Mikheev and his wife had taken him and his wife to dinner at a fancy restaurant last Jan. 28. They had vodka martinis and ran the check up to $16. Mikheev left only a 10-cent tip, Davis said, so he slipped another $1 to the waitress.

STUDENTS' MOCK G.O.P. CONVENTION IS SPIRITED ONE

Only about 75 students from Washington University and the area's high schools attended a mock Republican convention yesterday at the Washington University Field House, but they made up in spirit what they lacked in bulk.

United States Senator Carl T. Curtis (Rep.), Nebraska, gave a rousing keynote speech in which he told the group the Republican party offers more to young people today than any other political party. He cited administrative appointments of young persons in government affairs. He was strongly applauded for this and for the many jokes he poked at the Democrats.

There was little sign of disunity concerning the plank issues at stake but minor disagreements led to amendments of two lesser planks. Intentions of representatives of eastern states to select Dewey for vice president were quelled and nominees selected were, President Eisenhower and Vice President Nixon.

A mock Democratic convention was scheduled for today with Mayor Raymond R. Tucker delivering the opening remarks and Representative Ed Edmondson of Oklahoma, the keynote speaker.

HIGH SCHOOL VIOLINIST WINS WASHINGTON U. SCHOLARSHIP

Melvin Gilhaus, a violinist and a senior at Maplewood-Richmond Heights High School, was awarded a half scholarship to the Washington University School of Music last night as the winner in a competition sponsored by the men's club of Temple Shaare Emeth.

Six finalists in the competition, in which 90 high school musicians were auditioned, were heard on last night's program at the Temple. Second prize, $100 in cash, went to Hughie Ellison of Kirkwood High School, a trombonist, and third prize, $50 in cash, was awarded to Caryl Anne Bierbaum, pianist, a senior at Normandy High School.

2 YOUTH LEAGUE LEADERS OUSTED IN SOVIET GEORGIA

MOSCOW, May 12 (AP)—Two secretaries of the central committee of the Young Communist League of Soviet Georgia have been relieved of their duties without public explanation.

The two dismissed officials were S. Rigvava, second secretary of the league's central committee, in charge of organization, and G. Bandzeladze, secretary of the league's central committee, in charge of propaganda and agitation.

(Since the extensive disorders in Tiflis in early March following Nikita Khrushchev's denunciation of Stalin, there have been indications of concern on the part of the Kremlin with the state of affairs among Georgian young people. Among the leaders of the Tiflis demonstrations were many students.)

The dismissal was announced by the Tiflis paper Dawn of the East, which simultaneously reported that E. Shevardnadze and T. Badurashvily had been appointed in their places. The paper also reported that Georgian Minister of Trade S. I. Sabanadze has been relieved of his duties.

Anyone for a Swim?

Louis, age eight, balefully stared at the mess of papers and boxes that had accumulated under the store's back porch. He had just been ready to leave for a cool but muddy swim at Doesenbach's Pond* when his Father reminded him of his daily chores: Burning the trash! Customers, sat rocking and chatting on the porch . . . oblivious to the "hot idea" that had just flashed through Louis' mind. This time, just this once, he would burn the papers right where they were! He touched a match to one box filled with papers . . . and started whistling on his way.

Too soon, customers and friends were fighting the blaze . . . then the volunteer fire department found a farmer and commandeered his horses to pull the fire engine to the scene. The store was saved . . . the porches ruined and had to be rebuilt.

Today, even though Gutman's is being remodeled and facilities expanded, no porches are planned. BUT the friendly philosophy . . . that a customer is a guest within the store . . . is still a tradition. Many friends drop in during the day to browse and chat . . . won't you?

Oh yes, "bad boy" Louis is Lou's Gutman, president of our store!

Text of Doctors' Report On Eisenhower's Health

WASHINGTON, May 12 (AP).

Following is the text of the doctors' report today following a two-day physical examination of President Eisenhower:

THE PRESIDENT underwent a complete physical examination with appropriate and thorough laboratory tests at Walter Reed hospital 10 May to 12 May 1956. His general condition continues good. He is physically active and mentally alert. His appearance, appetite and digestion are excellent. His height is 71 inches and his weight is 168 pounds.

Special examinations revealed the following:

Eye: The eye examination showed no organic disease. The retinal arteries showed no evidence of sclerosis. A minor error in refraction was properly corrected by glasses.

Ear, nose, throat and sinuses: There were no abnormalities noted. The tonsils had been previously removed.

Dental: The teeth and gums were in excellent condition.

Thyroid: There were no abnormalities noted.

Chest: The lungs were clear to auscultation. The determination of vital capacity was within normal limits.

Cardiovascular: At the time of the present examination the blood pressure was 118/80. The blood pressure since recovery from infarction has averaged 120/80. It has seldom reached higher levels and occasionally has been lower. The heart sounds were good. The pulse was 70 per minute.

The myocardial infarction of September 1955 was well healed, as evidenced by X-ray and cardiographic findings. The electrocardiogram showed residual changes consistent with healed infarction. There were no symptoms or findings of myocardial insufficiency (muscle weakness) or coronary insufficiency (angina).

The arteries of the extremities showed no evidence of sclerosis. The circulatory tone was good. The President has shown good tolerance to increasing activity over the past six months since he departed Fitzsimons hospital. He remains on anti-coagulant therapy with excellent control.

Abdomen: There was a healed scar in the right lower abdominal wall from an appendectomy in 1923. The findings otherwise were normal.

Nerves, muscles, bones and joints: The nerve reflexes were those of a normal individual. The muscle tone was good. The bones and joints were normal, with the exception of a non-disabling injury to the left knee incurred at West Point in 1912. The previously noted bursitis was found to be inactive.

Genito-urinary system: There was no evidence of disease of the urinary tract. The prostate showed minimal benign enlargement—normal for his age.

X-RAY FINDINGS

Chest: The X-ray of the chest when compared with numerous previous films of the heart and lungs dating from 1946 showed no changes in the lungs and no changes in the general configuration or size of the heart. The fluoroscopic examination of the heart showed a normal rate and rhythm. The healed infarction (scar) on the anterolateral wall of the left ventricle was again noted and appeared as an area approximately 2.5 CM. In extent in which the amplitude of the pulsations was diminished. There was no evidence of aneurysm (bulging in the scar). There was normal excursion of the diaphragm on both sides and the aortic pulsations were normal.

Gall Blader: The gall blader was normal by dye test.

Digestive Tract: The X-ray examinations of the gastro-intestinal tract with barium studies showed a normally functioning digestive tract.

LABORATORY FINDINGS

Urinalysis: Normal.

Blood count: 5,500,000 red blood cells; 16.5 grams hemoglobin; 7850 white blood cells, with normal differential count.

Sedimentation rate: 14 mm. per hour hematocrit; 47 volume per cent.

Blood chemistry tests:

Urea nitrogen, 14 mg. per cent.

Fasting blood sugar, 89 mg. per cent.

Total cholesterol, 184 mg. per cent.

Total lipids, 682 mg. per cent.

Serum calcium, 5.4 meg-liter.

All of these laboratory findings were considered within normal limits.

BLIND STUDENT FINED ON DRUNKEN DRIVING CHARGE

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., May 12 (AP)—A 60-day jail term and a $100 fine were handed down to a blind college student yesterday after he pleaded guilty to a drunken driving charge. Both sentence and fine were suspended.

Edgar Lee Edens, attending the University of Tennessee through assistance from a state rehabilitation for the blind program, told criminal court Judge J. Fred Bibb he was "operating the gear, brake and clutch" while a sighted companion was "putting the gas" to the car.

Patrolman Charles Miller, who arrested the pair, testified both were intoxicated. Miller said Edens was "under the wheel" and his companion was giving him instructions. The companion was unidentified.

'CREDIT SQUEEZE' ON SMALL BUSINESS ALARMS SPARKMAN

WASHINGTON, May 12 (AP)—Senator John J. Sparkman (Dem.), said yesterday "the credit squeeze on small business is more alarming than it has been since the 1929-30 depression."

Sparkman is co-chairman of the National Democratic Committee's new advisory group on small business.

At the first meeting of the group he and Representative Wright Patman (Dem.), Texas, the other chairman, recommended legislation to give some immediate tax relief to small business.

"In the first four months of this year," Patman said, "small business failures were the greatest in any similar period in the past 15 years, while big business profits and stock prices hit an all-time high."

BRITISH TRAITORS' DATA VOLUMINOUS, EX-SPY DISCLOSES

WASHINGTON, May 12 (UP)—British traitors Donald Maclean and Guy Burgess gave Russia so much secret Allied information that a special section was set up in Moscow to handle it, it was disclosed today.

The Senate Internal Security Committee released an affidavit from Vladimir M. Petrov, of Sydney, Australia, reciting hearsay evidence that the defecting British diplomats had been spies for years before they fled to Russia in 1951.

Petrov, a former Soviet secret policeman, deserted the embassy in Sydney in 1954. His statement, placed in the committee record, said his assistant in the Russian secret police in Australia was Filipp Vasilievich Kislitsyn, who had formerly worked in the Soviet embassy in London.

He said Kislitsyn told him of handling material which Burgess furnished to the Russians.

Later, said Petrov, Kislitsyn headed "a special one-man section of the top secret archives" in Moscow, set up solely to handle "the great quantity of material supplied by Maclean and Burgess."

SIX CONVENTIONS THIS WEEK, TWO STATE PRIMARIES

Nebraska and Oregon to Express Preference for President—Two More to Go.

WASHINGTON, May 12 (AP)—Two more presidential preference primaries are coming up next week and six states will hold conventions. All told national convention delegates with 97 Republican and 78 Democratic votes will be chosen during the week.

The primaries:

Tuesday—Nebraska has a preference vote, with President Eisenhower unopposed on the Republican ticket and Senator Estes Kefauver alone on the Democratic. The preference vote is not binding on the 18-vote Republican and 12-vote Democratic delegations also to be chosen. Delegates run unpledged.

Friday—Oregon holds a preference primary. There are no Democratic entrants, but Adlai Stevenson and Senator Kefauver are competing for write-in votes that will determine who gets the state's 16-vote delegation. President Eisenhower has no opposition on the G.O.P. ballot for 18 more delegates.

McKay Seeks Nomination.

Another highlight of the Oregon voting will be the Republican contest between Douglas McKay, former Secretary of the Interior, and Philip Hitchcock, member of the Lewis and Clark College development staff, for the Senate nomination. In November the winner is expected to meet Senator Wayne Morse, who has only token opposition in the Democratic primary.

After next week, presidential primaries will be held on only two more dates before the national conventions—May 29 in Florida and June 5 in California, Montana, New York and South Dakota. Much selecting will remain for state conventions, however.

To date, the Democrats have named delegates with 562 votes in a national convention consisting of 1372 votes. An Associated Press tabulation of primary results and delegate preferences as expressed in polls shows Kefauver to have 121 votes to 103 for Stevenson. A total of 76½ favor others and 261½ are uncommitted.

557 Pledged to President.

Republicans have chosen 689 of their 1323 delegates, with 557 committed to Mr. Eisenhower's renomination. Fifty-seven are committed to others, but 56 of these are held by Senator Bricker of Ohio for the President. Seventy-five votes are uncommitted.

States picking delegates next week in conventions and their delegate votes:

Monday — Rhode Island, Republicans, 14; Wyoming, Democrats 14 and Republicans 12. Thursday — North Carolina, Democrats 36. Friday—Nevada, Republicans 12; Georgia, Republicans 23.

Maryland Republicans will go through the formality next Saturday of naming in a convention 24 delegates already pledged to Mr. Eisenhower in the May 7 primary.

FUNERAL TO BE TUESDAY FOR ARTHUR E. LEGARE

Funeral services for Arthur E. LeGare, former St. Louisan, who died Friday at his home in Chicago, will be held at 9 a.m. Tuesday at the Most Blessed Sacrament Catholic Church, Kingshighway and Maffitt avenue. Burial will be in Calvary Cemetery.

Until his retirement two years ago, Mr. LeGare had been emlpoyed for 39 years as consulting engineer and sales engineer for the old Commonwealth Steel Co. and its successor, the General Steel Castings Co. of Granite City. Since 1940, he has been with the Chicago office of the firm.

During his years in St. Louis, he was active in affairs of the Blessed Sacrament parish and in the Knights of Columbus. He was 67 years old. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mary E. LeGare, and a son, Arthur E. Jr.

SERIOUSLY HURT IN FALL IN HOTEL ELEVATOR SHAFT

Anthony Schultz, maintenance worker at the MacArthur Hotel, 100 North Broadway, was seriously injured yesterday when he fell 20 feet to the base of an elevator shaft at the hotel.

Police were told that Schultz had opened the outside elevator door at the first-floor level after arriving at work and, in the darkness, apparently did not notice that the elevator was not there.

He stepped into the empty shaft and fell. The elevator, in the rear of the hotel and not used by guests, ordinarily is left at the first floor but had been moved to a higher floor. Schultz, 53 years old, was taken to City Hospital for treatment of head and internal injuries.

ALASKA 'COPTERS SAVE 27 IN FLOOD-IMPERILED VILLAGE

ANCHORAGE, Alaska, May 12 (AP)—Air Force rescue headquarters reported today helicopters had evacuated 27 persons across the ice-jammed Kuskokwim river from the flood-theatened village of Aniak.

The Air Force said everyone who wanted to be taken from the native village, about 400 miles west of Anchorage, had been lifted to higher ground across the river. They were provided there with tents, blankets and food. Some residents stayed in the village.

NAVY AIRPLANES CAN DELIVER HYDROGEN BOMB

Adm. Burke Makes First Acknowledgement, Indicates Bomber Is Carrier-Based A-3-D.

WASHINGTON, May 12 (UP) —The Navy's carrier-based planes are capable of delivering a hydrogen bomb attack on enemy targets.

Adm. Arleigh A. Burke, chief of naval operations, stated this in an exclusive United Press interview, the first official acknowledgement that the Navy could deliver the H-bomb. Heretofore the Navy has claimed only A-bomb capability for its carrier planes.

The interview was granted before disclosure of the Air Force's latest differences with the Administration over whether the Navy can fill in gaps in this country's strategic bombing capabilities.

But the Navy claims may have been in President Eisenhower's mind when he cited the "tremendous" airpower of the Navy as one reason it is not necessary to match Russia in production of land-based inter-continental bombers.

Indirectly Challenged.

The Administration position, also stated by Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson, has been challenged indirectly by Gen. Nathan F. Twining, Air Force chief of staff. Twining told a Senate Appropriations subcommittee Friday the Navy's strategic striking power would be "small" because the range of carrier-based planes is "relatively short" and because naval airpower would be largely absorbed at the start in winning control of the air.

In the interview Burke was asked whether, in the light of the Administration's increasing emphasis on naval airpower, the Navy could deliver an H-bomb on Russian targets.

"Certainly," Burke responded.

He indicated the Navy's H-bomber was the new twin-jet A-3-D. The A-3-D has passed "carrier suitability" tests but has not yet gone into operational use with the fleet.

The first squadrons of A-3-D's now are being formed on the East and West coasts. They will be assigned to the Forrestal class of supercarriers.

Size Can Be Reduced.

Burke's statement was an indication the H-bomb can be reduced in size. By Air Force standards the A-3-D would be classed as a light bomber. Previously the assumption has been that the H-bomb could be carried only in such heavy bombers as the B-36 and the B-52.

United Press dispatches today from the Pacific H-bomb test area quoted Rear Adm. B. Hall Hanlon as saying the H-bomb can be engineered into a warhead for the intercontinental guided missiles of the future.

Hall, commander of the Pacific Joint Atomic Task Force, told reporters one of the prime purposes of this year's United States nuclear program at the Eniwetok proving grounds is to "design and test" hydrogen warheads for what has been described as "the ultimate weapon."

GIRL TIED TO BICYCLE SAVED AFTER FALL INTO CANAL

GOEULZIN, France, May 12 (AP)—Roger Second, a fisherman, was riding his bicycle along a canal with his 4-year-old daughter, Monique, fastened securely to the carrier behind him.

He lost control and the bicycle plunged into the canal. Second was thrown clear and swam to safety but Monique—still firmly attached to the bike—went to the bottom.

A 16-year-old boy tried to rescue her but found the bicycle stuck in the muddy canal bottom. Finally a bargeman using a boat hook pulled up the bicycle with Monique still attached. Firemen revived her.

HARRIMAN SAYS EISENHOWER IS PRISONER OF BIG BUSINESS

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J., May 12 (AP) — Gov. Averell Harriman of New York said today there was no room in the Democratic party for any "middle of the road" policy. Such a policy, Harriman said, is "just a front for inaction," and is President Eisenhower's "trade-mark."

"Let him keep it," the Democratic Governor said in a speech before the convention of the International Ladies Garment Workers union.

Harriman said the nation was "facing a new period of decision where we can shape our own destiny or let it slip out of our hands."

President Eisenhower, he said, "is a prisoner of big business at the present time."

"We need a new vision. The New Deal and the Fair Deal accomplished a great deal," Harriman said, adding the Republicans have continued certain New Deal, Fair Deal policies.

NEW U.S. INQUIRY GROUP CHECKS ON ANTI-SEMITISM

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 12—The Government's newest inquiry group on Government security was revealed last night to be investigating charges of anti-Semitism in the Federal Government.

Loyd Wright, former chairman of the American Bar Association, chairman of the Bipartisan Commission on Government Security made the revelation in a letter to Henry E. Schultz, national chairman of the anti-defamation league of B'nai B'rith in New York.

Wright said his group, created by Congress and its members appointed jointly by Congress and President Eisenhower, currently is engaged in a "comprehensive survey" of the Government security program. He asked Schultz for detailed information on alleged anti-Semitic cases and abuses of civil rights in connection with this broad inquiry.

WEEKS SAYS NO. 1 ASSET OF G.O.P. IS EISENHOWER

TULSA, Okla., May 12 (UP)—Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks said tonight the Republican party's "greatest asset . . . is the character of Dwight Eisenhower."

He said Democratic political spokesmen "are wasting their time with their useless tirades—for all their smokescreens of spite cannot blind the American people to the fact that this nation is better off under Dwight D. Eisenhower."

In a speech at a "Salue to Eisenhower" dinner, sponsored by the Oklahoma Republican State Central Committee, he said, "Our professional opponents . . . started with some degree of moderation—they're about to wind up in complete consternation. . . ."

Thus far, he said, "every time they (Democrats) have thought they had an issue it has blown up on them." He said former Illinois Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson demanded a stop to further atomic tests at a time when the Russians were claiming development of an intercontinental missile. Democrats then "rushed in to demolish the Republican prosperity issue" just when record April employment figures were announced, Weeks said.

"All during the year, about every time the professional prophets of doom have forecast that the country was going to the dogs, we have been able to refute their scares with official statistics on some fresh strength in the economy," he added.

Charge for Police Escorts.

ROCKVILLE, CENTRE, N.Y., May 12 (AP)—The Rockville Centre police department will charge merchants $2.50 for every half hour, or fraction thereof, its patrolmen spend escorting money to and from banks.

G.O.P. EXHORTED TO AVOID CIVIL RIGHTS AS ISSUE

Senator Case Says National Interests Demand Calm Approach to Problem.

PHILADELPHIA, May 12 (AP)—Senator Clifford P. Case (Rep.), New Jersey, said tonight the Republicans ought not to try to make political capital out of the issue of equal rights for Negroes.

Addressing a banquet of the Pennsylvania Federation of Young Republican Clubs, he said:

"There may be some in our own party who take the short-range view that this is a matter splitting the Democrats and so let's stand back and let them fight each other.

"But in the long view, in the interests of our country, this is neither a sensible nor a morally just position to take. It is inconceivable to me that the Republican party should adopt such a view.

"We cannot stand aside and watch this nation be torn apart over an issue that can and must be resolved without resort to violence or compulsion."

Decries 'Extremism.'

Case also called on all concerned in the fight over civil rights to avoid "extremism."

He said Negroes "have the same right to vote, to a decent education, to a decent job, to a decent house and to a decent life as the rest of us," and continued:

"It seems to me high time to take the civil rights issue out of the partisan arena.

"The hurling of wild predictions over what can happen if we give the Negro his long postponed rights is harmful, as is the continuing exchange of charges over who's to blame for the situation.

"Meanwhile, the problem is aggravated as tempers flare among the extremists on both sides and the moderates are pushed ever farther and farther back from the conflict.

Pleads for Unity.

"I can see no partisan advantage in watching American turn against American. This is a problem that cries out for calmness and moderation—for unity and understanding."

Case said President Eisen- was exerting the right kind of leadership, that "he has stood firmly for integration of our public schools on a steadily progressive basis . . . has urged the adoption of a moderate legislative program to strengthen and expand our civil rights statutes."

Case took the stand that the temper of the people is moderate on the civil rights issue, and said: "Neither extremism nor partisanship will win the political day, any more than they will carry us towards the goal of real equality, with justice, for our fellow Americans or whatever color."

JEWISH GROUP SAYS THAT BIGOTS SEEK THIRD PARTY

The New York Times News Service.
(Copyright, 1956, by the New York Times Co.)

CLEVELAND, May 12—The American Jewish Committee, the oldest Jewish civil rights defense agency in the country, warned here yesterday of what it describes as a major shift in tactics of "organized hatemongers." This change of tactics, the agency said, could have sharp political repercussions in the forthcoming presidential election campaign.

The warning, embodied in a report that was based on information gathered by the committee's 14 area offices throughout the United States in the last six months, was submitted to the agency's 200-member policy-making body, which opened its three-day annual meeting.

The report contended that the bigots, who have failed to infiltrate the Republican and Democratic parties, are now concentrating on "political grievances of sincere ultra-conservatives."

The report said the bigots "see their greatest political opportunity this year in the growing desire of the ultra-conservatives to form a third party, or failing that, to force a realignment in the Democratic and Republican parties."

CREVE COEUR STUDENT WINS DANFORTH FELLOWSHIP

Guy D. Hughes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard D. Hughes, 10540 Whitebridge lane, Creve Coeur, has been awarded a Danforth graduate fellowship for three or four years' study at any institution of his choice, it was announced yesterday.

His graduate school tuition will be paid until he is awarded his doctor of philosophy degree, it was reported by the Danforth Foundation of St. Louis. The program under which he won his grant is designed "to encourage greater numbers of young men to enter college as a Christain vocation," the foundation said. The foundation was established by the late William H. Danforth, St. Louis philanthropist.

Hughes is a senior majoring in English at Brown University, Providence R. I. A member of the Naval Reserve Officer Training Corps, he can resume study only after completing three years in the Marine Corps, in which he will become a second lieutenant on graduation from Brown.

Jet Pilots Who Survive Collision At 31,000 Feet Describe Feeling

Air Force Flyers Tell of Pin-Wheel Spins During Crash Experience Over Northeast Nebraska.

SIOUX CITY, I., May 12 (AP)—Two jet pilots sat on their hospital beds at the air force base here last night and told what it felt like to emerge alive from a plane collision at 31,000 feet.

First Lt. Francis P. Bennett, Jr., 24 years old, of Alliance, O., and Second Lt. Kenneth W. Gero, 21, of Lyndon Center, Vt., said that when two jet interceptors crash in the air it is seldom that both pilots escape.

The fact that they survived and were little the worse off for their experience was, they commented, a lucky break."

Bennett and Gero were simulating a beam attack in the air above the northeastern Nebraska town of Hubbard yesterday. Bennett's plane was making a pass at Gero's craft, approaching the line of flight at a right angle.

Then, the pilots related, both suddenly realized a crash was imminent. Each tried to avoid it by nosing down his plane but the tail assemblies collided. The pilots stayed with their planes for a few seconds, then yanked on the ejection seat levers.

"Immediately after the crash I was upside down with my head against the top of the canopy and I decided to get out," Bennett recalled.

"I lost consciousness when I was shot out and when I came to I was pin-wheeling. I managed to stop myself in the prescribed way. Then I began falling—head down, body slanted—until my parachute opened.

"I saw a piece of wreckage float by. I thought it must be Ken, still unconscious in his seat."

Gero said he too lost consciousness after pulling the lever but came to in a few seconds.

"I was spinning aroud on my back, looking up into scattered pieces of airplane," he said. "Then I went into a free fall. It felt like a week before that parachute opened."

Bennett lost his helmet and wrist watch, suffered a gash over his right eye and a vertebra injury.

One of the planes fell two miles west of Hubbard and the other about five miles southwest of the first.

ILLINOIS CHILD SURVIVES DOUBLE HEART OPERATION

Ten-week-old Robert Bruce Anderson of Effingham, Ill., was ready to leave Children's Hospital for home yesterday after a double operation for a combination of heart defects. Robert is the first young infant to have survived such an operation at Children's and there are few such cases on record in the United States, the hospital said.

When admitted to the hospital April 3 he was in critical condition with a serious narrowing of the aorta and an open duct in the heart which permitted seepage of blood from the right to the left ventricle. Immediate operation was necessary.

Physicians say Robert, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert D. Anderson, has a fighting chance for normal growth and health and that the success in his case is a sign of further progress in treatment of this type of case.

CLINIC ON SIMPLIFYING PAPERWORK, CUTTING COSTS

Officials of Government agencies will attend a clinic in records management here tomorrow and Tuesday, as part of an effort to simplify paperwork and cut costs.

Discussion leaders in the clinic, which will be held at the new Federal Building, South Twelfth boulevard and Market street, will be Herbert Angel, director of records management for the National Archives and Records Service, Washington, and Charles Sterman, chief of the current records branch of that agency.

Similar sessions will be held later for federal officials in other parts of the country. The Hoover Commission has estimated that the cost of federal paperwork could be cut by $255,000,000 a year.

RAIL OFFICIALS, SUPPLIERS TO ATTEND STORES MEETING

Approximately 1200 railroad officials and suppliers from the United States, Canada and Mexico are expected to attend the annual meeting of the purchases and stores division of the association of American Railroads at the Sheraton-Jefferson Hotel here Wednesday through Friday, it was announced yesterday.

During the sessions, the most efficient methods for spending an estimated $1,700,000,000 on fuels, supplies and materials to be required by the railroads in their operations this year will be discussed.

Principal speakers at the opening session will be Clark Hungerford, president and Alfred N. Laret, vice president-purchases and stores of the Frisco Railroad, and Joseph F. Holland, general counsel of the Pevely Dairy Co.

WHITE CHURCH IN CHICAGO NAMES NEGRO MINISTER

CHICAGO, May 12 (AP)—For the first time in Chicago, a Negro was named minister of a white congregation yesterday.

The Sixth United Presbyterian Church, with a membership of about 160, announced that the Rev. A. L. Reynolds Jr. had accepted a call to become its pastor, effective June 3. Dr. Reynolds now is pastor of the Mount Olive Methodist Church of Topeka, Kan.

A church leader said it is hoped the move will bring into the congregation Negroes living in the church's south side neighborhood.

TIBETAN REBEL RAIDS REPORTED ON CHINESE REDS

Systematic Ambushing of Traffic Related — Communists Reply With Bombings.

Correspondent M. M. Gupta traveled to the Tibetan border region of Nepal to investigate reports of uprisings by Tibetan tribesmen against the Chinese Communists. He cabled this interview with a Tibetan business man.

KATHMANDU, Nepal, May 12 (UP)—Tibetan rebels armed with spears and muzzle-loading guns have launched attacks on Chinese Communist troops occupying eastern Tibet, it was reported by a reliable Lhasa trader who fled to Nepal this week.

Mass arrests in March nipped a major revolution plotted for April 6, he said.

But rebel Golok tribesmen went through with one attack that routed a Chinese garrison at Chamdo. They burned the barracks and seized modern weapons, he said.

Rebels also are systematically ambushing and destroying Chinese traffic on the 1000-mile Lhasa-Chando road, main route to China, he said.

The trader said the Communists have retaliated by bombing tribesmen from the air, arresting 300 suspected revolutionaries, forbidding public meetings and arms carrying, clamping on a national dusk-to-dawn curfew, censoring mail and flooding Lhasa with spies.

Control Partially Restored.

Massive Chinese troop reinforcements have "partly" restored Communist control in the Chamdo area, the trader said.

He said the rebels nevertheless have formed a five-man council recognizing the Dalai Lama as head of a free Tibetan government in the southeast, paralleling the Chinese government.

Tibetans also have distributed anti-Communist leaflets and publicly burned pictures of Communist leaders.

The business man who brought this information was one of 32 official "Tensembas," the Tibet government's court traders. He fled to Nepal this week for fear he would be arrested on charges of joining the anti-Chinese agitation.

Even though a Tibetan war against the Chinese army might be suicidal, the Tensemba said unrest is widening into open guerrilla warfare.

He said the leading fighters in the uprisings of the last two months have been members of the 40,000-man Golok tribe of eastern Tibet.

The nomadic Goloks, he said, are armed with eighteenth century guns, spears, daggers and ornate old swords. But with these weapons the Goloks destroyed the Chamdo garrison and virtually control the vital Lhasa-Chamdo road because they can cut it at will with ambushes.

Motorcade Ambushed.

In one of their boldest strokes, the rebels ambushed the motorcade bringing the Panchen Lama back from his Peiping visit last year. They killed several of the Panchen Lama's party, he said.

The Panchen Lama, whom the Chinese tried to set up as a dual deity with the Dalai Lama, is widely regarded in Tibet as a collaborator with the Communists, the Tensemba said.

The trader showed one of the leaflets he smuggled out of Lhasa. Written on bamboo paper it said, "We Tibetans must unite and drive away the Chinese who are destroyers of our religious life and our country."

Although now out of Chinese reach, the Tensemba said he feared for his family and property in Lhasa. He planned to rest in Nepal a few weeks, then go to India to emphasize the "plight of Tibet under the Chinese" to political friends there.

LITHOGRAPHS OF EISENHOWER PAINTINGS IN ALTON EXHIBIT

Two lithographs of paintings by President Eisenhower are among 500 works of art that will be on view in the first annual Spring Arts Festival at Monticello College, Alton, Friday and Saturday. Mayor Leo J. Struif of Alton has designated Saturday as "Fine Arts Day."

The lithographs were given by the President to Mr. and Mrs. Spencer T. Olin. One is a portrait of President Lincoln copied from the Alexander Gardner photograph taken Nov. 15, 1863. The other is a landscape, "St. Louis Creek, Byers Peak Ranch." It is a snow scene with mountains in the background.

Mrs. Olin is a graduate and trustee of Monticello College. Art work by college and high school students and by amateur and professional artists will be displayed. Mr. and Mrs. Tanasko Milovich, St. Louis artists, will judge the exhibit. The festival begins Friday evening with presentation of Moliere's play "The Imaginary Invalid."

An achievement award medal will be presented to Mayor Raymond R. Tucker and an honorary membership will be given to Albert H. Baum, city building commissioner.

I couldn't keep house without my Cook Paint Dealer

It all started when Jim and I lived in that two-by-four apartment. It hadn't been decorated for years, and a dismal little dump it was. But Cook's Shadotone made it look lovely! I applied the Shadotone myself—it didn't wear me out—and it was so easy to keep clean.

That gave us an idea for our house...we bought an old one and put our decorating ideas to work. Jim was the proudest paint-it-yourselfer you ever saw, with the way Cook's Outside White made over the exterior of a run-down-looking place. And what I did with Shadotone inside made me a decorating celebrity.

My furniture looks so lovely? Thanks. That lovely finish is simply Cook's Rapidry enamel--and another reason why I depend on Cook's. I used Rapidry in our kitchen, too-- only there it's Cook's non-yellowing white. Hasn't yellowed a bit, even over my gas stove.

Want in on a secret? Actually I had a staff of professional decorators, from Cook's Color Advisory Service, to help me plan my color harmonies. Their service is FREE! You can get it, too—personalized help in planning your color harmonies, both exterior and interior. See your Cook Paint Store or Dealer.

You, too, will find your Cook Paint Store or Dealer a treasure house of decorating and color ideas...and a real help in getting happy answers to all your painting problems. Did we say all? That's right. Go right down the line. There are Cook paints, varnishes, stains, enamels and other finishes for every purpose around your home. Visit your Cook Paint Store or Dealer right away for decorating helps you need—plus friendly, competent painting advice.

CHINESE GIRL PERSUADED TO LEAVE REDS FOR A TIME

HONG KONG, May 12 (AP)—A Chinese father who pleaded tearfully for two hours today won back his 18-year-old daughter from the Communists—for a time at least.

The victory appeared to be only temporary for Leung Cheeh-sing, Singapore building contractor who flew 1200 miles to intercept his daughter, Piu-Kan, as she was en route to study and live in Red China.

"I kept telling her that her mother has been crying ever since she left," Leung said. "She still wants to go but she promised to come home to see her mother."

About 400 other young Chinese, singing Communist songs, transferred from ship to a train going to Canton, on the mainland. The Communist regime encourages young overseas Chinese to break their family ties and go to Red China.

HOCKER WOULD HALT FORCED RETIREMENT

Republican Candidate for Governor Says Many at 65 Are Still Useful.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

DEXTER, Mo., May 12—Lon Hocker, St. Louis attorney and candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor, declared today that the automatic retirement of persons at 65 years of age is "wasteful and in some instances inhuman."

Speaking at the Republican Tenth Congressional District convention, Hocker pointed out that 11 per cent of Missouri's population is 65 years old or older. He said older persons should be given a fair opportunity to obtain jobs.

"Thousands of older men in good health, able and wanting to work, are deprived of the opportunity because of artificial age restrictions," he said. "This is not only a great waste of manpower and a heavy tax burden, but in many cases a death blow to physical and social health.

If elected Governor, Hocker pledged to carry out the recommendations of last year's national Governor's Conference by bringing about a study of the entire problem.

Speaking at the same meeting, Albert E. Schoenbeck of St. Louis, candidate for nomination for United States Senator, declared the Republican party in Missouri will have a "new look" this year with new young candidates and young leaders.

He reported a recent nationwide poll of 450,000 high school students showed that President Eisenhower was their overwhelming choice for re-election. "Young people are idealistic, and they know that the President has kept principles above politics," he said.

Two more pro-Eisenhower delegates were elected to the Republican National convention. Only two of the state's 22 delegates are yet to be named.

Named at the G.O.P. meeting here were Leonard Limbaugh of Caruthersville and Mrs. Dorothy Burford of Doniphan. The meeting voted to indorse an Eisenhower-Nixon ticket.

FOUR KILLED AS CAR FLEEING TORNADO ZONE HITS ANOTHER

AUBURN, Ind., May 12 (UP)—Four persons were killed and five injured last night when a car containing two families fleeing a tornado danger area smashed head-on into another car.

The dead were the Rev. James Johnson, 33 years old; Glen Forest, 40, and his daughter, Joan, 14, all of Waterloo, and Thomas Ort, 21, Fort Wayne, driver of the second car.

The Rev. Mr. Johnson's 8-year-old daughter, Judith, who was less seriously hurt than other survivors, told of the tornado scare. Tornado warnings were hoisted over northwestern Indiana in the evening, but no tornado was reported before the warnings were lifted.

The Johnson and Forest families, neighbors, crowded into one car and headed south, apparently seeking to drive outside the danger zone. Authorities said the Rev. Mr. Johnson was driving on the wrong side of the road, two miles out of collided.

TWO MILLIONAIRE ARGENTINE SISTERS FOUND MURDERED

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Radio.

BUENOS AIRES, May 12—Two octogenarian millionaire sisters were murdered in their 16-room Buenos Aires mansion, which was ransacked for hidden treasure, it was discovered yesterday.

Miss Clara Pessano, 84 years old, and Miss Roea Pessano, 82, were found on the floor with their throats slashed. The discovery was made by a nephew, Emilio Cosvacho, who visited the mansion after failing to get a reply to his telephone calls for two days.

Police believe they were killed three days ago. They don't know yet what valuables, if any, were stolen. The wealthy spinster sisters led a secluded life, doing their own housekeeping, and apparently were alone when attacked.

Higher Bankruptcy Fees.

WASHINGTON, May 12 (AP)—President Eisenhower signed a bill yesterday to increase the pay for part-time and full-time referees in bankruptcy. The maximum for full time referees is increased from $12,500 to $18,000 and for part-time referees from $6000 to $7500.

MRS. SYMINGTON SAYS FRIENDS NOW 'WHINNY' AT HER

WASHINGTON, May 12 (UP)—Mrs. Stuart Symington, whose Senator husband is receiving increasing mention as a Democratic dark-horse presidential candidate, admits that some of her friends "whinny a little bit" when they see her.

She says most of the comments about her husband's prospects "are perfectly good-natured." She accepts them that way—or "tries to look the other way."

The wife of the Missouri Senator doesn't really know how she feels about the outlook—"It's too problematical." Meantime, "I don't even consider it."

SECOND GUIDED MISSILE SUBMARINE JOINS FLEET

WASHINGTON, May 12 (AP)—The Navy's second guided missile submarine, the Barbero, has joined the Atlantic fleet at Norfolk, Va.

The Barbero like the Tunny now operating with the Pacific fleet is equipped to fire the Regulus guided bombardment missile which carries an atomic warhead at a speed approaching that of sound. Regulus has an officially reported range of several hundred miles.

2 CHIROPRACTORS CHARGED WITH PRACTICING MEDICINE

A warrant charging two chiropractors, Martin Brockmeier, 7348 Country Club drive, Normandy, and Joseph A. Harvey, 7746 Jerome avenue, Maplewood, with practicing medicine without a license was issued yesterday by Associate Prosecuting Attorney Jasper Vettori.

Police arrested Brockmeier and Harvey May at their offices at 8:30 North Kingshighway afer two women, Negroes, said they had received medications from both the men. The men denied the charge, saying they gave the women physical therapy treatments. Police reported seeing several hundred bottles containing pills, capsules and other medicines in the office.

Punishment on conviction of the charge, a misdemeanor, is from one day to one year in the workhouse or a fine from $1 to $1000, or both.

357,066 EISENHOWER VOTES IN NEW JERSEY PRIMARY

TRENTON, N.J., May 12 (AP)—Official returns from New Jersey's April 17 presidential preferential primary election show President Eisenhower received 357,066 Republican votes and Senator Estes Kefauver of Tennessee received 118,416 Democratic votes. The New Jersey secretary of state's office announced the official returns yesterday.

The President and the Senator were the only candidates entered in the primary. Former Gov. Adlai Stevenson of Illinois received 4040 write-in votes and Gov. Robert B. Meyner, 1120.

Results of the primary are not binding on delegates to the Republican and Democratic national conventions.

Within a few minutes you feel refreshed, rested, relaxed and delightful. Soon you're ready for anything! . . . a hard day of work or play . . . a night of dancing . . . or a long restful sleep. Gone is that tired, restless, dragged-out feeling, and gone are those vague aches and pains, that usually signal the need for better circulation and increased muscular activity.

I'm 61 years old, active in business every day, and if you will follow my advice . . . ride the Exercycle a few minutes each day . . . you'll start feeling, looking, and acting like a new person almost immediately.

JAMES MARATTA, National Director Physical Fitness Laboratories of the Exercycle Corporation

KEEP PHYSICALLY FIT!

When you ride the EXERCYCLE, you are providing your entire body, your muscles and joints, your circulatory system, your lungs, your heart, and your waste elimination system with the most perfect set of coordinated rhythmic exercises possible. You save time, money and energy. There's positively nothing that other forms of exercising can do for you, that EXERCYCLE cannot do better, easier, faster, more comfortably and for less money.

HOW IT WORKS

15 simultaneous, automatic body motions to keep you slender and active, and to help your heart, circulation, elimination, lungs, muscles, joints and nerves.

IT'S COMFORTABLE! EXERCYCLE stands solidly on the floor. You sit on its spacious contour seat as comfortably as in an easy chair.

IT'S AUTOMATIC! A flick of a switch and the EXERCYCLE is in motion. You do nothing, just ride.

GENTLE AND SOOTHING! You rest your arms lightly on the self-propelled handle bars as they rhythmically move you back and forth. The handle bars exercise your arms, shoulders, chest, neck, upper spine and back.

RELAXING AND INVIGORATING! At the same time, the self-propelled seat moves gracefully up and down, exercising your lower spine, waistline, pelvic region and buttock.

STIMULATING AND BENEFICIAL! At the same time, the self-propelled pedals rotate round and round, exercising your feet, legs and hips.

YOU FEEL LIKE A MILLION! You finish your EXERCYCLE ride feeling fresh, rested, relaxed and radiant. Instantly you're ready for work, play or sleep . . . FEELING LIKE A MILLION!

OVER 40,000 SATISFIED WOMEN USERS

EXERCYCLE is so easy to ride, so gentle and silent in operation, and so effective in beautifying the figure and controlling weight, that 40% of EXERCYCLE buyers are women.

STEP UP YOUR CIRCULATION!

Doctors tell you that muscular action, such as EXERCYCLE provides, will instantly speed up your circulation. The more blood per minute that circulates throughout your system, the better you'll feel, the younger you'll stay, and the healthier you'll look. As one famous doctor rightfully puts it: "We don't grow old, we just stop growing." Better circulation provides more oxygen for the body cells, a more rapid replacement of dead tissues, faster distribution of proteins, minerals and vitamins . . . all of which help to keep you feeling and looking young, strong, healthy, and radiant.

KEEP YOUR HEART STRONG!

Biology teaches us that the heart is a muscle, and like all body muscles, it benefits greatly from exercise that stimulates circulation. By stepping up the circulation, EXERCYCLE causes the heart to pump more blood per minute. It's this activity that helps tremendously to keep the heart muscles from becoming soft, flabby and weak.

POWER TO ENDURE!

Strength to endure work or play often depends upon good wind-power as much as upon a strong heart. If you are easily winded while climbing stairs, lifting heavy objects or engaging in strenuous work, then EXERCYCLE can help you. For when riding the EXERCYCLE, you automatically breathe more deeply. This exercises the lungs, increasing their capacity to handle more and more oxygen when the system calls for it. A good daily ventilation of the lungs also helps to keep them healthy.

MANY THERAPEUTIC USES

Do you need a special kind of exercise for your muscles? joints? back? stomach? chest? arms? legs? spine? pelvic region? or for elsewhere? EXERCYCLE provides it quickly, easily and automatically. There's no limit to the versatility of this marvelous invention. That's why so many doctors approve it for patients requiring the kind of gentle, rhythmic, automatic motions which EXERCYCLE provides.

KEEP YOUR WEIGHT DOWN!

Simultaneous action of all main body muscles and joints, such as EXERCYCLE provides, helps to keep the weight down by "burning up" ugly fat. When you enjoy an EXERCYCLE ride, every major muscle and joint in your body is simultaneously engaged in easy, gentle, automatically guided rhythmic action (a feat quite impossible when tried without an EXERCYCLE). As a result, you "burn up" the greatest amount of fat, in the shortest possible time, consistent with the amount of energy expended.

IMPROVE YOUR FIGURE!

Only good muscle tone can keep your figure from sagging, your stomach from protruding, and fat from hanging in rolls. EXERCYCLE automatically motivates, stimulates and invigorates all main body muscles and joints simultaneously. Muscles in motion gradually become stronger and firmer. This is what beautifies the figure, pulls in the waistline, and keeps you looking and feeling young and fresh.

IMPROVE YOUR ELIMINATION!

Bending your body many times a minute at the waistline helps to move waste matter through the intestinal tract, greatly helping elimination. This is a biological fact! EXERCYCLE, by gently rocking you back and forth, automatically bending your body many times per minute at the waistline, speeds up the movement of food through the intestinal tract.

20 YEARS LEADERSHIP!

Over 100,000 EXERCYCLES have already been sold. As a group, doctors are our best customers. You'll find EXERCYCLE in many of the leading clubs, gymnasiums, slenderizing parlors and business establishments. For 20 years EXERCYCLE has held the LEADERSHIP in its field.

Inquire today about an EXERCYCLE for yourself, family, club, or business. Provide one for employees who must work at a desk all day without benefit of muscular activity. Encourage taking an "EXERCYCLE BREAK" in place of a coffee break.

OLD KLONDIKE LOCOMOTIVE SAILS TO OBLIVION, S. D.

SKAGAWAY, Alaska, May 11 (UP)—Old No. 69, an ancient steam locomotive from the Klondike gold fields, sailed this week to Oblivion.

That's Oblivion, S.D.

The oil-burning, narrow-gauge locomotive was hoisted on a ship bound for Seattle, Wash. From there it will go to South Dakota's Black Hills.

For 48 years, No. 69 plied the Klondike in the service of the White Pass and Yukon Railroad. In its new career the antiquated locomotive will haul an excursion train between Hill City, S.D., and the mountain top clearing called Oblivion.

Only One Quadruplet Survives.

DALLAS, Tex., May 12 (AP)—The third of the Hunter quadruplets, Avie May, died today. The survivor is Marie Gay, second largest of the four girls born 11 days ago to Mrs. George Hunter, wife of an aircraft worker. All three babies apparently died of complications of premature birth.

A.D.A. LAYS LAG IN CIVIL RIGHTS TO BOTH PARTIES

Organization Wants Full Support for Supreme Court Decisions on Segregation.

WASHINGTON, May 12 (AP)—Americans for Democratic Action blamed both parties today for what it called a "national crisis" over civil rights.

It called on them to include planks in their 1956 platforms pledging "complete and unequivocal" support of the Supreme Court decisions against segregation in public schools.

The organization, which supports principles of the New Deal and Fair Deal, adopted a resolution at its ninth annual convention also asking the major parties to pledge action by the executive branch and Congress to "implement and uphold" the Supreme Court decisions. They were asked further to pledge "full use of federal authority to safeguard the right to vote and the security of citizens from violence and intimidation."

The resolution hit most sharply at what A.D.A. called President Eisenhower's failure to use his personal prestige to "mobilize the resources of good will in North and South" and to employ the powers of his office to "assert the primacy of law and order."

Vigorous Enforcement Asked.

It said also the Democratic party has been "paralyzed by yielding to its segregationist wing."

Saying neither party can "compromise with its nullificationist Southern collaborators without abandoning its principles," the resolution called on the President for "vigorous enforcement" of existing civil rights laws. It urged him also to call an immediate White House conference of Negro and white leaders to "ease tension and promote co-operation."

It said the President should use federal authority to protect the constitutional rights of citizens, including "the withholding of funds from states and school districts not in compliance with the courts' decisions and decrees."

Congress was asked to strengthen civil rights laws and to enact the amendment of Senator Herbert Lehman (Dem.) New York, to deny federal school aid funds to states "known or found to be in defiance" of anti-segregation court decisions."

Fight Over Lehman Amendment.

There was a long fight over the Lehman amendment. Many delegates said it was unnecessary and might prove a roadblock to school aid legislation. A motion to delete the section carrying the amendment lost on two votes, 145 to 135 and 128 to 123.

Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, in a banquet speech tonight scored both parties on the civil rights issue. He said the Eisenhower Administration had failed to break up what he called "massive disenfranchisement" of southern Negroes and the President had shown a "lack of leadership" on school desegregation.

He accused the Democratic party organization of being "obsessed with the idea of purchasing what they call unity with silence and inaction on the civil rights of Negroes."

Wilkins said a substantial part of the white population in the South and the entire Negro population want to observe the law and work out ways of complying with desegregation rulings.

"But the loudmouths and the hoodlums hold sway," he asserted, "and the troubled citizens of the region, desperately seeking guidance toward peaceful and just methods, have received no encouragement or leadership from their President."

That's the Army for You!

COLOMBO, May 12 (AP)—Eighteen gunners in Ceylon's army went on a hunger strike. They said they were dissatisfied with the training program designed to prepare them for future civilian careers. They complained it had no courses on how to become movie stars.

CONGRESS EASES UP ON ECONOMY; SURPLUS IN VIEW

Smallest Budget Cuts in Years — Election Year, Foreign Aid Have Impact.

WASHINGTON, May 12 (UP)—Congress has put away its economy ax and begun acting like a free-spending family with money in the bank.

For the first time in five years a budget surplus is in prospect for the fiscal year ending June 30. An even bigger surplus is expected in the next fiscal year.

Congressional economy advocates acknowledged today that is one reason why President Eisenhower's requests for money to operate the Government in the next fiscal year are sliding through the House with the smallest reductions in years.

Reductions Only 1.2 Pct.

The House or its appropriations Committee already has acted on requests for $49,900,000,000, the bulk of the total. Net result: cuts totaling only $580,000,000. That is only 1.2 per cent.

What accounts for the failure of the annual budget-cutting drive to get off the ground this year?

Some members explain that Congress is naturally less disposed to cut down on federal services for the folks back home because this is a big election year.

Put the question to two of the leaders of the almost dormant House economy block and you get somewhat different answers.

Representative John R. Taber of New York, senior Republican on the House Appropriations Committee, said there are three reasons:

1. President Eisenhower sent up a tight budget.
2. Many members of Congress who once favored economy now feel there is "no reason why people shouldn't get the federal services they want" as long as billions are being spent on foreign aid.
3. The congressional group that favors big spending is "reaching out for more because the budget is in balance."

Disputed by Cannon.

Chairman Clarence Cannon (Dem.), Missouri, in a separate interview disputed Taber's first point, agreed with the second, and gave a different version of the third.

"I think it's the loosest budget ever presented to Congress," Cannon said, "although it may be justified on grounds Soviet Russia is making unprecedented advances in military weapons."

Noting that budget requests for defense make up the bulk of the money requests, Cannon said the House feared to make any large cut in those funds because otherwise it might "feel responsible" if the international situation took a turn for the worse.

Another factor in the failure to cut deeply into the budget, Cannon said, is that the need for federal services has gone up with the economy operating at a record high and bringing in record high tax revenue.

EMERSON ELECTRIC HONORS TWO FOR 50 YEARS' SERVICE

Two employes of Emerson Electric Manufacturing Co. of St. Louis who recently completed 50 years of service with the company were among 269 persons honored last night at the company's annual service award dinner in the Tiara room of the Park Plaza Hotel.

They were Ernest W. Schoessel, 6639 Hoffman avenue, a foreman, and Walter A. Rathert, 8372 College avenue, Jennings, a machine operator. Both received diamond-studded emblems.

Eight of the Emerson employes received the company's traditional gold watch and diamond-studded emblem for 40 years of service. The principal speaker was William Vaughn, columnist for the Kansas City Star.

MRS. SAMUEL C. PALMER DIES

Graveside services for Mrs. Samuel C. Palmer, widow of a retired minister who served as a supply pastor in this area after 18 years as pastor of Lafayette Park Presbyterian Church, will be at 2 p.m. tomorrow at Bellefontaine Cemetery.

Mrs. Palmer, 62 years old, died after a stroke Friday in a nursing home at Wilmette, Ill. She had lived since last June with her daughter, Mrs. Nacy Strickland of Wilmette. Her husband, who died Aug. 20, 1931, was supply pastor for 10 years and was a member of the board of Lindenwood College for more than 40 years.

SCOUTMASTER, 2 SCOUTS DROWN WHEN CANOES UPSET

UNION CITY, Pa., May 12 (AP)—A scoutmaster and two Boy Scouts were apparently drowned today after five canoes upset in rain-swollen French creek.

Missing were Scoutmaster Fred Coe of Union City and Scouts Harvey Brady, 16 years old, and Robert Sandoski, 14, both of Hammett, near Erie, Pa.

The three were in the lead canoe. It struck a submerged tree, and the other canoes crashed into it and upset.

Five other Scouts and two Scoutmasters survived. The Scouts were part of an overnight camp of troops from Erie, Union City and North East.

SUSPECT IN SIEBERT KILLING ATTEMPTS TO HANG HERSELF

Mrs. June Joy Milton, 26-year-old divorcee who was to go on trial tomorrow for the murder of Walter A. Siebert, chief supervisor for the St. Louis County Highway Department, was in serious condition yesterday after attempting to hang herself at Glenwood Sanatorium in Webster Groves.

She had looped a bed sheet over a curtain bar in a room at the sanatorium, where she was transferred by court order March 12 after trying to commit suicide three times at the county jail. A special deputy sheriff detailed to watch Mrs. Milton found her hanging by the sheet. Artificial respiration was applied.

Mrs. Milton's attorney, Merle L. Silverstein, said he was prepared to present evidence at her trial to show she is insane. Siebert was found shot to death and severely burned Feb. 13 in his home at 522 Ambergate drive, Webster Groves.

REUTHER BLASTS G. M., CHRYSLER FOR LAY-OFFS

Calls Short Work Week Effort to Cover Up Seriousness of Unemployment.

DETROIT, May 12 (AP)—President Walter Reuther of the United Auto Workers accused General Motors Corp. and Chrysler Corp. today of resorting to a short work week to cover up "the seriousness of the current unemployment situation in the automobile industry." He said it meant "spreading the burden of unemployment on the backs of the workers."

Reuther added in a statement:

"It also conveniently provides a prop to bolster the myth of Republican prosperity in this election year."

General Motors, employing nearly 400,000 hourly workers in diversified phases of industry, Thursday ordered a one-day shutdown of its nation-wide assembly lines. It left it up to individual assembly plant managers whether they wanted to close on Friday or Monday.

Chrysler Layoffs.

Chrysler Corp. Wednesday laid of findefinitely 6200 workers at plants in Detroit and Evansville, Ind. Chrysler yesterday suspended 6500 workers in its Chrysler division through Tuesday of next week. The shutdown order was confined to the two Chrysler plants in the Detroit area.

Ford Motor Co. also has laid off workers this spirng but has not disclosed the number.

Chrysler made no secret about its unemployment figures. The company said it employed around 130,000 hourly workers in the 1955 boom period. It estimated 38,000 employes have been laid off since cutbacks started late last year.

Reuther said in a televised interview Friday night that one out of every 11 workers in Detroit is unemployed.

The auto makers said the cutbacks were necessary to balance production with current customer demand. The industry has a backlog of 900,000 unsold new cars and it is trying to reduce the inventory to clear the decks for sale of new models next fall.

Reuther Statement.

In his statement of General Motors' and Chrysler four-day week, production of passenger cars during the week ending, Saturday, May 12, was down to approximately 111,000 units. This is 66,000 cars, or 37 per cent, below the corresponding week in 1955. Production so far in 1956 is down 23 per cent from the same 1955 period.

"Government releases put the total lay-offs in the industry at 148,000 as of May 5 and that doesn't include the most recent Chrysler lay-offs, nor G.M.'s one-day shutdown. Nor do the Government figures, taken from company reports, reflect the true situation. There is every isdication that many thousands more actually are now on lay-off or on short work weeks.

"These laid-off workers are victims of the reckless, irresponsible scheduling of production on the part of the industry in 1955—a scheduling which produced the record 750,000 unsold cars at the end of 1955 and has now pushed the inventory of unsold cars to 900,000 in 1956.

"The fall-off in sales—estimated for the first three months of 1956 at 16 per cent below the same period is 1955—is due, in part at least, to the insane competitive struggle in 1955. High pressure selling foolishly inflated the 1955 sales but, in doing so, chopped off a large share of the normal 1956 market."

A week ago Reuther urged heads of the auto companies and also of firms making farm equipment to join the UAW in a conference to "find a solution to this critical situation."

"So far," Reuther said today, "we have received no answers to our proposal."

SUSPECT IN COUNTY ROBBERY SEIZED BY FBI IN DETROIT

Frederick Eugene Sirles, 400 block of Missouri avenue, Alton, was arrested Friday in Detroit by special agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, J. Earl Milnes, special agent in charge of the St. Louis office of the FBI, announced yesterday.

Sirles was arrested on a complaint filed before United States Commissioner Edwin J. Bean Wednesday charging him with unlawful flight to avoid prosecution in connection with a first-degree robbery warrant issued by St. Louis county authorities, Milnes said.

The warrant charged Sirles with participation in a robbery at knife point of two women in St. Louis county, Milnes added. Sirles will be arraigned at Detroit on May 14.

The National Federation of Settlements and Neighborhood Centers will hold its thirty-ninth conference in St. Louis, this week, it was announced yesterday. The four-day meeting opens Thursday at 8 p.m. at Hotel Statler.

Five hundred workers are expected to attend the conference, which will study housing, integration, youth activities and other problems related to settlement work.

The Rev. Dr. John B. Thompson, dean of Rockefeller Chapel at the University of Chicago, will speak at the opening session. George Mitchell, director

BAR ON BERMUDA SHORTS

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., May 12 (AP)—Florida State University women students won't be permitted to wear Bermuda shorts on the campus. Dean of Women Katherine Warren rejected a request that girls be allowed to wear the shorts on Saturdays.

She said the shorts are barred by 15 other southern universities and that permission to wear them would harm F.S.U.'s reputation.

Retiring Police Inspector Looks Back on Long, Eventful Career

George Parker Recalls Exciting Incidents and Crimes, Embarrassing Moments.

—By a Post-Dispatch Photographer.
GEORGE PARKER

George Parker, who will retire Tuesday as Inspector of Police, looked back on his career of more than 24 years yesterday and recalled some exciting times, including the night he and another officer put 21 bullet holes in an automobile they were chasing through city streets at 70 miles an hour.

It was a summer night in 1936 and he was a detective on the all-night shift. About 3 a.m., as he and his partner were cruising around they noticed a car moving unusually slowly at Chouteau and Compton avenues. The driver was being "too careful," and Parker decided to question him.

Answer Is a Bullet.

The answer to his first question was a bullet through the windshield of the police car, and the chase was on. "Pretty soon we were going around and around through a circular street in South St. Louis and it was hard to tell whether we or the other guys were doing the chasing," Parker said.

Eventually the fugutives, two of them, abandoned their machine on the grounds of the St. Louis State Hospital at 6200 Arsenal street and hid. The car was loaded with burglary loot. As the officers beat the bushes, one of the men managed to get into one of the buildings and hide but was caught the next day. The other was apprehended some time later.

Parker, a native of Smith's Grove, Ky., and a veteran of World War I, became a probationary patrolman Jan. 25, 1932, and worked his way up through the ranks until he became inspector March 18, 1953, with the rank of Lieutenant Colonel. He had been assistant chief of detectives since February 1947.

Much of his service was in the Lucas Avenue and Lynch Street districts, in which police officers have much to keep them busy.

Cited Three Times.

Parker was especially effective against burglars and robbers, and was cited for honorable mention by the Police Board three times, once in 1939 and twice in 1940.

The first was for solving 30 burglaries. He obtained information that a man had been selling shoes at remarkably low prices, and sought him out and followed him for two days. The man eventually went to some houses believed to be vacant, and there Parker caught him with a large quantity of shoes that had been stolen from interstate shipments.

The officer also reminisced about his most embarrassing moment. It was in prohibition days. In a neighborhood hangout of the old Cuckoo gang he thought he saw a pistol bulging from the waist of a youth and stopped to question him. The youth ran. Parker, drawing his revolver and shouting "Halt!", went after him, and a street full of people ducked.

Parker fired a warning shot, and finally cornered the youth in an empty building. He ordered the youth to come out and he did, with hands up and with blood on his head. It turned out that what Parker had seen bulging was a pint of whisky. The blood? The bullet had hit a utility pole and splintered it, and a splinter caught his man behind the ear.

Hurt in Collision.

Parker is 55 years old, and lives with his wife at 3303 Watson road. They have a son and two daughters, all married.

The officer's application for disability retirement was approved by the Police Pension Board last week. He has been on sick leave since Nov. 7, when his police car was involved in a collision as he was responding to a riot call at the Workhouse.

I. A. Long, president of the Police Board, and James E. Chapman, chief of detectives, were with him but they escaped serious injury.

Parker still has dizzy spells. As for retirement plans he says he has only one at the moment —and that is to "get well."

J. S. M'DONNELL TO RECEIVE AWARD FOR KETC SUPPORT

James S. McDonnell, president of McDonnell Aircraft Corp., will be presented a certificate of merit and appreciation for his support of educational television at a brief ceremony tomorrow at his office.

A spokesman for television station KETC said McDonnell's company has been the largest single corporate contributor to the support of the educational television station having pledged a total of $70,000 since the station began operation in September 1954. Similar certificates will be awarded to other outstanding contributors, the spokesman said.

Presentation of the award will be by Arthur H. Compton, former chancellor of Washington University and now executive director of KETC, and the Rev. Paul C. Reinert, president of St. Louis University and chairman of the St. Louis Educational Television Commission.

YOUTH SHOT, SERIOUSLY WOUNDED IN AUTOMOBILE

Marvin Kropp, a laborer, of 4003A North Twenty-first street, was shot and seriously wounded yesterday at Easton and Taylor avenues.

Kropp, 20 years old, was brought to DePaul Hospital by two companions, Richard Martin, 19, of 4407 North Florissant avenue, and Robert Johnson, 20, of 4106 North Twentieth street. Police began questioning the three after finding that bullets had struck a fender and window of their automobile and one had lodged in the car top.

The youths said they were accosted by a man as they stopped for a red light at the intersection. The man shouted, "you want some trouble?" and began shooting, they said. One bullet struck Kropp in the back.

The LAKE VACATIONLAND St. Louisans have always wanted only 30 MINUTES FROM ST. LOUIS Lake Lorraine
Only 30 minutes away from St. Louis a beautiful new Lake Vacationland is rapidly coming into existence.
Among the beautiful hills of Jefferson County there will soon be a 50-acre lake of clear, sparkling water, with picturesque lodges, where busy men and their families will enjoy life as they have always hoped to do.
The same men who developed Lake Montowese and Fond du Lac are building Lake Lorraine, near Goldman, Missouri, less than 26 miles south of Affton on Highway 21 (Tesson Ferry Road). One small lake is now stocked and ready for fishing.
Lodge sites vary in size from 50x150 feet and up. Modern conveniences are available. Lodge site prices start at $650, and may be bought on convenient terms.
Lake Lorraine will NOT be open to the general public. It is being developed —and will be maintained—for Lodge Site owners and their guests.

EMERGENCY VEHICLE SIGNAL PLAN URGED BY GRAND JURY

City officials have been urged by the circuit court grand jury to give every consideration to acquiring a new electronic device for protection of emergency vehicles at busy intersections, it was announced yesterday.

The grand jurors, expressing concern about the number of accidents involving emergency vehicles, sent letters to Director of Public Safety Joseph Sestric, Mrs. Edward G. Brungard, director of public welfare; I. A. Long, president of the Board of Police Commissioners; Dr. Walter E. Hennerich, city hospital commissioner; Fire Chief Hugh Lyon, and Chief of Police Jeremiah O'Connell.

The electronic system, placed in city vehicles and on electric signals, would cause all traffic lights to turn red at the vehicles' approach. It was tested in March at Twelfth and Fourteenth streets on Market street. The devices would cost about $500,000 to install and $2 a month per unit to maintain.

ACTOR CALHERN DIES ON LOCATION IN JAPAN

Heart Attack Fatal to Star Who Lived in St. Louis as Boy.

NARA, Japan, May 12 (AP)—Louis Calhern, distinguished star of Broadway and Hollywood, died of a heart attack today while on location for his sixty-ninth film, "Teahouse of the August Moon." He was 61 years old.

The veteran actor had been in Japan since last month and had appeared to be in good health except for a slight cold during the last few days.

On the stage, the tall, long-nosed actor is best remembered for "Life with Father" and as Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes in "The Magnificent Yankee."

In the latter role, he had the distinction of being the only actor in the history of Broadway to win every award, by critics and groups, in one season.

Among his films were "Executive Suite," "Julius Caesar," "Annie Get Your Gun," and the screen version of "The Magnificent Yankee."

His acting career began at 14

Stricken

at the Metropolis Theater, New York. Later he joined the Cecil Spooner stock company. He then spent two years with the Park Theater, St. Louis, the city to which his family had moved him at an early age and where he was educated.

In World War I he enlisted in the Army and served in France as an artilleryman.

Mr. Calhern had been married four times, each marriage ending in divorce. His wives, all actresses, were Ilka Chase, Julia Hoyt, Natalie Shafer and Marianne Stewart, who divorced him last year.

Calhern Considered St. Louis His 'Old Home Town.'

Mr. Calhern was brought to St. Louis at the age of 6, and lived here until he quit high school and went to New York in 1911 to pursue a theatrical career. He always considered St. Louis his "old home town."

He and several other members of the Central High School football team had been hired to carry spears in a Shakespearean production, and, as he recalled many years later, he was "hopelessly smitten with the idea of going on the stage for good."

His father was in the tobacco business. He had wanted to be a writer, and when the youth appealed to his artistic side he gave him $100 for a try at Broadway.

His real name was Carl Henry Vogt, but he changed it to please an uncle who considered acting a low form of human endeavor and said the name Vogt should never be connected with show business.

For a first name he adopted the Louis in St. Louis, and turned Carl Henry into Calhern.

His last appearance here was last September, as director and leading man of "The Wooden Dish," which had its premiere at the American theater and then was taken to New York.

FIRM OFFERS NATURAL GAS TO 12 EAST SIDE AREAS

A proposal to supply natural gas to 12 Illinois communities was announced yesterday by Vulcan Gas Co. of Mount Vernon, Ill., which was organized last year by O. A. Holdren, a Mount Vernon contractor.

The firm has obtained 25-year franchises from Lebanon and Mascoutah in St. Clair county and Aviston, Trenton, New Baden, Albers, Germantown and Bartelso, all in Clinton county, it was reported by R. H. Anderson, company engineer. It is seeking franchises also in Carlyle, Beckemeyer and Breese, and proposes to serve the Alton Box Board Co. and a number of other industrial plants.

Anderson said the program calls for construction of 32 miles of transmission lines and a complete distribution system in each community. It is proposed to purchase natural gas from Texas-Illinois Pipeline Co., whose 30-inch pipeline from Texas to Chicago passes near Carlyle. The company is preparing to apply to the Illinois Commerce Commission and the Federal Power Commission for operating certificates, Anderson said.

INTELLECTUALS ARE URGED TO SHARE THEIR KNOWLEDGE

The primary function of the intellectual is the pursuit of truth, but he also has the responsibility to communicate his knowledge and participate in the direction of society, Thomas P. Neill, author and professor of history at St. Louis University, said yesterday.

Neill, who delivered the final lecture in the annual series of the university's Graduate School, said the trend in America has been for the intellectual to disassociate himself from the rest of society. Intellectuals cannot afford to be unconcerned with the social functions of communicating the truth and giving direction to society, because decisions then will be made by those not qualified, he declared.

The problem is difficult, Neill said, when it is realized that the intellectual is a very potent force in society whether he is highly regarded or not. A healthy relationship between intellectuals and the rest of society cannot be established until "the pursuer of truth respects the popularizer of truth, and occasionally even helps him," he said.

NURSERY GROUP TO HOLD DINNER MEETING TOMORROW

The eighth annual dinner meeting of the Nursery Foundation of St. Louis will be held at Temple Israel House, 5017 Washington avenue, at 6:30 p.m. tomorrow, it was announced yesterday.

After a business meeting and installation of officers there will be a panel discussion on "Standards for Day Care Nurseries."

The Nursery Foundation, a United Fund agency, was the first inter-racial, non-sectarian day care center in St. Louis.

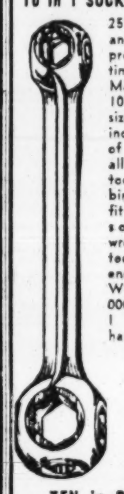

SOUTH SIDE LIONS SHOW

A benefit show entitled "The Lions Roar" will be given by the South Side Lions Club at the American Theater Thursday and next Sunday nights, starting at 8 o'clock.

The entertainment will include numbers by a singing and a dancing chorus of men, music by a band known as the Gravois Gravel Grinders, solo performances and tricks by magicians. Proceeds will be used by the Lions Club for its various charitable projects.

RAILS TO HIGH SINCE 1930, THEN INDUSTRIALS FALL

Mid-Week Word of Gen. Motors' One-Day Shutdown Plan Incites Selling and Carriers Go Along.

By JOHN G. FORREST
Financial Editor, The New York Times.

(Copyright 1956, by The New York Times Co.)

NEW YORK, May 12.

WITH one major exception, prices in the stock market backed and filled to a stand-off through midweek. The exception was the rail group, which abandoned its perennial laggard role and spurted to the highest point since 1930.

On Thursday afternoon the dam broke. Leaders were swept back 1 to 6 points and the averages slipped to their lowest level in a month. This occurred after the announcement of General Motors that it would shut down all assembly plants for one day. Volume rose as bids fell. Even the rails lost their buoyancy and fell back sharply. The G.M. shutdown and cuts in production of other automobile makers should be recognized as a storm warning in the automotive industry. This was the first time since the Korean war that General Motors had so curtailed its operations in May, normally a period of peak sales. The demand for new automobiles continues to disappoint Detroit. Overproduction has become a "specter" in 1956.

Steel business continues good, although some "serious problems" may be developing. Roger M. Blough, chairman of United States Steel, told stockholders that the company was unable to meet all the demands of its customers. It plans to spend at least two and one-half billion dollars for expansion in the next five years but, Mr. Blough said, the only way to finance this construction is by stepping up efficiency or raising prices.

The present level of earnings, said Mr. Blough, is inadequate to finance the capital expenditures contemplated. Higher prices are a "last resort," he added, although in the absence of a more realistic treatment of depreciation there is simply no other course.

Meanwhile, observers indicate that the forthcoming steel wage talks may be among the toughest in recent years. The seriousness of the situation will be determined by labor's attitude in pressing its demands for certain benefits. And labor seems serious about premium pay for weekend work.

Prices of investment-grade bonds continued to fluctuate irregularly in moderately active trading. The downward pattern of the last three months has not been reversed. As measured by the New York Times average, listed corporate obligations are at the lowest point in several years. However, in the market for new liens, there has been a noticeable firming in prices since mid-April, when so-called "AA" bonds hit the market at a 3.77 per cent yield basis, the highest yield or lowest price since 1953. Similar issues have since been offered on a 3.55 per cent basis.

The Treasury apparently feels that it is expedient to maintain the present high rate of construction—both industrial and residential. W. Randolph Burgess, under-secretary of the Treasury, intimated as much at the annual meeting of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks.

"It is no longer a secret we are not going to put out a 3 per cent bond issue now," said Mr. Burgess. "A long-term bond will be offered when market conditions are somewhat better, because a bond of this nature attracts the same kind of fund that goes into mortgages." Issuance of such a bond by the Treasury would draw funds away from that field, and as Mr. Burgess pointed out, such a move is not desirable now.

With the presidential election less than six months away, congressional leaders are devoting a great deal of attention to drafting a farm bill that the President would consider workable. It was disclosed that nations of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization were studying the creation of a food stockpile as an emergency measure. Foodstuffs, particularly wheat and other grains in "oversupply," would be shipped to Europe to offset low production there.

SOME U.S. ISSUES GAIN ON THE WEEK

Corporate List Backs and Fills—Final Trend Lower.

NEW YORK, May 12 (AP)—Corporate bond prices backed and filled this week, winding up with a tendency toward the downside.

United States Treasury obligations, particularly long-range bonds, chalked up increases but they were smaller than the previous week.

Investment quality corporates and foreign dollar liens declined while rails and utilities were unchanged. The industrial segment of the Associated Press index of 60 representative bonds was the only one to move up, and that was only a hesitant fraction.

Trading on the big board was heavier than in previous weeks. The total was $22,281,000 par value, compared with $20,952,000 last week and $17,802,100 for the same week in 1955.

Some convertibles registered gains for the period. Hertz Corp. 4s jumped 19½ to 147½ in fairly active trading. Dow Chemical 3s were off 1½ at 145¾.

In the foreign list Japan 6½s of 1954 were steady while German and Polish industrial issues worked lower.

Intermediate Government issues were soft but there was strength in the long end. For the week, the 2½ per cent bond of 1963 dropped 2-32 at 90 6-32 bid. The Victory 2½s of December 1972-67 gained 4-32 at 94 4-32. The 30-year 3¼s moved up 10-32 at 103 18-32. The 40-year 3s climbed 12-32 at 93 28-32.

The new securities market made progress this week but there was a wait-and-see tendency evident among investors as dealers girded for the offering of General Electric Co.'s $300,000,000 of debentures this coming Tuesday. The gigantic issue will be handled by a nation-wide syndicate of underwriters headed by Morgan Stanley & Co. It will be followed next month by American Telephone & Telegraph Co.'s proposed $250,000,000 issue of debentures.

HOG TOP OF $16.60 IS HIGHEST PRICE SINCE SEPT. 1955

NATIONAL STOCK YARDS, Ill., May 12—The hog market staged a vigorous advance to the best level in over seven months and cattle also strengthened, according to the Producers Live Stock Marketing Association. Lambs were mostly higher under light receipts. Prices for barrow and gilt hogs were up 50 to mostly 75c to a practical top of $16.50 cwt., highest since September 28. One small lot Friday reached a peak of $16.60. However, the bulk of mixed butchers, 180 to 240 lbs., that day moved at $15.75@16.

Dependable buying characterized the cattle market, with slaughter steers, heifers and cows advancing 25@50c. Stocker and feeder steers were firm; bulls fully steady. Vealers and calves were unchanged, except for a weak close.

Prime 1171-lb. steers topped for the week at $22.50, while bulk of choice steers was $19.25@21; good and low choice $17.50@19; commercial and low good $16@17.25. Choice heifers and mixed yearlings were $18.50@20. Veal calves sold downward from $26.

After gaining $1@2 during the first four days of the week, spring lambs lost all of the upturn in Friday's trading. Observers had warned that the market was in a vulnerable position. From a top of $29, paid sparingly Thursday, best offerings Friday stopped at $27. Old crop lambs were scarce and $1 higher, and ewes declined $1. Bulk of choice and prime spring lambs for the week was $26.50@28.50; good and choice wooled lambs in small lots $23@23.75.

Week's Review Of Business And Finance

DAMPER ON BOOM

By WALTER BREEDE JR.

NEW YORK, May 12 (AP)—A spate of layoffs in the auto industry put a damper on the business boom this week. For the first time since the Korean war big General Motors ordered a full one-day shutdown at all its United States auto plants. Affected were some 390,000 employes in 119 Cadillac, Buick, Oldsmobile, Pontiac and Chevrolet plants in 64 cities. G.M.'s action, coupled with slowdowns and shutdowns by other makers, triggered a sharp sell-off on the stock market which suffered its biggest break since April 10.

The troubles of the auto industry were spotlighted on another front this week. Studebaker-Packard Corp., one of the last of the industry's small independents, reported a net loss of more than $14,000,000 for the first three months of 1956. At week's end it was reported that the company was seeking a big defense contract and a merger with an aircraft firm as a way out of its difficulties.

Weather a Factor.

So far this year the auto industry has been pinched by a general slowdown in consumer installment buying. TV sets, appliances, furniture and farm machinery have felt the pinch, too. Consumers last year went into hock at a rapid clip for new cars and other installment purchases; many seem reluctant to take on more debt now. To make matters worse, the hoped-for spring pickup in auto sales has been curbed in wide areas of the country by an unusually long siege of cold, rainy weather.

The influence of a cold spring has been apparent in other fields of business. Manufacturers of air-conditioning equipment have cut back production. Home building has been delayed, with a resultant slowdown in output of lumber and plumbing fixtures. Consumption of heating oil has soared.

In the Building Field.

There was good news for the homebuilding industry this week. F. W. Dodge Corp. reported that contract awards in April hit a new high of more than $1,100,000,000. These are contracts for future construction in the 37 states canvassed by the Dodge organization east of the Rocky Mountains. The April 7 total is 7 per cent ahead of the like month last year. On the basis of contract awards to date, fewer homes will be built this spring than last, but total dollar volume will be greater. That's because the trend is toward larger homes which carry higher price tags.

Also encouraging was the latest official Government report on total business activity or "gross national product." In the first three months of 1956, this gross national product—or total value of goods and services produced—was at an annual rate of 398½ billion dollars. That's down slightly from earlier government estimates, but still the highest for any quarter in United States history. Part of the increase, however, was due to rising prices.

Need for Saving.

Have Americans drifted away from the thrifty habits of their ancestors? W. Randolph Burgess, undersecretary of the Treasury, reported this week that people are saving only 6½ per cent of the income they have left taxes compared to 8 per cent in previous years. Said Burgess: "This is disturbing and is a further indication that we are not saving today quite enough to finance the rapid rate of growth of which we are otherwise capable. . . . It is when we rush the spending faster than the rate of savings, and do it too heavily with borrowed money, that we run the risk of inflation. We have tended to do this in the past year."

SPRING RAINS SEND MOST GRAINS LOWER

Corn Benefits Most From Moisture — Soybeans Course Erratic.

CHICAGO, May 12 (AP)—Spring rains, late but plentiful, brought a decline in most grain prices on the Board of Trade this week. The most noticeable weakness was in new crop corn, but there also was an easy tone in new crop wheat, oats and rye. New crop soybeans wound up with little price change. There were some exceptions to the main trend. Old crop wheat and soybeans, not influenced by the weather, scored modest gains. So did May oats.

Wheat closed the week 2⅝ lower to 2⅝ higher, corn 3⅞-4⅝ lower, oats 1⅜ lower to ⅞ higher, rye 1¾-3¼ lower, soybeans unchanged to 3½ higher and lard 50 to 77 cents a hundred pounds lower, May $13.10.

The rains were most pronounced in the corn belt, relieving the moisture deficiency in that area. This has put the soil in good condition for planting the new crop. However, planting has been held up beyond the normal date by cold weather.

Throughout the week soybeans continued to attract most trading attention. Old crop beans fell off 10 cents, the daily limit, Wednesday. The decline was extended early Thursday, after which the market rallied. On Friday the gains amounted to almost 10 cents.

On Friday wheat advanced in response to a Government crop report which placed the crop at 681,000,000 bushels, quite a bit less than the trade had expected. But buying was not very aggressive.

Postponement of part of Greek and Argentine soybean oil purchases brought about the midweek decline. At the finish of the week traders were talking about large potential soybean oil exports and processors were still buying cash soybeans.

Wheat declined during the early part of the week, rallying in the last few days. Approach of the harvest acted as a restraint on speculative buying but there was no heavy pressure on the market.

On the basis of average yields for the spring wheat crop, production of wheat this year would be less than the estimated disappearance for 1956-57. That would lower the carryover on July 1, 1957—the first decline since 1952.

Oats were influenced by the weather and rye went down with wheat. A farm bill approved by the Senate Agriculture Committee would boost price supports on these two grains, but not as much as in the bill passed by the House.

Lard suffered a sharp decline for the week in sympathy with a break in loose lard prices. However, some recovery was noted Friday.

LOCKHEED in GEORGIA MOVES AHEAD AGAIN!

Staff of 500 Seen For A-Plane Plant

W. R. Rhoads to Head Dawsonville Project, To Be Biggest of Its Type in Nation

Lockheed Aircraft Corp., wasting no time in the development of nuclear aircraft testing facilities at Dawsonville, announced Tuesday that W. R. Rhoads will head up the Dawsonville project.

Mr. Rhoads, who lives at 120 Osner Dr., NE., is chief staff engineer at Lockheed's Marietta plant now. He has been with Lockheed since 1941.

He will direct the work of the approximately 500 scientists, engineers and service personnel who will be employed at the Dawsonville site.

LOCKHEED AND the Air Force officially announced Monday night at a dinner at Gainesville that they intend to build a 10,000-acre, multi-million-dollar nuclear aircraft test site just southwest of Dawsonville (population, 350).

And, perhaps as significantly, Lockheed's top Georgia executive hinted that the actual manufacture of a nuclear-powered plane—perhaps the world's first—might take place at Lockheed's Marietta plant.

AND there's more that can't be published—yet

CLASSIFIED

The world's largest integrated aircraft plant, at Marietta, Georgia, — where we build Lockheed C-130 Turbo-Prop Cargo planes and B-47 Jet Bombers—welcomes this new Lockheed program in Georgia.

Here are projects to challenge the very limits of imagination, vision, ability and capabilities of man!

This new atomic development and its effect on the adjacent manufacturing plant and new Engineering facility at Marietta, creates far reaching additional opportunities for Engineers and Scientists in a wide range of categories in both places.

Here is a program that is literally long range in both scope and product.

Qualified Engineers and Scientists interested in becoming associated with this progressive and rapidly expanding organization are invited to inquire for further information or personal interview.

ARCHBISHOP CAN RETURN TO POST, HUNGARY SAYS

Joszef Groesz Said to Have Pledged Church-State Co-operation.

VIENNA, May 12 (AP)—Communist Hungary said today Premier Andras Hegedues has received Roman Catholic Archbishop Joszef Groesz and told him he could return to his former post.

The official Hungarian news agency MTI said also that Hegedues told the Archbishop he could assume the chairmanship of the Roman Catholic Bench of Bishops in Hungary.

MTI added these details to the previous announcement that Hungary had granted a pardon to the Archbishop, who was sentenced in 1951 to 15 years in prison on charges of plotting to overthrow the Red regime.

Restricted Freedom.

Hungary announced last March it had suspended the sentence of Archbishop Groesz, who became the country's ranking Catholic after the arrest of Cardinal Josef Mindszenty in 1949.

The Archbishop wrote to his brother recently that he had been living under restricted freedom in the village of Toszeg.

The news agency also released a statement attributed to Archbishop Groesz in which he thanked the Prime Minister and promised to co-operate in "furthering and deepening the good relations between the Catholic Church and the state."

Austrian Catholic authorities said they did not know what to make of the statement attributed to the Archbishop. They added, however, that in the eyes of the Church the head of Catholicism in Hungary is still Cardinal Mindszenty, who was sentenced to life imprisonment in 1949 by the Communist Government for alleged high treason.

Cardinal Mindszenty was reported released from prison in July 1955 and is said to be living in an asylum for priests near Vas in southern Hungary.

Austrian Catholics said they suspected that the Hungarian government had made overtures to Cardinal Mindszenty to resume active leadership of the church under stipulated terms but that he refused.

Reported Statement.

The Hungarian news agency said Archbishop Groesz made a statement to the Communist government which said in part:

"I think the government of the Hungarian People's Republic that its noble gesture permits me to return to my archdiocese of Kalosca, to my arch episcopal chair and there to join in building for the future.

"Permit me to attach some words of deeply felt gratitude. The favorable change in relations between the Catholic Church and the Hungarian state showed the correctness of the line followed by the Hungarian Catholic Bench of Bishops under the presidency of the late Gyula Czapik, Archbishop of Eger. (Archbishop Czapik was acting head of the church in Hungary after Mindszenty's arrest. He died April 25.)

"I would like to maintain this line during my activity as a bishop. My aim is to deepen the good relations between the Catholic Church and the state. To that end I should like to support, as far as is in my power, the efforts and measures of the government aimed at raising the living standard of our people, since it is also in the interests of the Church that its followers should have a life of dignity and welfare. I want to be a worker for the cause of peace. I want to be this in accordance with the spirit of the Gospel and the repeated manifestations of Pope Pius XII, head of the Catholic Church. I am the follower of Him who proclaimed: Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God."

SCIENTISTS HAIL AEC RISK POLICY AS ENCOURAGING

WASHINGTON, May 12 (UP)—The Federation of American Scientists yesterday praised the Atomic Energy Commission's new security-risk policy as "an encouraging and important step toward a fairer and more realistic security program."

The federation, which claims to represent more than 2000 United States scientists and engineers in all fields, said the new regulations do not settle "some of the issues" raised in criticism of government security programs.

It said, however, that the new AEC policy, which minimizes a "casual" past link with subversives as a serious cause for charges, will "permit the scientific community to make a greater contribution to our long-range security."

KEFAUVER IN AUTO STOPPED FOR SPEEDING IN CALIFORNIA

CHOWCHILLA, Calif., May 12 (AP)—An automobile carrying Senator Estes Kefauver was stopped today a few miles north of Chowchilla and the driver was cited for speeding.

"Maybe if I slow you down a little you'll get where you're going," highway patrolman Robert Horton told the Democratic candidate for presidential nomination.

Horton said that Mrs. Marion Kent of San Mateo, the driver, was going 95 miles an hour.

The patrolman gave Kefauver a little lecture on highway safety and recommended that he slow down.

"We will," answered the Senator. "It was my fault."

Political Charcoal Feeds Fires For Gridiron Banquet Roasting

Washington Newsmen Portray President Campaigning From 'Full-Time Country Club'—Both Parties Lampooned.

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 12—The front porch of "The Full Time Country Club," amply stocked with golf sticks and fishing rods, was portrayed by the Gridiron Club at its seventy-first annual dinner tonight as the setting of President Eisenhower's campaign for re-election.

The theme of the Washington newspaper men's satire was more political than usual because of the election year and their burlesque was divided impartially among Republicans, Democrats, lobbyists, discharged administration men who were allowed to resign and the Russians.

President Eisenhower was the guest of honor and responded to the club's only toast, "To the President." Other guests included practically all the top officials of his administration as well as members of the Supreme Court, the diplomatic corps, the Defense Department and leaders of Congress.

Off-the-Record Speeches.

The off-the-record speeches were made by Gov. Christian A. Herter of Massachusetts for the Republican party and Senator Lyndon Johnson of Texas, Senate majority leader, for the Democrats.

The political note of the show was sounded by gridiron president Roscoe Drummond of the New York Herald Tribune who said in his opening "speech in the dark":

"Surely the President must be very pleased tonight to see among us so many fine conservative humanitarians — those Republicans eager to march forward with Eisenhower, protesting every step of the way.

"I can't answer for the sand traps on the course this evening but I will say this: We've come a long way from the simple days when Dr. Dooley said that the Supreme Court follows the election returns. Not any more. Now, the Supreme Court makes the election returns.

"All the Republicans know what they want—just an unshakable grip on those coattails and then they can soar above principle."

Democrats Not Neglected.

Drummond didn't neglect the Democrats, either.

"After a moderately long deliberation a jury of Democrats has found Ike not guilty—and sentenced Nixon to hang for it," he remarked.

"Half of the Democratic party is intent on secession. The other half seems to prefer suicide. Republicans say that if the Democratic politicians were laid end to end—they would point in all directions.

In the Republican skit, the country club front porch was crowded with men and women in sports clothes, among them two physicians with stethoscopes around their necks. As actors portraying Secretary of the Treasury George M. Humphrey and White House press secretary James C. Hagerty discussed the ease and economy of a country club front porch campaign, a train whistle was sounded in the distance. Asked about a whistle-stop campaign, Dr. Paul White first observed that "President Eisenhower is the first Republican candidate in history who can give medical proof he's got a heart," and then sang to the tune of "Summertime":

"Summer time, time for taking it easy,
Fish are biting and the golfing is fine.
And the G.O.P. on the front porch is resting,
For whistle stops are sure out of line.
One of these fine mornings they're going to rise up singing
Just singing for folks, please to come their way.
And till that morning, G.O.P. sits waiting
For stay-at-home votes to win the day!

Sherman Adams Song.

Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr. and Sherman Adams, the assistant to the President, moved on the stage, with Brownell observing that "the Government is in good hands. Adams replied "everything is in good hands—with an Adams in the White House" and then sang to the tune of "Honey Babe":

"Who lifts all the heavy load?
Sherman, Sherman.
Keep Ike on the middle road?
Sherm, Sherm,
Who's just like a prairie flower
Growing wild for Eisenhower?
Sherman, old Sherm, that's me.
Who says who can get a job and
Who can turn the White House knob?
Sherman, old Sherm, that's me.
Who the policy will fix
Which will win in fifty-six?
Sherman, old Sherm, that's me."

Senator William F. Knowland of California was quoted as saying he had switched to President Eisenhower with great enthusiasm, that he had done it "the hard way." He sang improvised words to "You Made Me Love You."

Again the distant train whistle of the Democratic campaigners was heard, but Republican National Chairman Leonard Hall told the country clubers not to be disturbed because "we've got Ike and Robert Montgomery." He then sang to the real President at the head table:

"You alone could make it known
You alone could make the decision
You said 'Yes' in happiness
We're making plans for tele-e-vision
We don't have a lot to tell
And you're the one who must re-sell the nation
With your grin and magic name to win—
It rests with you alone."

Democratic Skit.

The Democratic skit was laid in a farm yard and the members portraying top Democratic leaders were in gray flannel suits and carried "farmer" labels.

Senator Stuart Symington of Missouri was introduced by Speaker Sam Rayburn as "a real country slicker" and the Missouri dark horse sang to the melody of "Sweet Sue":

"Let the rest have fun,
I'm the only one.
Sweet Stu
For you
When they're all worn down
I'll still be roun'
Sweet Stu
For you
Adlai's lost his steam
Estes's off the beam
And Ave knows now that he never will come through.
I'm a glamour boy
Though a wee bit coy
Sweet Stu
For you."

The skit closed as former President Truman, described as a "writing man", entered the stage pushing a wheelbarrow full of books. He sang to the tune of "Sixteen Tons:"

"Sixteen Tons. What have I got?
Some facts that are true and others that are not Saint Peter, if you want me, best use a noose
I owe my soul to Hen-er-ee Luce.
I arose one morning, I was fighting mad.
Said Doug MacArthur was a sack that was sad.
Sad Sack Mac, he tried to talk back.
I decided I would have to give him a whack.
If you see me coming, better step aside.
A lotta men didn't, a lotta men cried.
One fist of iron, the other of fire.
If a man says he beat me, he's a low-down liar."

There was a lobbyist skit laid in the politicians' Garden of Eden—a "paradise where all contributions are large, there's no conflict on interest and where they pass nothing but natural gas bills."

Foreign Satire.

The foreign affairs satire was laid at the Aswan dam site in Egypt, where Americans and Russians had alternately built sections of the dam. Bulganin and Khrushchev came to dedicate "their dam" and they told how they accomplished it with their "happy, happy, people." They sang, to the tune of "Whatever Lola Wants, Lola Gets," how they made the little people of Russia work:

"Whatever Ivan wants, Ivan takes,
And Little men, little Ivan takes you.
Make up your mind we make no mistake.
Recline yourself, resign yourself, you're through.
We're sure to get what we came for,
And between the eyes is what we aim for,
Whatever Ivan wants, Ivan takes.
Call off your plans.
Don't you know you can't win.
You're no exception to the rule.
We're irresistible you fool, give in."

St. Louisans among the 500 guests were Charles Hentschell, Sam Shelton Sr. and Evarts A. Graham Jr. of the Post-Dispatch.

BILL AWARDING $100,000 TO CODE EXPERT IS SIGNED

WASHINGTON, May 12 (AP)—President Eisenhower signed a bill yesterday awarding $100,000 to William F. Friedman for his invention of highly secret cryptographic devices for the Government.

The action is in line with the Government's policy to reward inventors for such contributions toward national defense.

Dr. Charles F. Kettering, chairman of the National Inventors Council, which was created to stimulate inventors to aid national defense, said he was delighted by the President's action. He said this is "a significant recognition of invention as a tool of security which should serve as an incentive to other competent inventors."

PRINCE RAINIER AND BRIDE ENTERTAINED BY FRANCO

MADRID, May 12 (UP)—Prince Rainier and Princess Grace of Monaco were guests of honor today at a luncheon given by Generalissimo Francisco Franco and his wife at the Spanish leader's private residence, El Pardo.

Several Spanish cabinet ministers and their wives also attended.

Before going to Franco's residence, on the outskirts of Madrid, the prince and princess attended a special showing of the newsreel of their wedding last month at a theater on Madrid's Gran Via. Spectators applauded as they entered and left the theater.

WORLD HEALTH BODY OPENS WAY FOR RETURN OF REDS

GENEVA, May 12 (AP)—The World Health Assembly voted without opposition yesterday to charge the Soviet Union only token assessments for the years it was absent on a "walkout" from the United Nations World Health Organization.

The Soviet Union and eight other Communist states, which left the organization in 1949, are expected to accept this proposed settlement and return at an early date. In the case of the Soviet Union, the W.H.O. is dropping assessments of about $2,500,000.

The assembly decided to accept a token payment of 5 per cent, about $125,000, for the period during which the Soviet Union was absent.

LAWMAKER DENIES LAND SPECULATION

Representative Wickersham Sold Site Where U.S. May Erect $22,000,000 Building.

WASHINGTON, May 12 (AP)—Representative Victor Wickersham (Dem.), Oklahoma, said today he has given full reports to counsel for both the Senate and House Public Works committees on his former ownership of the Gold Mine property near Great Falls, Md.

The tract is being considered by the General Services Administration as a possible site for a new $22,000,000 Geological Survey building.

Montgomery county land records show Wickersham bought 375 acres 14 months ago for $242,000. Last March 14, he sold 355 acres to Swanson Associates of Birmingham, Mich., for $427,500.

The records indicate he paid $650 an acre, but Wickersham said other costs ran the price to $950 an acre. He sold to the Swanson firm for about $1200 an acre. The other 20 acres were sold earlier to a Girl Scout camp group for $1500 an acre.

"There was no interest in the Government or anybody else when we bought it," he said. "We bought it for development. It was all open and above board. I never tried to sell it to the Government."

Wickersham said the Gold Mine property is just one of a half dozen sites in the area being considered by the GSA.

Wickersham said he was not in the real estate business here. He said he quit the field eight years ago, after engaging in the business during a two-year gap in his congressional service.

Montgomery county land records show two other real estate purchases by the Congressman, and some subsequent sales.

On April 28, 1955, he bought 88 acres near Potomac, Md., for $28,500. He sold 20.68 acres for $20,000 June 24, 1955, and last November he sold another 5.6 acres for $8000. Records indicate he still holds 62 acres of the tract.

On July 16, 1955, he bought 171 acres in the same area for $90,000, and three days later sold the acreage to a syndicate for $120,000.

MAN KILLED IN AUTO COLLISION, 5 HURT

All in Family Injured in Ladue—Woman Dies in Illinois Crash.

A man bearing papers of Gayeton A. Ponte, formerly of the 1000 block of Cole street, was killed and five members of the Adolfo Cantu family of Elgin, Ill., were injured yesterday in a head-on collision on Lindbergh boulevard at Ladue road, Ladue. Ponte was 61 years old.

Most seriously hurt was 18-month-old Elizabeth Cantu, who suffered a head injury and was kept at St. Louis County Hospital, where the others were treated. Mrs. Cantu suffered a fractured jaw and other facial injuries. Cuts and bruises were suffered by Cantu and two other daughters, Linda, 5, and Thelma, 4.

A witness, Charles S. Lamy, 9530 Ladue road, was quoted by the Missouri Highway Patrol as saying the crash occurred after Ponte, traveling south at a high speed, applied his brakes and careened across the five-lane highway and into the northbound lanes. The cars collided at the east edge of the pavement, where Cantu had driven to try to avert a crash.

The patrol estimated the speed of Ponte's machine at 65 to 70 miles an hour. Speed limit in the zone is 45 miles an hour. Lamy said Ponte apparently applied his brakes in an effort to avoid striking Lamy's automobile, which was stopped as Lamy waited for a light permitting a left turn.

The Cantu family was returning from a trip to Texas, the highway patrol reported.

Miss Irma Harris, 1006A Missouri avenue, was killed yesterday when the automobile in which she was a passenger collided with a truck on U.S. Highway 66, one mile south of Edwardsville. She was 27 years old.

Five other occupants of the car were hurt, two seriously. All are Negroes.

Injured seriously were David Spilkener, 2319 LaSalle street, and Michael Cruzat, 2304½ LaSalle. Miss Catherine Jones, 2302½ LaSalle, driver of the car; Philip Jones, 2724 Hickory street, and Miss Joyce Ann Wilken, 2240 Hickory, also were hurt.

Wesley L. Barron, Dallas, Tex., driver of the truck, suffered minor injuries. Illinois highway police were told that the automobile skidded and swerved into the path of the truck.

James Mireles of 5A North Ninth street, a news vendor, was seriously injured yesterday when he was run over by an automobile as he lay on a grass plot at Plum and First streets.

Mireles told police the driver of the automobile stopped, lifted him to a sitting position and said, "You're not hurt," and then drove away. Mireles suffered internal injuries when the right front wheel of the automobile passed over his stomach. He was taken to City Hospital.

CHILDREN DIGGING IN GARDEN FIND $1000 TREASURE

COLD SPRING, Minn., May 12 (AP)—Everyone is wondering who buried a lot of money in a Cold Spring backyard some years ago.

Three young children of Victor Weber and a neighbor boy digging in a garden found broken pieces of a bottle. Alongside the glass the youngsters found two rolls of stained $20 bills.

The money was sent to a Minneapolis bank. About $500 was in good condition. Some bills, badly deteriorated have been sent to the Treasury Department in Washington to determine if they are redeemable.

A barn once stood where the Weber children, David, 9, Darlene 8 and Patrick, 7, and a playmate, Michael Trueman, 8, unearthed the treasure, estimated at nearly $1000. Weber, a clothing store operator, said it is not yet clear who has prior claim to the money.

HANDBOOK RAIDED; OWNER OF TAVERN ARRESTED

Members of the police gambling squad raided a handbook at the tavern of Walter P. Groesser, 2871 South Thirteenth street, and arrested Groesser yesterday.

The raiders, armed with a search warrant and headed by Lt. John Bloecher, seized tickets for a lottery, they reported, in addition to the regular betting tabs, form sheets and other paraphernalia for horse race betting. Records indicated that about $300 in bets were placed daily over two telephones in a rear room of the tavern, police said.

Groesser, who lives at 807 Cumberland drive, St. Louis county, was booked suspected of setting up a handbook and suspected of possession of lottery tickets. Police said the lottery, at $1 a ticket, offered a $200 prize to the holder of a winning number, composed of the first three digits of the amount paid on the daily double at Fairmount race track.

ACTING SERGEANT FAVORING KIRKWOOD INQUIRY RESIGNS

Acting Sgt. Aubrey A. Love of the Kirkwood Police Department, one of several signers of a petition asking for an investigation of the department recently, resigned yesterday. He had been a policeman for three years.

Love, who was the only sergeant to sign the petition, said he planned to re-enlist in the Navy as an aviation mechanic, second class. Before joining the police department he had served eight years in the Navy.

Chief of Police Kenneth Peek, noting Love's resignation left his force with only 20 men, announced he planned to advertise for police recruits and would hold a written examination next Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at headquarters. One officer has been discharged and six others have quit recently. Some have complained of dissension in the department.

INDIVIDUAL CELL UNDER STUDY AT WASHINGTON U.

Young Microbiologists Seeking Most Fundamental Secrets of Nature.

A group of young scientists in the department of microbiology of the Washington University School of Medicine, headed by Dr. Arthur Kornberg, are probing in their laboratories some of the most fundamental secrets of nature—the chemistry of the individual cell, on which all life is based.

It is an absorbing study, in which each man has his own personal field of interest and research. Beside Dr. Kornberg, key members of the group are Dr. Melvin Cohn, associate professor of microbiology; Dr. Paul Berg, an assistant professor, and Dr. David Hoagness, an instructor.

It is also described by other scientists as "the most highly competitive field in medical research today," and it is an area where a number of universities and medical centers are competing for top-flight talent. Several of the scientists in the group here have turned down lucrative offers to go elsewhere.

Work Recognized

Dr. Cohn's work received high recognition recently when he was the recipient of the annual research award in bacteriology and immunology presented by the Eli Lilly Co. at a meeting of the Society of American Bacteriologists at Houston, Tex. In 1951, Dr. Kornberg received the Paul Lewis Award in enzyme chemistry.

"The bacteriologist's picture of the disease-producing bacterium once stopped with the tiny bacterium itself — which could be seen with the microscope and identified by scientific tests as the cause of disease," Dr. Kornberg said.

"Now," he continued, "microbiologists are examining the intricate, complicated machinery which is at work within each virus and bacterium. For these micro-organisms are elaborate chemical factories, in which the processes are not only similar to those of animal cells, but in some instances far more complicated."

The excitement of scientists as they identify and describe these processes for the first time, Dr. Kornberg said, can be compared to the wonder of someone who might, for the first time in his life, open the hood of an automobile and examine the complicated machinery which lies beneath.

A cell, he explained, is the "most essential element" in living matter. In the hundreth part of a drop of blood, there are between 5,000,000 and 6,000,000 red blood cells. And when he works with bacteria and viruses, as Dr. Kornberg and his colleagues do every day, the microbiologist is handling entities less than one-hundredth the size of red blood cells.

The Washington University scientists explain that each living cell, and by the same token, each virus and bacterium, is a complete "factory." It takes simple building blocks and makes use of them to live and to reproduce—just as a living animal, on a much larger scale, lives from the food it eats and the air it breathes.

The research group here aims to understand the processes by which the cell takes in material from the surrounding environment and converts it into substances like nucleic acid and protein, from which it builds its nucleus and cellular substance.

Dr. Kornberg, then an officer of the United States Public Health Service at the National Institutes of Health, Bethesda, Md., received his 1951 award for studies of the enzymatic process of nucleotide formations.

Nucleotides, he explained, are complex molecules which are themselves aggregates of a number of elements—and which are the building blocks of nucleic acid, a basic substance which is the major component of the cell nucleus.

This work has led to Dr. Kornberg's current studies, which are an attempt to discover how nucleotides are put together by the individual cell to form nucleic acid—for each cell manufactures its own constituents.

Individual chromosomes which pass on hereditary traits in all living things, from one generation to the next, are composed of nucleic acid, Dr. Kornberg added, and the nucleic acid is believed to be the "mold" responsible for calling the hereditary signals.

"We want to understand how a cell reproduces itself," Dr. Kornberg said, "because if the problem of how normal reproduction occurs is better understood, then it may be possible to suggest drugs which inhibit the critical steps of the growth of abnormal cells like cancer cells."

The work for which Dr. Cohn received last week's award involves the study of the mechanism of protein synthesis. This means the manufacturing of protein by the individual cell, in another operation of its complex chemical factory.

The particular protein which he studied was an enzyme manufactured by Escherichia coli, bacteria which frequent the human intestine. This bacterium manufactures an enzyme which breaks down lactose— but manufactures the enzymes only when it is exposed to the lactose, not at other times.

Dr. Cohn is now studying the analogy between this process, in which a micro-organism responds to the presence of a substance, lactose, by producing an enzyme capable of splitting it, and the way animal and human tissue produced an antibody when a foreign material is introduced.

Woman Recruited in Mexico As Maid for Immigration Chief

WASHINGTON, May 12 (UP)—A Senate Appropriations subcommittee may peel off the "closed" label that the Department of Justice stuck on the case of immigration commissioner Joseph M. Swing's government recruited Mexican maid.

A top Department of Justice official told reporters rather stiffly the department considers the maid case "closed." But a subcommittee staff member said today the group still expects answers from the department Monday on some questions posed by Senator Lyndon B. Johnson (Dem.), Texas.

How many government man-hours did it take for an undercover man to persuade the girl to quit her job in a Juarez restaurant?

How many more man-hours were spent getting her a visa and sending her to Washington to be a maid in the home of Swing, a retired general and West Point classmate of President Eisenhower?

How many other top immigration officials in Washington have solved the maid problem the same way?

Swing was appearing before the subcommittee to seek funds this week when Johnson asked him about the maid problem. He asked Swing also whether Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr. used an immigration service plane on a trip to see Johnson's political foe, Gov. Allan Shivers, at Woodville, Tex.

The Justice Department said in a statement yesterday that Brownell was on "official business" to speak to the Houston Bar Association and inspect penitentiaries. It said he did not use the plane to go to Woodville.

Swing told the subcommittee it's hard to find a maid in Washington.

So, he said, on one of his inspection trips to El Paso, Tex., he asked the district immigration director: "I wonder if there is any little Mexican girl over in Juarez who would like to immigrate and come over and go to work for me?"

Swing said an undercover man across the Rio Grande in Juarez—though Swing added that it was "off the record" that the service had undercover men—told him later: "I know a fine little girl working in this restaurant."

The retired general said he telephoned the district director from Washington and told him: "Put her on the plane and I will send the money down there and pay for her visa and her passage up here. If she wants to immigrate, fine."

Johnson read a letter from a career immigration employe complaining that solving Swing's maid problem took "numerous man-hours, telephone calls and so forth."

The letter also said "other maids were recruited by other immigration dignitaries now serving in Washington."

Swing said he had the only Mexican maid he knew of and he didn't think it took too long to get her. He said maybe the undercover man "interrupted his lunch hour" to talk with her.

Johnson said his tipster said nothing about lunch hours. Swing promised to investigate and report how many man-hours were involved.

FINSTERWALD LEADS SUNSET FIELD BY ONE STROKE

NO-HITTER BY ERSKINE AS DODGERS DEFEAT GIANTS

EIGHT HOME RUNS AS CUBS ROUT CARDINALS, 14-10

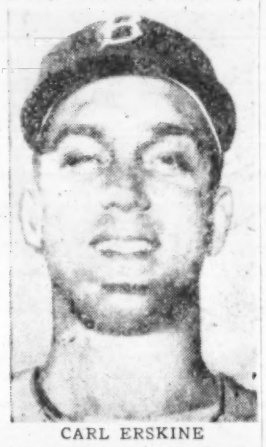

SCORE 3-0 IN SECOND CLASSIC BY KING CARL

BROOKLYN, May 12 (UP)—Carl Erskine, the Brooklyn Dodgers' scrappy little right-hander fighting to overcome an arm ailment, slow-balled his way to the second no-hit, no-run game of his career today in beating the New York Giants, 3-0.

The 29-year-old veteran from Anderson, Ind., used a blazing fast ball to no-hit the Chicago Cubs back on June 19, 1952. His speed was gone today, but his guile and courage carried him through.

A crowd of 17,395 at Ebbets Field watched in tense silence as Erskine muffled the Giants' bats inning after inning with his tantalizing slow curves. Five balls were hit hard against him, but two were foul and brilliant fielding by Jackie Robinson, Carl Furillo and Pee Wee Reese prevented the others from becoming hits.

Rookie Bill White of the Giants and veteran Whitey Lockman each walloped a ball over the right field fence but each was foul by a few feet. Robinson speared a fourth-inning line drive by Willie Mays to prevent one hit; Furillo grabbed a line drive by Daryl Spencer in the same frame to forestall another, and Reese collared an eighth inning line drive by Pinch-hitter Don Mueller.

By coincidence, the major leagues' last previous no-hitter was pitched exactly one year ago on this date, by Sam (Toothpick) Jones of the Chicago Cubs against the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Erskine is the seventeenth pitcher in major-league history to hurl at least two no-hitters during his major-league career, the only other one still active being Virgil Trucks of the Detroit Tigers. Four of these have pitched three no-hitters in the big leagues.

Erskine struck out only three batters, but he also walked only two as his pinpoint control paid off.

The ladies' day crowd howled with every pitch in the ninth as Erskine approached his classic. Pinch-hitter George Wilson opened the ninth by fouling off to First Baseman Gil Hodges. Lockman followed with his foul drive over the fence and then bounced to Erskine for the second out.

Alvin Dark ended the game by smashing an 0-2 pitch to the box. Erskine knocked down the blazer, then threw out Dark at first. He was promptly mobbed by his teammates.

Erskine, who suffered a calfification on his right elbow last season which made him ineffective for the last two months of the campaign, now has won two games and lots two this season.

CHICAGO, May 12.

MURRAY DICKSON, who lost three games with the Phillies, and Willard (2-0) Schmidt, if his right shoulder isn't too stiff, will be the Cardinals' starting pitchers in Sunday's doubleheader here. Southpaw Paul (1-2) Minner, owner of a 21-7 lifetime record against the Redbirds, and Righthander Sam (1-2) Jones probably will start for the Cubs.

Dickson, assigned Stu Miller's uniform (36), and handsome Herman Wehmeier, who was given Ben Flowers's No. 37, reported this morning from Pittsburgh and expressed pleasure over the trade. Dickson, the old Redbird, smiled as he explained, "not only is it great to be back, but it's wonderful just to be with a club that can score."

Grady Hatton, bought from the Red Sox Friday night, reported from Boston only a half-hour before this afternoon's game. The lefthanded-hitting 34-year-old Hatton, who has two for five as a pinch-hitter in the American League, was given No. 28, the uniform Joe Cunningham wore.

Hank Sauer, probably the Cubs' most popular postwar ball player, drew a tremendous ovation in pre-game practice. The "Mayor" of Wrigley Field responded by blasting a pitch far out into a street beyond left field.

FORMER EDITOR OF THE POST-DISPATCH

Takes Courage to Make A Trade That Looks Bad.

WHEN Frank Lane was given the job as general manager of the Cardinals last October, he undoubtedly had an understanding with Gussie Busch that he, Lane, was to have full authority over the baseball operation.

Lane apparently explained to Busch and Dick Meyer that he didn't plan to trade Stan Musial for Acre-foot Johnson and that he had made so many trades at Chicago because he didn't have any players particularly worth keeping. But we don't believe Lane would have taken the Cardinal job if there was going to be any one in the picture who could veto anything Frank wanted to do.

Lane, a baseball man of great energy and pride, wants to be a success as general manager of the Cardinals. And his measure of success will depend on what the Cardinals do on the field, the ration of their victories to the defeats they suffer. If he made a bad deal when he traded Harvey Haddix, Stu Miller and Ben Flowers for Murry Dickson and Herman Wehmeier, it will hurt him more than it will hurt anybody else—fan, vice-president, peanut vendor or columnist.

Lane and Fred Hutchinson must have great confidence in their own judgment, for it is doubtful if they could have found many observers, in dugout, press box or bleachers, who would have considered it a good idea to give Haddix alone for what the Cardinals are getting from Philadelphia.

Haddix won 20 games in 1953, dropped to 18 in 1954 and last year slumped to a dozen victories and 18 defeats. During a July game at Cincinnati, the Cardinals learned that the Redlegs had been calling Harvey's pitches or rather that Harvey had been tipping his curve and fast ball by throwing them from slightly different angles. It was believed he would be a winning pitcher again, but as a matter of fact he lost more than he won during the remainder of the season, so the mystery of what was the matter with Haddix continued.

Pitch a Bad One, And Away You Go!

MANY observers at spring training camp picked Haddix, despite his 1955 record, as the Cardinals' best bet for a 20-game winner. Hutchinson may have been talking through a cautious, newcomer's hat, but he said he saw no reason why Haddix shouldn't be a consistent winner. Walker Cooper agreed that Haddix should be an ace, adding, "I batted against him late last season and he struck me out on three pitches."

Haddix had a recent 20-game season as background, he was a better fielder than Vinegar Bend Mizell, knew how to hold runners on the bases and knew the hitters. He was having trouble with his control, but through his career he always had struck out more than twice as many batters as he had walked.

Yes, it's most difficult to figure out and it must be that Lane and Hutchinson know something that hasn't been apparent to other observers.

Of course, if every pitcher who has trouble is packed off to the minors or some other ball club, the Cardinals might wind up with a very excellent, but under-manned pitching staff.

Luis Arroyo, for instance, looked bad in an exhibition game with Kansas City in mid-April and was given the boot. Ben Flowers looked like the best pitcher on the staff during spring training, using box scores as a yardstick, but Brooklyn and New York treated him roughly in early May games, and he became expendable. Stu Miller was rocked for three home runs in succession and they bought a railroad ticket for him.

It's good to have Murry Dickson back. Harry Brecheen was a fine gentleman, too. And Jess Haines, a visitor at spring training, would be a credit to the Cardinals, as a gentleman and an old Redbird. Jess hasn't lost a ball game since 1937, which is a better record than either Wehmeier or Dickson has.

And here's an idea. Maybe Dizzy Dean is tired of that old TV mike and would like to come back to the old ball park at Grand and Dodier. And Old Diz may get a call if Mizell and Tom Poholsky and Willard Schmidt have a few bad days or a few intestinal obstructions.

Going back to Lane and Hutchinson, they showed especial courage because they made the fan-shocking deal when the Cardinals were riding high. And let's hope they have the last laugh. They certainly should know what they are doing. And, the fans might add, they'd better.

Former Boxer Dies.

MONTREAL, May 12 (AP)—John (Spike) Sullivan, 66, former Canadian light-heavyweight boxing champion and a one-time sparring partner for Heavyweight Champion Jack Dempsey, died yesterday in a hospital here.

32 HITS GOOD FOR 65 BASES; WHISENANT HAS BIG DAY of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

By Bob Broeg

CHICAGO, May 12—The game is never over until the Cardinals set foot in Wrigley Field, where the wind whistling through the stands is exceeded only by the velocity of Chicago line drives whenever the Cubs' country cousins come to town.

Take heart, though, dear Redbird fan. The Cards are improving here. Two years ago in their first game in the Windy City, they were swamped, 23 to 13. Last season the initial appearance brought a 14-4 walloping. By comparison, this afternoon's 14-10 trimming was a reasonable facsimile of a contest.

Keeping the Cardinals from taking the National League lead and pulling themselves out of the cellar, the Cubs hit with a vigor and authority they show against no other club. Manager Stan Hack was moaning beforehand about an attack that was so insipid he'd decided to shake up his lineup thoroughly.

Six Doubles for Cubs.

The Wrigleys had scored only 50 runs in 17 starts, during which they'd averaged an innocent homer a game. Today they burst into double scoring figures by blasting 15 hits good for 36 bases, a result of six two-base blows and five over-the-fence drives.

The Cardinals might have had several new faces and entirely different road uniforms, but they couldn't fool the Cubs, who'd carved them up in nine of 11 tries last year in this steel-and-concrete wind funnel on the shores of Lake Michigan. A year ago the not-so-bashful Bruins hammered 37, or 23 per cent, of their homers off the friendly fellows from the banks of the Mississippi.

A crowd of 14,556, taking advantage of Chicago's first warm weather of the season, had a picnic watching the home favorites romp over the Redbirds, who threw 21 players into the game, including five pitchers, and Manager Fred Hutchinson out of it in a futile effort to win at forensics if not baseball.

If it could be said there was a key play, it probably came when Umpire Larry Goetz ruled in the fifth inning, at which time the score was tied, 5 to 5, that Bill Virdon failed to make a catch in a somersaulting bid for a short fly. In the heated argument that followed Hutchinson was ejected for the first time in the National League.

The gruesome game had its puckish points, including the fact that Pete Whisenant, a former Redbird traded to Chicago for Hank Sauer, hit as many homers (two) in one game against the Cards as in 58 for the Redbirds last year. Sauer, meanwhile, tapped into a double play as a pinch-hitter. And another St. Louis newcomer, Max Surkont, making his Redbird debut, was the most mistreated of the eight mound men in action.

Mizell Kayoed in Third.

The Cardinals' starting pitcher, Vinegar Bend Mizell, who had reached the ninth inning in four previous outings, failed to survive the third round, but the third hurler, Gordon Jones, absorbed the loss. Bob Rush, big Chicago righthander who had gained the Cubs' only previous victory in their recent 11 contests, needed help for his second triumph.

For the Cubs, Whisenant was the most prominent of three players with three hits as he doubled in addition to homering twice and Pete also drove in four runs. For the Cardinals, whose 17 hits brought their team average to a rousing .300, young Hal Smith was the fea-

Umpires Refuse To Work, Some Muny Games Off

By Neal Russo

All Muny baseball games scheduled today at Carondelet and Sherman parks have been postponed because the umpires have refused to work until control of the umpires is removed from the hands of the Advisory Board of the St. Louis Baseball Federation.

The announcement by Les Hatchard, secretary of the Greater St. Louis Umpires Association, that his men would not show up for the two doubleheaders came as quite a surprise because Russ Wood, president of the same umpires' group, and the Advisory Board ended their meeting in harmony Friday night. The umpires' group at the meeting was granted an $8.50 per game rate for the North Side League and South Side League, whereas the Federation's maximum is $7.50.

Hatchard, who arrived late at that meeting, left in a huff before it ended. He told the Post-Dispatch that the Federation, made up of representatives from various groups using city parks, should stop regulating members of his umpires group.

Move Not Unexpected.

This latest "strike" called by the men in blue wasn't entirely unexpected, for the group has been arguing pay for several

Landy Beats 4 Minutes Again, May Quit Mile

FRESNO, Calif., May 12 (AP)—World record holder John Landy of Australia conquered the four-minute mile for the sixth time in his brilliant career tonight and later said this may have been his last race at the distance.

He won his special feature in 3:59.1, the slowest of his sub-four minute performances, and he was frankly disappointed at his failure to break his record mark of 3:58.

Landy said he may retire from the mile competition and concentrate on the 1500 meters in the 1956 Olympic Games. He has previously said he probably will quit running entirely after the Games.

His run nonetheless thrilled another California crowd.

Landy made his remarkable run with practically no opposition. Ron Delany of Villanova finished second about 50 yards behind.

Landy, running in the No. 1 lane, took the lead after the first 50 yards and held it all the way. He was clocked in 60 seconds flat for each of the first three quarters and then, sprinting in the face of no opposition, finished the last quarter in 59.1 as a standing-room-only crowd in Ratcliffe Stadium gave him a thunderous ovation for the last minute of the run.

It was the sixth time in his life that the slender Australian school teacher had cracked the four-minute barrier. He holds the world's record of 3:58 set at Turku, Finland, in 1954.

It was only last Saturday in Los Angeles that Landy lost a sensational race to Jim Bailey of the University of Oregon. In a head-and-head stretch battle Bailey was clocked in 3:58.6 and Landy in 3:58.7.

ED FURGOL'S 69 GIVES HIM 208 IN OPEN FOR 54 HOLES

By Robert Morrison

Dow Finsterwald, the young man from Ohio, remained in his front-running position in the $25,000 Carling Open golf tournament yesterday at Sunset Country Club, but the wolves were breathing down his neck.

The tournament circuit's ninth-leading money winner, Finsterwald shot the third round in a three-under-par 69 for a 54-hole total of 205, but he held only a one-stroke lead over his nearest pursuer going into today's final round.

Moreover, there were six capable players within four strokes of the Bedford Heights, O., player who hasn't known anything but first place in this event thus far. So officials were looking for another sudden-death playoff that has marked this tournament in all but one of its previous seasons.

Finsterwald had his moments when he might have blown himself out of the tournament yesterday, but he made stout recoveries from trouble on the third, fifteenth and sixteenth holes. And he continued to crack par on every nine-hole stretch he has played.

Casper in Second Place.

A gallery estimated at about 4000 circulated about Sunset's hilly acres, and for the leaders there may have been times when they wished there had been better gallery control. But as it turned out the only big contender to lose significant ground was slugger George Bayer.

Bill Casper Jr., a 24-year-old buddy of Gene Littler and Bud Holscher in military service and a money player for the last year, combined scores of 69-69-68 for 206 and was one stroke back of Finsterwald.

Billy Maxwell, the 26-year-old one-time national amateur champion from Odessa, Tex., shot 68 for 207. Stan Leonard, 40, one of Canada's top professionals who was tied with Finsterwald at 136 at the halfway mark, slipped with 71 for 207.

Next came Ed Furgol, the home town threat who is bidding not only for the $5000 first prize but also the $700 top money that will go to the best shooter in a $1500 Eastern Missouri division of the competition.

Furgol, who said it was a struggle all the way, belted out a 69 for 208, the same as posted by Holscher, a 25-year-old member of the younger set on the tour the last few years. British Open Champion Peter Thomson, scoring one of the two rounds of 66 on the third day, moved up to 209.

Finsterwald Being Chased.

Those were the wolves on the heels of the 26-year-old Finsterwald, who first came to the attention of St. Louis golf fans when he shot a final-round 61 as an amateur in the St. Louis Open at Algonquin.

The 240-pound Bayer, who was playing in the same group with Finsterwald in a combination that attracted the largest segment of gallery, slipped back to 211 with a third-round 73.

Bayer was in good company in that scoreboard slot. Masters champion Jack Burke, who only the night before had a temperature of 102 degrees from a score throat, showed his regard for the public by keeping at it and produced a 69 for 211. Another player with that score was M. C. Fitts, a 24-year-old pro of only six months playing out of Chattanooga, Tenn. He's shooting for his first pay check and really going strong.

In addition to Thomson, Fred Hawkins of El Paso, Tex., turned in a 66 for one of the best rounds of the tournament. Finsterwald has been low with his opening round of 65, which is seven under par for Sunset's 6277-yard course.

Poa Annua Tough.

They say the boys aren't "tearing the course apart" and it's true. But on behalf of the boys it may be said that the Poa Annua grass in some of the greens is making putting difficult.

Finsterwald, with his 205, today would have to shoot 69 to hit the 274 that players predicted would win this event. Casper would need 68, Maxwell or Leonard 67, and Furgol or Holscher 66. These are possible, obviously.

The young Casper had eight birdies in his round of 68 which

What a Day! Orioles' Ferrarese Within 3 Outs of No-Hitter

Man Named Hopkins.

STAN LEONARD, one of the ranking players in the thin ranks of top-drawer Canadian golf professionals, was explaining the difference between the Hopkins Trophy matches recently played in Fort Worth, and the Canada Cup matches in which Ben Hogan and Sam Snead are to represent the United States in Britain this summer.

Both have a connection with John Ray Hopkins, New York industrialist who was the moving figure in the International Golf Association which has instituted the Canada Cup matches.

The Hopkins trophy won by the United States team in the recent matches at Fort Worth is a competition between American and Canadian teams. The Canada Cup affair is an individual low score competition and a two-man team play among more than a score of nations.

In a few years this Canada Cup thing has become an event of some stature.

"Last year there were 26 nations competing," Leonard said, "and this year there will be 28."

Ed Furgol was one of the three previous individual winners in the Canada Cup. This was one of his few big triumphs after winning the American Open classic. He had 279 to win the trophy at Washington, D.C., last year as he and Chick Harbert edged Australia in the team competition.

Canada's Best.

LEONARD, a 40-year-old pro playing for Lachute Golf Clubs, which is 30 miles out of Montreal, is a long-time Vancouver home club pro who finally decided to give the American circuit a whirl.

"I could afford it and my wife was in favor it, so a year ago I decided to give it a go," he said.

He happens to be perhaps the second-ranking Canadian golfer of all time past. There haven't been many standouts.

"Sandy Somerville, who won the American amateur, was accorded the honor of being Canada's best of all time," Leonard said, "and I was a few points behind in the poll."

But through the years Canadian professionals have found it difficult to make an impression in competition with their American brethren. Al Balding, another Canadian currently showing in the tournament at Sunset, won a Florida circuit tournament last winter.

"That was the first Canadian victory on the circuit," Leonard said.

Internationally Speaking.

PETER THOMSON, who has made the British Open his oyster the last two years following Ben Hogan's historic triumph, is back from a South Africa exhibition series with Bobby Locke.

Peter, at 26, is the most promising overseas threat for the American Open title since Locke. He'll be shooting for the title again at Rochester this June. But he, too, has had difficulty in getting the winner's prize in this country. The nearest he has come was an outstanding effort at Tam O'Shanter.

"It's just coincidence," said Peter when asked if there seemed to be any reason for his not having won a tournament in several seasons of effort. But without appearing to make any excuses he did have a tart comment about the rough grow in order to toughen a golf course. His description was "queer kind of golf courses."

"Long grass has no place on a golf course," said Peter. "It's not a game in which you try to hide the ball. And another thing, there should be several ways to reach a hole, not just one."

Working Man.

RAY O'BRIEN, who has been a figure in supervision of P.G.A. tournaments in the field off and on for several years, appears to be a man working hard at the job that has had a high mortality rate in the last two decades.

The demands are great on a man who must try to please 30 or more important playing personalities on the circuit and still organize a loosely-run production week after week, arriving on the scene only a few days before the tournament is played.

Maybe it has been done before, but it was the first time we had seen it when O'Brien passed out lengthy information bulletins to the circuit stars during the tournament at Sunset.

Several long sheets of single-spaced typewritten matter were provided to keep the players up to snuff on dates and places, entry deadlines, changes in schedule, exemptions for major events, P.G.A. regulations, standard caddie fee procedures, and the like.

It must help cut the confusion inherent in managing such a great number of individualists.

Scott Airmen Plan Nine Grid Contests

A nine-game schedule, including two matches with Washington University's B team, was announced today for the Scott Air Force Base football team. Scott last fielded a grid squad in 1953, when it had a 3-1 record.

Sept. 22, Washington U. B team, there; Sept. 28, Keesler AFB, at Biloxi, Miss.; Oct. 6, Ellington AFB, Texas, here; Oct. 13, Sheppard AFB, Texas, here; Oct. 19, Washington U. Yanks Get 2 Safeties In Ninth

NEW YORK, May 12 (UP)—While Brooklyn's Carl Erskine took the major-league spotlight with the second no-hit game of his career today, young Southpaw Don Ferrarese of the Baltimore Orioles came within three outs of a similar feat against the mighty New York Yankees.

Ferrarese held the Yankees hitless until Andy Carey beat out an infield bouncer in leading off the ninth inning. He also gave up a single to Hank Bauer before winding up with a 1-0 shutout and the first major-league victory of his career.

Starting only the second game of his brief major-league career, Ferrarese not only baffled the heavy-hitting Yankees but also drove in Baltimore's lone run off Bob Turley with a single in the seventh inning. The Oriole rookie struck out eight in facing only 30 batters.

In other National League games, the Pirates knocked out Robin Roberts in sending the Phillies down to their ninth straight loss, 6-5, the Redlegs scored seven runs in the opening inning and went on to a 10-6 victory over the Braves, and the Cubs gained a 14-10 verdict over the Cardinals.

The Cleveland Indians moved within a game of the Yankees in the American League by turning back the Kansas City Athletics, 5-3. Early Wynn pitched a six-hitter and also delivered the Indians' decisive runs in the fifth inning when his bases-loaded single climaxed a five-run barrage.

The Chicago White Sox combined a 17-hit attack and tight relief pitching by Sandy Consuegra for a 7-6 squeaker over the Detroit Tigers. Minnie Minoso and Sherm Lollar each collected three hits for Chisox, who scored all their runs in the first five innings off Billy Hoeft.

Washington knocked Boston out of third in the American, scoring eight runs in the second inning for a 12-9 decision. Jerry Snyder swatted a double and triple in the big frame and later hit his first major league homer. Dick Gernert drove in six Boston runs with two homers and two singles.

Eight Homers, 32 Hits As Cubs Whack Cards

ture of an offense good enough to have won most games. The rookie catcher, hitting .571, knocked in three runs with two doubles and a single.

The Cards jumped to a 3-0 lead in the second on a walk, Rip Repulski's double misjudged by Whisenant in the wind, an intentional pass to Virdon, Smith's two-run single and Mizell's squeeze bunt.

Chicago came back in the home half with two on Ernie Banks's double and Whisenant's first 1956 hit, his first homer.

The Redbirds went 2-up again in the third on Ken Boyer's seventh homer, a line drive into the left field bleachers, but the Cubs went ahead in their third turn at bat. A walk and Frank Kellert's home run accounted for two tallies and after Mizell issued another pass, young Lindy McDaniel took over and gave up a single to Monte Irvin and a safety by Walt Moryn on a misjudged fly that still would have been deep enough to have driven in the leading run.

In the St. Louis fourth a single by Virdon and a double by Smith tied the score, but not for too long.

With Jones pitching in the Chicago fifth, one was out when Irvin got a double on the disputed play that caused Hutchinson's ejection. Moryn, one of only two lefthanded hitters in the Cubs' lineup, then lifted a wind-aided homer over the left field wall. Whisenant doubled and, after Harry Chiti struck out, Rush grounded to Don Blasingame, whose wild throw sent across the third run of the frame and prolonged the inning. A fourth tally went over on a double by Eddie Miksis.

Trailing by four, the Cardinals lost a capital chance in the sixth on Repulski's boner. Leading off, Rip singled, but was out trying to stretch the hit. Virdon quickly slammed his first '56 homer, Smith doubled and Solly Hemus slapped a run-scoring pinch single before Southpaw Jim Davis replaced Rush. Sauer, batting for Blasingame, bounced into a double play.

With a 9-7 deficit, the Redbirds still were in the game, but only until Surkont faced five batters in the sixth. Keller walked and Banks homered. Irvin grounded out, Moryn singled and Whisenant homered; four runs. Exit Surkont, Enter Larry Jackson, who gave up the final Chicago marker in the seventh on a walk and Irvin's double.

The Cardinals, carrying the battle to the finish, threatened in the ninth. Walker Cooper, first up, drilled a home run as a pinch-hitter. With two away, Stan Musial singled, Boyer walked and Wally Moon and Repulski hit successive run-scoring safeties.

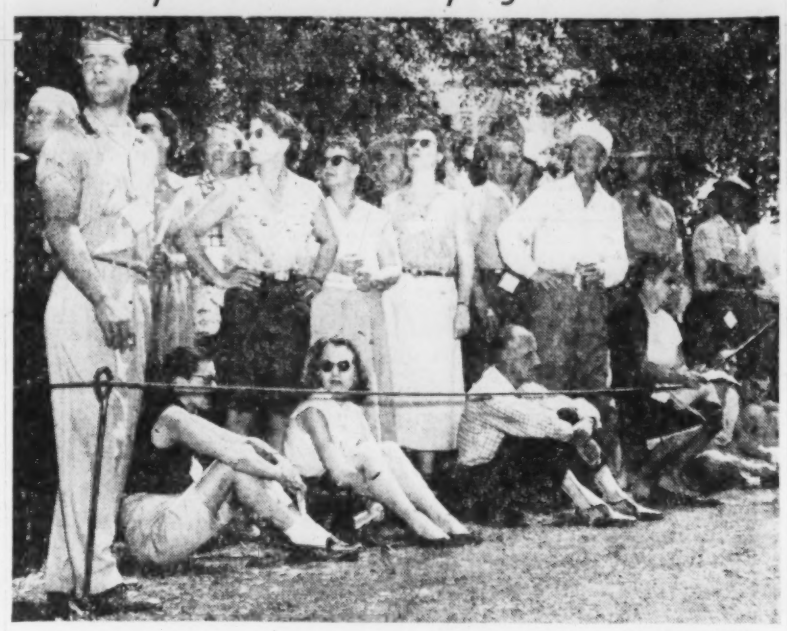

The potential tying run was in the dugout, however, when Righthander Vito Valentinetti replaced Davis and Grady Hatton made his first Redbird appearance, pinch-batting. Hatton hit one into the air, but the Windy City wind wasn't blowing hard enough to help that one or the Cardinals.

Finsterwald Leads in $25,000 Open Golf

moved him into sharp-striking position.

But maybe the real threat to Finsterwald is the cigar-smoking Maxwell, who is currently eighth-leading money winner on the tour.

When it was suggested that there should be a pretty good scramble in the final round, Maxwell grunted:

"I'd like to have a scrambling 67 in that scramble."

The little guy is getting better every day with a 70-69-68, so he just might do that. He has won the Mexican Open and Hot Springs, Ark., tournaments this year.

Blair Low Amateur.

Maxwell got a slow start on this third round. He was two over par for the first six holes. But then he was six under par for the last twelve. One of his fine shots was a No. 9 iron to within eight inches of the pin on the 357-yard fourth hole. Among his other birdies, he drove the 269-yard, par-four 12th, and knocked a six-iron to four feet from the pin on the 407-yard seventh.

Twenty-seven in the field were under par for 54 holes. The field was cut to the low 60 scorers and ties, which meant 62 players. Five local professionals and 10 amateurs also will be permitted to play the last round. Jim Tom Blair, Jefferson City, retained his low amateur lead with 71-73-73—217.

There will be television of the final day's play, officials announced . . . radio broadcasts of the finish are scheduled.

BETWEEN ROUNDS

by W. J. McGoogan

Robinson or Olson? That's a Question.

RAY ROBINSON and Carl "Bobo" Olson are to fight it out for the middleweight championship again. They are scheduled to meet in a 15-round bout at Wrigely Field, Los Angeles, Friday night in a nationally telecast contest with Los Angeles blacked out. Here it may be seen over KSD-TV, Channel 5, at 9 o'clock. Which means that the starting time in the fight city will be at 7 o'clock, or just about sundown there.

Here is one bout which has boxing fans stumped. All signs point to another triumph for Robinson, which would make it his fourth over Olson. Twice he has knocked out Bobo and again he won on decision. And yet—.

Robinson is 35 years of age. He has been in the ring a long time and the bout coming up will be No. 150 for him. Also Ray has never been one to lead a life of sacrifice and self denial.

So his physical condition is a big question. True, reports indicate that he has trained long and diligently for this match in which a loss will mean his finish for sure. But can he get back the bounce which his legs used to carry? And can he get it back for those pins to carry him 15 rounds, if necessary?

Should he turn loose like he did in Chicago last December when he kayoed Olson in the second round, his legs, of course, won't have to carry him very far.

Olson's followers shrug off that knockout at Robinson's hands but it takes a little more than shrugging to forget it. They say Bobo was in a terrible mental state that night with the knowledge that the rift in his marital relations was about to be made public and facts about his extra curricular activities about to become public property. Also he was faced with a suit for $500,000 by a man who claimed he should be his manager instead of Sid Flaherty.

Now, they say, these things are cleared up. His wife is to get a divorce and retain custody of their children and the suit was disallowed.

Then there is another matter which doesn't show on the surface. How did knockouts at the hands of Archie Moore and Robinson affect Olson? Did they puncture his confidence to the point where he is gun shy? Did they leave such an impression on him that he now is possessed of a glass jaw?

All these things probably will be answered when the two men get into the ring in Los Angeles. Certainly the same forecast for this one seems to prevail as it did for the one in December. The longer the fight goes the better chance Olson has for Robinson, even while he dropped Olson, looked anxiously at the clock in the Chicago Stadium, watching the seconds tick by.

Again Robinson will have to work fast and stop Olson quickly if he expects to win.

Odds Favor Olson.

AN odd thing is that the professional betting odds, quoted out of Los Angeles, indicate that Olson is favored at 6½ to 5. That is because betting men generally have believed that Robinson's knockout victory in December was a fluke.

An independent promoter, Jackie Leonard, is handling the program with the International Boxing Club being in strictly for television.

Leonard has declared that, at prices from $5 to $25, he expects an attendance of 15,000 and a "gate" of $200,000.

Each boxer has been guaranteed $75,000 and each has the privilege of taking 30 per cent of net receipts from all sources.

There is no return bout clause in the contract between the two scrappers.

So, as said before, a loss for Robinson probably will mark his finish while another setback for Olson may mark the end of the line for him. Certainly it would mean that Olson would have to start all over again to prove his right to top ranking among the 160-pounder and after 75 fights and at 29 years of age that's pretty hard to accomplish.

Umpires Call 'Strike,' Some Muny Games Off

years. There were reports, too, that the umpires had threatened to keep away from last Sunday's Muny openers, but then had a change of heart.

Gus Wamhoff, president of the North Side League (temporarily at Sherman Park No. 2) and the South Side circuit (temporarily using Carondelet Park No. 2 diamond, called off the games after receiving word of the umpires' plans last night. He said it was too late then to obtain fill-in umpires, supposedly to be furnished by Bud Grasser, commissioner of the Amateur Softball Association and secretary of the Muny Association.

Wamhoff said he decided against using coaches or others as fill-in umpires because this is only the second week of the season and thus there is time to make up the games.

At Sherman Park No. 2, Kutis North was to meet Borbein-Young in the big attraction and Polish Falcons were to play Union Printers.

At Carondelet Park No. 2, Kimacks were to face Gravois and Carondelet Sunday Morning Club, defending Muny champion, was to meet Kutis South.

Lewis Takes Three Firsts, De Soto High Wins Class B Meet

New Relay Record by Principia

By A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., May 12.—Glenn Lewis, whose track competition is stymied only by limitation on the events he may enter, led DeSoto High to a track and field title in the Class B outdoor championships at the University of Missouri here today.

Lewis won the high and low hurdles and broad jump, tied for fourth in the pole vault and anchored the mile relay team that, finished second to Principia Academy's record-breakers. Lewis scored 24 3-5 points of the 33 1-5 which DeSoto scored for a narrow victory over nearby Crystal City, which finished second with 32.

It was the second-place relay finish that pushed DeSoto ahead, as the Crystal City team did not score in that event. But the margin of victory was represented entirely by the fourth-place pole vault ties by Mike Hunter, son of Coach O. N. Hunter, and Lewis that were good for 1 1-5 points.

Lewis set a Class B record in the 120-yard high hurdles at 15 seconds, one-tenth better than the 1952 mark held by Bill Constantine of St. Louis Chaminade. Glenn won the low hurdles in 20.9 seconds and the broadjump at 21-5.

Seven records were set in the Class B and Class C events, and two were good enough to be state high school records.

The first came when Dick Cochran of Brookfield threw the discus 172 feet 8½ inches, bettering the 1949 state record of 161-1 by Becker of Ferguson.

Lary Nealy of Wentworth pole-vaulted 12-4¾, bettering the state record of 12-4½ held jointly since 1939 by Meletio of University City and Rothwell of St. Louis Blewett.

Class B records went to Robert Miller of Butler with 50.2 seconds in the 440-yard dash; Crystal City's half-mile relay team of Richard Byas, Terry Biehli, Gordon Jones and Dick Cook, that won in 1:32.5; and Principia's mile relay team of Bob Woodall, David Gibbs, Richard Overby and Philip Ratcliff, that won in 3:36.5.

West Platte Wins.

West Platte of Weston set a new Class C mile relay record at 3:35.5 with a team composed of David Shanks, Orville Blakeley, Joe Bunge and Bob Kincaid.

The West Platte winning relay team, together with Bob Kincaid who doubled as winner of the mile and 880-yard run, accounted for more than half the 46 team points scored by that school in winning the Class C championship. North Platte of Dearborn was second with 27 3-5 points, while Springfield Greenwood, co-defending champions with West Platte, finished fourth with 16 1-10 points, trailing Meadville in third place with 18.

Ronald Sayers of Meadville was the top individual in the Class C events, scoring 18 points as he won the low hurdles and took seconds in the high hurdles and 220-yard dash.

He'll Uncoil in State Title Meet

—By a Post-Dispatch Photographer.

JERRY WILKES, of St. Louis U. High, who just won the St. Louis District prep championship in the shot put, is favored to take the Missouri high school championship in the meet at Columbia next Friday and Saturday. Wilkes won the District title, Friday night, when he tossed the 12-pound ball 56 feet 3¾ inches.

Sumner to Build Hopes For State Track Title On Miler Ron Gregory

By Harold Tuthill

Hopes were bright after Friday's district meet that the state Class A outdoor track championship would be brought back to St. Louis from Kansas City. Southwest High there won the fifty-third meet last year at Columbia.

Sumner captured senior division honors in the district competition here with Vashon and Washington Tech slightly behind and McBride and Kirkwood pressing the Public High schools for top positions.

Sumner will build its state hopes around a sure first—Ron Gregory in the mile. The wide margin he opened between himself and the rest of the field reminded observers of the nickname hung on a Missouri miler of recent years—Lonesome John Munski—who beat the opposition so handily he was all alone at the finish.

Will Go in 880 Also.

Gregory ran his specialty in 4:26.9, which is an improvement upon his own Missouri record established last year, 4:28.3. He also will run in the 880 and hope to move up a notch from his second place finish in the 1955 state meet.

The Bulldogs from Sumner High also could score with their half-mile relay team of Sam Joseph, Eugene Stafford, James Buchanan and Willie Bates, a combination which beat out University City, C.B.C., Kirkwood and Beaumont, in that order, in Friday's district finals. Sumner's time was 1:31.4, just slightly slower than the state mark, 1:30.1, posted in the 1955 affair.

Other St. Louis individuals who could capture state crowns in the two-day carnival at Columbia are William Sanders of Vashon, Missouri's best broad jumper at a consistent 23 feet plus, and Jerry Wilkes of St. Louis U. High, the man of muscle who handles the 12-pound shot like a baseball. He has gone 57-6, which would substantially improve the present record. That is 54 feet, 3¾ inches, and is held by Lynn Goodman of Kansas City Southwest, who set the mark in 1953.

Sprinters who should be heard from at Columbia include Rufus Davis of McBride and Don Herd of Washington Tech, while a group combination from Kirkwood may re-write the mile relay mark. That quartet is composed of Paul Hunker, Bill Cronin, Harry Wood and Bob Hallahan and Friday they sped around the Public Schools Stadium oval in 3:28.8, as compared to the state record of 3:30.6 set by Springfield Central in 1950.

Indians' Comfort.

University City's Bill Comfort still is the best high hurdler in St. Louis and is the Indian's chief claim to fame in a season which has been less brilliant than usual.

Virtually all the Class A schools in the St. Louis area will send delegations to Columbia for Friday's preliminaries. The finals will be run off Saturday afternoon. Class A schools are those with an enrollment of 500 and upwards. Class C schools, those with fewer than 200, and Class B, those between 200 and 500, held their finals yesterday.

Country Day will defend its championship in the twenty-ninth annual A.B.C. League meet Friday at Taylor Field, while Chaminade will hold its seventh annual invitational meet, the finals of which will be run off Thursday. St. Louis U. High won the meet last year.

Preliminaries of the A.B.C. meet will be run off Wednesday, and the Chaminade trials will be held Tuesday. There will be two classes at Chaminade—senior and junior.

Villas and Carondelet No. 2 Meet in Heine Meine League Feature

Ballwin Vs. Vigus In County

Although two Muny senior leagues were knocked out by the umpires' walkout, plenty of baseball action is on the docket today, in two other Muny circuits, as well as the County League, the Catholic Youth Council and the Khoury Association.

The Muny feature is the meeting of the Red Villas and the Carondelet Sunday Morning No. 2 squad at Heine Meine Park in Lemay. After their game, which starts at 12:45, Hoffmeistess will oppose Simpkins.

In last Sunday's openers, the Villas, managed by ex-Brownie Johnny Tobin, used a seven-run rally to down Simpkins, and Carondelet No. 2 knocked off Hoffmeisters.

In the only other Muny contest, the Schmersahls will oppose the Overland Braves in the Berkeley League at 2:30 in Jackson Park. The Schmersahls won their first game.

Ballwin and Vigus, who are in a three-way tie for first place with Twin City Reds in the County League's American division, meet at Vigus. Twin City visits defending champion Creve Coeur, which has dropped both of its starts this season.

The only unbeaten teams in the County's National Division, Glencoe and Twin City, will meet at Festus. Glencoe has won twice, Twin City once.

Muny managers are hopeful absenteeism won't be as high as last week when the following were missing: Gene Valloni, Carondelet No. 1, had to take police department examination; teammate Dink Cunningham took off because of wife's illness; Jim Doerr, Hoffmeisters, poison ivy; Tom McCormack, Kimacks, flew to Philadelphia on annual business trip.

The hard-luck Hoffmeisters, who lost three regulars in one game last season just after rosters were frozen, also played without hard-hitting Moon Ruesch after the first inning of their opener. He came up with a charley horse after whacking a double to the hill in left, a drive that could have been a home run.

Missouri Loses Meet to Kansas; Nine Marks Fall

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., May 12 — Kansas turned in so many great performances it would be difficult to pick the top one as the Jayhawks swamped the Missouri Tiger track and field team, 83-43, here this morinng.

The Jayhawks won 11 of 15 events, slamming the javelin, broad jump and mile, and led a wholesale assault on records that established nine new marks for one of the nation's oldest dual meets, dating back to 1901.

Establishing themselves as contenders for the National Collegiate crown and with individuals who certainly will be Olympic contenders, the Jayhawks surrendered only four firsts to Missouri, two of them by St. Louis' Charles Batch, who won both the hurdles. Bob Lang of Moberly in the high jump and Pete Orr, of Kirkwood, in the 440 were Missouri's only other first placers.

Orr set one of the records, however, with a 48.2 second quarter mile mark. Kansas's Dick Blair, however, set two new sprint records, winning the 100 in 9.5 seconds and 220 in 29.9. Both races were run against a quartering wind that had gusts up to 30 miles an hour.

Another outstanding record was Al Oerter's 182 feet, 2½ inch discus throw, within eight feet of the intercollegiate record for the sophomore from New Jersey. Bill Nieder, who holds the intercollegiate shot put record at 60 feet, 3 inches, won with a 58 foot, 10 inch toss today as he resumed competition after a two-week layoff with an arm injury. The toss was good enough for a dual meet record here.

Among other meet record-setters were Les Bitner with 211 feet, 5¼ inches in the javelin; Elaine Hollinger, 24 feet, 3 inches in the broad jump, and Dave Tams, 133 feet, 7 inches in the pole vault.

The Summaries:

SHOTPUT—Won by Bill Nieder, Kansas, 58 feet, 10 inches; second, Al Oerter, Kansas, 52 feet, 3½ inches; third, Fred Weisel, Missouri, 46 feet, 10 inches. (New meet record, old record 56 feet 9 inches by Nieder, 1955.)

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., May 12 (AP)—With Walt Godfrey giving up only one hit in the first game and Bill Mills scattering six in the second, Michigan State whipped Illinois, 2-0 and 2-1, in a Big Ten baseball doubleheader here today.

Bears Polish Jewell Again, Triumph 12-4

Washington University's baseball team used different tactics to achieve the same end, a top-heavy victory over William Jewell College yesterday afternoon. The Bears spotted the visitors from Liberty, Mo., a 3-0 lead and then rallied for a 12 to 4 triumph.

Friday the Bears scored six runs in the first two innings of a 17-3 rout. Yesterday they scored two in the fourth, two in the sixth, one in the seventh and seven in the eighth. It was the fifteenth victory in 20 games for Irv Utz's Bears who have three more games to round out their regular season schedule.

Dick Hatz, who pitched all the way for Washington, gave up 11 hits. Bill Hawk, who toiled all eight innings for Jewell, yielded a dozen safeties, three of which were made by Bob Ladd.

All three of Washington's games will be at friendly Liggett Field this week. Eastern Illinois, a previous victim, calls on Tuesday, and the Bears host Bradley's Braves for two games on Friday and Saturday.

Mexican Soccer Team Wins at Chicago, 5-0

CHICAGO, May 12 (AP)—Mexico's National Amateur Soccer Champions, the Occidente team, won their opener of a five-game tour today, defeating the Necaxa Club of Chicago, 5-0.

Occidente held the St. Louis Simpkins to a 1-1 tie last Sunday and is scheduled to meet the Chicago National Soccer League All-Stars tomorrow afternoon.

Occidentes never had to extend themselves in beating the Necaxa Club. Abel Ortega, a clever center-forward, scored both goals for the team from Guadalajara for a 2-0 halftime lead.

In the second half, Occidente scored three more goals aided by a strong wind. Rado Castro, Enrique Orosco and Santos Mesa scored second period goals with ease against the tiring Necaxa defense.

Parades to Mark General Khoury Openers in Area

Official opening ceremonies of the Khoury Baseball Association will be held today in Kirkwood, with a motor parade preceding the program at 2:30 in Kirkwood Park.

The parade for the traditional Mother's day opening will feature teams in the Kirkwood area, which started out with three squads and has grown to 30. The Kayser School on North Geyer will be the starting point for the parade at 1:30 p.m. and Kirkwood Park will be the destination. Two midget teams will play a game there at 2:30.

George Khoury, founder of the leagues, will speak and Mayor Berthold of Kirkwood will throw out the first ball.

Other big Khoury openings today include the one by the Riverview School District Athletic Association at the Surrey Corners Park on Chambers just east of Bellefontaine. More than 1000 boys from five areas, Bissell Hills, Glasgow Village, Hathaway Hills, Hathaway Meadows and Riverview will march through their respective areas starting at 11 a.m. and meet at Rapp's at 12:15 before parading en masse to the park.

The Scott Air Force band will lead the parade, which will include five high school bands and three orchestras. John Bogdanor will throw the first ball and Leo Wieck will be master of ceremonies. Ten games will be played on the four diamonds.

A "Mother of the Year" will be chosen. Last year's was Mrs. Ernest Boyd, whose husband sold the group the ground for the park at what was said to be a very reasonable price.

Oh Johnny, 7 to 1 Shot, Beats Eiffel Blue in the Withers

Golf Ace Runs Out Of Money

NEW YORK, May 12 (UP)—Mrs. Wallace Gilroy's Oh Johnny, a colt with no aspirations for the triple crown classics, pulled away from the field in the stretch at Jamaica today to win the eighty-first running of the $29,150 Withers Stakes.

The speedy son of John's Joy which had not been nominated for the Kentucky Derby, the Preakness or the Belmont Stakes, took command of the mile and one-sixteenth race half way through the straight-away. He was drawing away from Daniel Arnstein's Eiffel Blue at the end. Brookmeade Stable's Lawless was third in the field of 10 three-year-olds.

Seven of them are eligible for next Saturday's Preakness Stakes but not Oh Johnny, which was ridden by Jockey Hedley Woodhouse. This colt which once raced in the claiming ranks earned a net purse of $19,800 to swell his earnings for the year to $466,565 and his lifetime total of $51,110.

The crowd of 35,500 watched Oh Johnny, winner of the Fountain of Youth Handicap earlier in the year, romp across the finish line three lengths ahead and return $16.10, $5.70 and $4.30 across the board. Eiffel Blue paid $3.80 and $3.40 while Lawless returned $7.20.

The big disappointment in the race was Winding Way Farm's Golf Ace, which was made a supplementary nomination for the Preakness at a cost of $7500. Golf Ace, fourth in this race which was a mile fixture in 80 previous runnings, failed in the stretch and finished sixth.

Born Mighty was fourth, followed by Frosty Mr. After Golf Ace came Beau Diable, Will of Allah, Son of Erin and Irishlove. Mr. Am was scratched.

Concordia Wins 6 Events On Field Day

Concordia Seminary conducted a sporting three-ring circus yesterday afternoon. The Preachers were hosts in no less than seven sports—from volleyball to table tennis—and their only loss was a one-point loss to Harris Teachers' College in a dual track and field meet.

Springfield Concordia was the opponent in most of the events. The local Preachers won from Springfield in baseball, 8 to 7, as Carl Berner slammed a two-run homer in the last of the ninth inning. Paul Hein, who had reached first on the catcher's muff of a third strike, scored ahead of Berner with the tying run.

Concordia of St. Louis was victorious over Springfield in golf, 7½ to 4½; in tennis, 5 to 2; in volleyball, 15-4 and 15-7; in table tennis, 5 to 1; and in softball, 9 to 6.

Harris won the track meet, 66-65, although Concordia's Pete Mealwitz was the only athlete to take firsts in two events.

For good measure, the Preachers tossed in another tennis match, with Principia, and they won it, too, 5 to 2.

"Was Rocky Marciano the only professional boxing champion ever to retire without losing one or more professional fights?" Olive Street Road Boxing Fan.

Yes, unless you include Jimmy Carruthers, the Australian, who fought only 19 times, as a bantamweight, from 1950 to 1954.

Benny Leonard, lightweight champion, spoiled his record when he tried a comeback as a welterweight and was knocked out by Jimmy McLarnin.

Jack McAuliffe, also a lightweight, retired after 50 fights, including nine draws and two no-decision contests.

Jimmy Barry, bantamweight, had eight draws and two no-decision contests on his record.

"Who have been the regular Cardinal centerfielders since Terry Moore?" Redbird Fan.

Moore's last year was 1948. Since then his replacements have included Stan Musial, Erv Dusak, Chuck Diering, Bill Howerton, Peanuts Lowrey, Wally Westlake, Rip Repulski, Wally Moon and Bill Virdon, prior to this year.

Collinsville, Madison Gain District Final

Collinsville scored a king-sized upset yesterday in the Illinois State High School Association's state baseball eliminations. Don Davisson's Kahoks, who are taking a back seat to Granite City in the Southwestern Conference, knocked off Al Lewis's Warriors behind the two-hit pitching of Jim Lindsey, 3 to 1, and advanced to the final of the district meet at Wood River.

Madison qualified to meet Collinsville in the Wood River championship game by beating Edwardsville, 10 to 8, on Mike Sikora's pinch-hit single in the last inning. The final will be Monday at 4 p.m.

In Staunton's sub-district, Mount Olive upended the host Bulldogs, 1 to 0, and Alton bested Bethalto, 3 to 1, in the semifinals. The winners meet Monday, for the right to go on to Wood River and a match with the Collinsville-Madison victor.

District play gets under way tomorrow at Belleville, with Lincoln of East St. Louis vs. Belleville Cathedral, and Lovejoy of Brooklyn vs. Belleville Township. East St. Louis and Assumption will meet the respective winners Tuesday.

Freeburg's district inaugurates action tomorrow, as does Dupo's sub-district. The Dupo sub-district winner will meet the last Freeburg survivor, while Trenton's sub-district champ advances to Belleville. Sectional play is slated for the week of May 21-26, with the state finals at Peoria May 30-31.

Public High Basket Games Set for Saturday Afternoons

The Public High League will play its basketball doubleheaders on Saturday afternoons in two gymnasiums—Hadley Tech and St. Louis U. High—next winter, it was revealed last night by League Manager Walter Williams.

The move to day games for basketball is the second step in the league's decision to abandon all night athletic contests. The first was made recently when the annual Interscholastic field day was switched from an afterdark meet to a day affair, May 25.

Williams said only 10 schools would compete in basketball. Hadley Tech, which will move to the new O'Fallon High will play independently, scheduling only a few games.

Asked if the football schedule were prepared, Williams answered negatively, adding that the Board of Education acts upon a proposal to obtain another stadium. The Board is considering a report which was submitted by an Athletic Planning committee and contained several recommendations which might stabilize the sports program in the high schools.

In addition to the elimination of night contests, one proposal calls for subsidization of the league's athletic program, with a recommendation for a nominal admission fee. Also, it was suggested that activities be limited to contests between members of the league.

Fight Postponed.

TORONTO, May 12 (UP) — Next Tuesday's scheduled fight between Arthur King of Toronto and Johnny Gonsalves of Oakland, Calif., has been called off because of a leg injury to King. Matchmaker Deacon Allen said he had to call the whole fight off when he couldn't find a suitable replacement for King.

St. Louis Rugby Team Defeated

TORONTO, May 12 (CP)—The Toronto Barbarians today won the Missouri Challenge Cup by beating the St. Louis Sports, 14-3, and ending the two-game series with an aggregate lead of only one point as St. Louis won, 16-6, in the first match.

Barbarians Forward George Rennie opened the scoring with a 3-point try in the fourteenth minute after slipping through wildly-tackling opposition. Standoff Half Ron Bernard followed with another three points after taking an easy pass from scrum on the St. Louis 25-yard line. Toronto again failed to convert.

After the first-half, the visitors made a number of switches and were rewarded after five minutes when a penalty kick by Three-Quarter Don Spicer notched three points.

Sports continued pressing its attack and came near scoring several times in the next 10 minutes. Then the Barbarians scored a third try when Bernard again touched down. A strong cross wind ruined all three attempted conversions.

A penalty awarded the Barbarians for obstruction in the dying moments of the game gave them another try which was converted by Three-Quarter Peter Geater for another five points.

Belleville Victor in Prep Golf Tourney

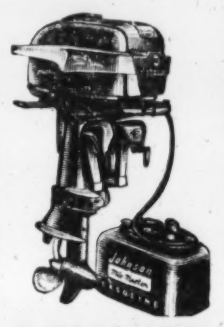

Belleville Township won the Illinois High School Association's golf district meet yesterday at Grand Marais State Park in East St. Louis. The Maroons finished with an 18-hole total of 346.

The winning team and Johnson will go to the state link finals at Champaign, next weekend, over 36 holes.

Oliver Has 64, Leads Greenbrier With 10-Under-Par 200

Sam Snead Is Second With 202

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W.Va., May 12 (AP)—Roly Poly Ed Oliver finished in a whirl of three birdies to roll into the third round lead of the White Sulphur Springs Open today by shooting 64, six strokes better than par.

It was the best round so far of the tournament and gave the veteran pro now playing out of Boston a total of 200 with 18 more holes to play tomorrow.

Oliver, 10 strokes ahead of par for the distance so far held a two-stroke advantage over Sam Snead, the host pro, who had come in earlier with a 66.

Mike Fetchick of Yonkers, N.Y., who started the round three strokes ahead of Oliver and Snead, had to scramble to equal par 70 and wound up in a tie for third with Vic Ghezzi of Inwood, N.Y., at 203. Ghezzi shot his second straight 67.

Jack Isaacs of Langley Field, Va., who went off sharing the lead with Fetchick, ballooned to a 74 and total of 207 to fall off the pace.

He was alone in fourth place and another stroke back came James Ferree of Winston-Salem, N.C., Robert L. Watson of Ardsley-on-Hudson, N.Y., and Mike Souchak of Durham, N.C., at 208.

Fetchick got stung by a bee on the 15th hole and finished with a badly swollen right index finger. However, he birdied the next par five hole only to bogey the par three 17th. It was his third bogey of a par three hole on the second nine. He had birdied the par four first and third to get off to a good start.

Texas Tech Finally Gets In Southwest

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark., May 12 (UP)—The Southwest Conference today invited Texas Tech to become its eighth member and commuted Texas A.&M.'s two-year probation sentence for violating recruiting laws.

While both schools were pleased by the actions, their elation was dulled somewhat by the technicalities involved.

Texas Tech, a robust 31-year-old institution which has been flexing its athletic muscles for several years, cannot hope to become a full-fledged member until 1961, although it may participate in some sports as early as the 1956-57 school year.

The commutation of Texas A.&M.'s probation will be worthless unless the National Collegiate Athletic Association takes similar action in regard to a probation slapped on the school May 1. The conference today recommended that the N.C.A.A. take such steps.

Today, the vote was unanimous on the part of all seven members—Texas, Texas A. & M., Rice, Baylor, Texas Christian, Southern Methodist and Arkansas—after Texas proposed Texas Tech's name.

A similar motion from Baylor proposing the University of Houston died for lack of a second.

The lifting of the two-year Texas A.&M. probation after only one year came after the conference received a detailed report from the school on its efforts to correct the violated recruiting practices.

Illinois Track Team Defeats Ohio State

COLUMBUS, O., May 12 (UP)—The University of Illinois scored firsts in eight of 14 track and field events today to defeat Ohio State 75⅓ to 55⅔ in the Buckeyes' first and only home dual engagement of the season.

Only double winners were Illinois' Leo Frazier in the 100 and 220-yard dashes and Ohio State's Roger Hauck in the low and high hurdles.

Ohio State, crippled by the loss of Star Glenn Davis who is sidelined with influenza, suffered its third loss in five meets.

Lights Go Up All Over the Parks

—By a Post-Dispatch Photographer.

Lighted baseball fields in the public parks are close to a reality now that the poles and light bulbs are in place. This picture shows a field in Forest Park with the lighting plant almost completed. Similar installations are being made at Fairground, Carondelet and Shaw-Macklind Field. Except for the facilities at Fox Playground, St. Louis has had no lighted fields in the public parks prior to this summer. Fox, which has been completely remodeled, may be ready for night play this week.

By Jack Rice

The big man is a par-busting promise seldom kept in golf. Great size and strength do not a United States Open champion make, maybe because from heights over 6-4 the golf ball looks too little to beat upon. Big men are notoriously easy that way, still trying to apologize for Goliath's reputation as a bully.

At Sunset now, in the Carling Open, there is a conversation piece named George Bayer, 6-4, 240 pounds, and the sensitive type about his golf. A little man, gazing up at him, said "It ever been suggested you take up wrassling, instead of golf?" Bayer made a grin appear briefly and said, "Many things have been suggested."

He reached up to his shoulders, adjusting something that looked like a wash cloth there but was a full-size bath towel. People, he had been saying before the little man suggested wrestling, sometimes make fun of his golf. "It's not nice to hear those comments coming over your shoulder, 'So he can hit it. What else can he do?'"

Ford Thinks He Has It.

There is a fast-growing crowd of Bayer-discoverers who think he can do everything at one time or another, and within two years will be doing it consistently. Hord Hardin, the local student of golf privileged to be able to study it various places around the country, said, "The pros believe Bayer will be the best, within two years. Doug Ford says he has a fine touch, 20 yards from the flag. This was just in conversation, something Doug volunteered." Ford ought to recognize a good short game, if only from watching his own. It's one of the best.

Finesse is not easily advertised in Bayer's game. Publicity about him strains to emphasize the grandeur of his muscles. He is identified as the Babe Ruth of the Links, the Seattle Slugger, and Paul Bunyan. It is recorded that he has had drives of 476 yards at Las Vegas, 426 yards in Tucson, and 390 yards in San Diego, proving that all the publicity men who know how to use a tape measure haven't been hired by the Yankees to cover Mickey Mantle.

It also is part of this apprentice legend that Bayer carries a ring, golf-ball size. This is not jewelry. If the golf ball can be slipped through the ring, Bayer knows it has not been knocked out of round. He can hit it again, it's still fighting. This dims a little, because Louise Suggs carries a similar ring, for the same purpose, and when seen several days ago Miss Suggs weighed in about the same as Bayer's shoes, without cleats.

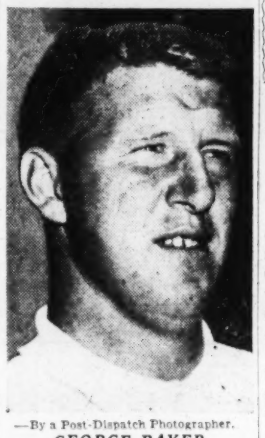

But all this, and the gossip that pre-tournament driving contests aren't held any more because they got to be known as "Bayer's Benefits," is what Bayer was hired to produce. A golf-equipment manufacturer hired him to amaze the people with his hitting. "Exploit it," was the term Bayer used.

Not Much Prize Money.

The golf company didn't get him for all the golf balls he can knock out of round. He did well as an automobile salesman, from 1950 through 1953. He sold "about 125 to 135 cars a year," and estimated the average commission was $100. He is a married man, has three daughters, and had to be convinced that golf would bring them a better living than selling automobiles did.

What he makes in tournament prize-money is a minor part of his golf income, so far, and that is well for Mrs. Bayer and the three baby Bayers. He was 48th on the money list last year.

"A man must have a goal,"

GEORGE BAYER

said Bayer. "I intend to be among the first 15 money winners this year. With added luck, I might be among the top 10." He decided upon this after the Masters tournament, an event he attended as a respectful observer. "I went to watch Hogan, Middlecoff and Littler," he said. "I slowed down my swing, and I've copied things from them. How much good did it do me? Well, the next tournament I finished fourth, my best yet."

Good When He's Mad.

Golf games have been known to resist even minor changes being made in them. Bayer's hints at goodly alterations made overnight, while sleeping on observations of Hogan and other artists, indicate the man is as long on concentration as he is off the tee. He shrugged and said, "When I went out for football at the University of Washington, I was about to get cut. Then a couple of guys made me mad, and I wound up where one of them had been, first-string tackle. Stayed there three years, too."

Earlier, beside the 18th green, two silent pros had sat, waiting for Bayer. He appeared, and put a golf ball within several feet of the pin. "Getting good, ain't he?" said one pro. "Why not," said the other. "He doesn't have to practice driving. Just pitching and putting." The first pro thought about it. "Where," he said at last, "would he use a five iron? For the second shot on a par five?" Silence, edged with envy, settled back upon them.

Oregon Hunters Kill Record 131,091 Deer

PORTLAND, Ore., May 12 (AP).

OREGON, which led the nation in the number of deer killed in 1953 and 1954, broke its own record in 1955, the state game commission reported today.

There were 131,091 deer taken by 230,585 hunters, which meant 59 per cent of the hunters were successful. There were 105,236 killed in 1953 and 112,486 in 1954.

The game commission also reported 6084 elk killed, second highest total on record.

Eilers Retires As Valley Head

TULSA, Okla., May 12 (AP)—A. E. (Artie) Eilers, commissioner of the Missouri Valley Conference, announced today he would retire June 1, 1957. Eilers, 67, is the only commissioner the MVC has ever had.

Conference President Phillip Becker of Bradley University said that a successor to Eilers would not be considered at the spring meeting of league officials. The conference, headquartered in St. Louis, celebrates its fiftieth anniversary next year.

Eilers was executive secretary of the league from 1919 to 1946, when he was appointed full-time commissioner. He was formerly a member of the physical education and coaching staff at Washington University in St. Louis.

"Artie Eilers has been an untiring servant of the Missouri Valley Conference," said Dean C. H. McIlroy, Oklahoma A. and M. faculty representative to the MCV since 1925. "The fact that the Valley next year will celebrate its fiftieth anniversary is almost solely due to his unselfish devotion to conference affairs."

Fairmount Daily Double: Nobel Hay, Father and Son

Noble Hay Sr., owner and trainer, and his son, Noble Jr., like their horses, but if things go wrong each has something to fall back on. The Lynnville, Ind., pair, now operating at Fairmount Park, is another of the family combinations at the Collinsville track.

Among others are the cousins, Clarence Meaux and Louis, and the the Patnode brothers, trainer and jockey.

In addition to handling his three-horse stable, Blendon, Pinko and Freepar, the elder Hay is a coal miner, while young Hay has served three years as an electrical apprentice. Young Hay has piloted three winners at the track, including Blendon, which came home first with a payoff of $69.20 for $2. The jockey, who is 21 years old, piloted his initial winner on a recognized track when he won with Phantom Eye here, May 1.

Jockey Hay

The Hays broke into the racing game 11 years ago when the father purchased Bessie Lena and campaigned her for five years at state fairs in Illinois and Indiana. Young Noble tagged along. Bessie Lena broke her leg in a race and had to be destroyed and it was a tough break for the family, which includes seven other children.

Five years ago, the young rider's career almost ended when he suffered a severe concussion in a spill at Metropolis, Ill. However, he recovered and after beating around "the bushes" finally made his appearance on a regular track at Dade Park last fall.

Hay has two brood mares, Midgy Girl and Marcella, on a relative's farm at Boonville, Ind., and two of the colts will be ready for racing when Dade Park opens its fall meet.

Germany Ousts Ireland From Davis Cup

Victors' Next Foe Is France

LONDON, May 12 (AP)—Six of the favored nations in the European zone Davis Cup tournament swept into the quarter-finals today and Italy's defending European champions assumed a commanding 2-0 lead over Poland.

Belgium, Denmark, Sweden, France and Chile moved up quickly by assuming 3-0 advantages over their opponents in the second round competition. Germany won the final two singles contests from Ireland for a 4-1 victory. All of the matches are on a best-of-five basis.

Belgium eliminated Spain at Barcelona when the doubles team of Jacques Brichant and Gino Mezzi overcame Fernando Olozaga and Juan Manual Couder 6-2, 6-1, 6-4 in 45 minutes.

Next opponent for Belgium is Sweden, which eliminated Norway. Sweden's Torsten Johansson and Sven Davidson conquered Norway's Gunnar Sjoewall and Nils Erik Hassen at Oslo 6-2, 6-3, 7-5.

France ousted Switzerland at Lausanne by scoring a singles and doubles victory. France's Pierre Darmon completed his rain-interrupted match by winning the fifth set today for a triumph over Switzerland's Martin Froesch. The scores were 11-9, 1-6, 6-2, 6-3, 6-2. The first four sets were played yesterday.

Veterans Marcel Bernard and Paul Remy clinched the series by winning the doubles from Paul Blondel and Rene Buser, 6-1, 6-3, 6-3.

The French will play Germany in the quarter-finals.

Germany defeated Ireland at Dublin. Franz Feldbausch assured Germany of victory by winning the opening match from Guy Jackson 6-0, 6-4, 3-6, 4-6, 6-1. Then Rupert Huber downed Ireland's Joe Hackett 6-4, 3-6, 6-4, 6-4.

Denmark conquered Czechoslovakia at Prague. Kurt Nielsen and Torben Ulrich had to go all out to subdue the fighting Czech team of Javorsky and Zabrovsky 8-6, 6-4, 5-7, 5-7, 7-5.

Italy probably will be Denmark's next foe. The favored Italians, Giuseppe Merlo and Nicola Pietrangeli, had little difficulty in disposing of Poland's best in the opening two singles contests at Warsaw. Merlo trounced Vladyslaw Skonecki, who recently returned to his homeland after several years of self-exile, 6-0, 6-2, 6-3. Pietrangeli overcame F. Licis 6-4, 6-4, 7-5.

While put out Holland at The Hague. Luis Ayala and Andres Hammersley downed Hans Van Dalsum and Fred Dehnert 6-1, 6-8, 6-3, 6-2.

The South Americans will meet the victor of the England-Yugoslavia series, which has been delayed by rain.

St. Louisans in Masters Fail to Roll 800 Total

ROCHESTER, May 12 (Special)—Ray Bluth paced a group of eight St. Louis bowlers in the first four-game block of the qualifying round for the sixth annual ABC Masters tournament tonight.

With 240 bowlers shooting for 36 spots in the double elimination match game finals (along with 28 seeded stars who do not need to qualify) Bluth was 32nd with 781 for his four games.

High man for the first four games was Therman Gibson of Detroit, who had 860. Second was Joe Cerniglia of Rockford, Ill., with 858.

The 240 bowlers rolled four games Saturday, with four more on tap for Sunday. Then the high 36, based on total pin fall for 33 games, move into the final with the seeded stars. Among the seeded bowlers is Billy Welu of St. Louis, Missouri state all-events champion.

The St. Louis bowlers failed to notch an 800 series as bad games hurt both Dick Weber and Don Carter, the two-time national match game champion.

Bluth rolled his 781 on games of 190, 182, 214 and 195.

Weber was tied for the 36th pot as he rolled 776 on games of 198, 217, 192 and 169.

Carter had 765 despite a 153 third game. He opened with 200 and 203 and closed with 209.

Other St. Louis scores included:

Woody Hulsey	168	212	172	210—762
Pat Patterson	195	193	176	166—730
Tom Hennessey	161	180	210	174—725
Robert Kuenzle	183	170	162	201—716

$3633 Profit From District Soccer Championship Tourney

By Dent McSkimming

Five local soccer organizations shared equally in the $3633.75 net gate receipts of the recent St. Louis District championship tournament, it was disclosed yesterday. In his report to the Soccer Federation meeting, Treasurer Bob Guelker showed the gross gate for the six dates was $4653.

After expenses of $615.50, and 10 per cent for the Missouri Soccer Commission, there remained $3633.75, so that each entity received $726.75. The recipients were County League, Khoury League, Muny League, Missouri Commission and the C.Y.C. League. The Kutis club, which won the tournament title, received no share directly, since it belongs to no league, but is expected to get its cut from the state association.

In view of the success of the tournament, in which 16 leading local teams participated, the Federation, through Chairman John Turner of the Municipal recreation department, asked that a permanent body be set up. However, in order to avoid a conflict of authority, Walter Giesler, representing the County League, proposed a conference of Federation and Missouri Commission officials. A merger into one body would be the objective. Attending the pie-cutting meeting were, in addition to Turner, Guelker and Giesler: Howard Blaisdell for high schools; Harry Luecke for the Missouri Commission; Syl Raftery for Khoury League; Cecil Rodriguez for Muny League; Nick Jost for Kutis club and E. C. (Bud) Grasser, secretary, for the Muny.

German Club in Debut.

Schwaben of Augsburg, Germany, which faces Kutis next Friday evening at Public Schools Stadium, makes its American bow today at Baltimore, opposing American Soccer League stars. . . . The Germans will be here Tuesday, stopping at Hotel Kings-Way.

Rich Meisemann will be at inside right position as Kutis opposes the reinforced Jones team in the second game of the Meramec summer soccer league program this afternoon. . . . In the first game of the double-header, Hennessey-Brickey will oppose Jadran. . . . Games are at the Mermec Sport Club field.

Five teams from abroad have scheduled 33 games in the United States and Canada in an eight-weeks period. . . . Scottish League Aberdeen is down for seven games; the West German Police A.A. for six; Everton of England for seven; Occidents of Mexico six and Schwaben of Augsburg seven. . . . They'll be playing until June 16.

Steele Out at Los Angeles.

Scottish League star Billy Steele, player-coach of the Los Angeles Danes for the past six months, is now a free agent. . . . The Danes club purchased Steele's contract from Aberdeen of the Scottish League hoping he could lead them to the U. S. Open Cup championship. . . . But the Los Angeles team was beaten in the western final and then lost to Los Angeles Kickers in the California championship semifinal. . . . Looking for a scapegoat, the Danes management dropped Steele. . . . Some Danes players had complained that Steele was too tough a task master in training. He demanded perfection, didn't find it in his teammates and everyone was unhappy. Again it must be pointed out—there's lots of room for a good coach here in St. Louis. . . . The amazing thing is that St. Louis players go as far as they do without professional teachers.

Frank Ferrara, who scored six goals in the recent District tournament, has been added to the C.Y.C. squad that will oppose Everton here June 2. . . . Al Nazzoli, star wing halfback of the St. Ambrose club, will be the C.Y.C. squad captain, by choice of the players.

The eastern final of the national Amateur Cup series starts today at Harmarville, Pa. . . . Second game, next Sunday, will be at the home of the Philadelphia Ukrainians. . . . If all goes according to schedule, the national final, Kutis vs. the eastern champion, should be May 27.

British Beating Back.

Britain's sagging soccer morale got a needed lift in recent matches with two of the world's great football powers. In one, Scotland tied Austria, 1-1, before 100,000 at Glasgow and a few days later England tripped Argentina, 4-2.

Scotland was lucky to get a tie with Austria, according to the Manchester Guardian's soccer correspondent. He writes:

"The Scottish forwards were deficient in guile . . . whereas every Austrian player gave a delightful, almost impertinent, exhibition of passing and ball control. Ocwirk (the Austrian hight half) was the master technician."

The picture was brighter at London, last Wednesday, as the 41-year-old genius of the dribble, Stan Matthews, set up three of England's goals. He was cheered by 100,000 at Wembley Stadium as the hero of the day.

Jeffcoat Fined And Suspended, Bailey Fined

CINCINNATI, May 12 (AP)—National League President Warren Giles today fined two Cincinnati Redlegs and suspended one of them as a result of a series of disputes with umpires in last night's game with the Milwaukee Braves.

Pitcher Hal Jeffcoat was fined $50 and suspended for four days. Catcher Ed Bailey was fined $25.

Jeffcoat was tossed out of the game, won by the Braves, 9-8, for bumping into Umpire Vic Delmore as he protested a ruling that he had trapped and not caught a popup bunt. Bailey was ousted from the game by Umpire Hal Dixon for too violent protests of a decision when he was called out at second base.

The umpires also banished Redleg Manager Birdie Tebbetts and Coach Jimmy Dykes during the game but they escaped further punishment.

Redleg General Manager Gabe Paul said he had been denied a hearing on the Jeffcoat and Bailey cases and he added:

"Delmore is a new umpire and my advice to him is that he had better reduce the size of his ears."

Mizzou Whips Kansas, 14-5; Leads in Big 7

COLUMBIA, Mo., May 12—Missouri's Tigers defeated Kansas, 14-5, here today to pull a game and a half ahead of the Oklahoma U. team that opens a two-game series here Monday to climax both teams' Big Seven baseball championship quest.

The Tigers, who conquered the Jayhawks by 18-1 here yesterday, had to come from behind after Kansas took a 5-2 lead in the third, but they evened the score in the third and knotted the game with three in the fifth and six in the seventh.

Ron Wiley, Kansas pitcher, hit a homer and batted in four runs to lead the Kansas attack, but he gave up 11 hits and nine walks that led to his downfall. John Grace, Missouri catcher, batted in five Tiger runs with a double and single.

Wade Ladue started for Missouri but was ineffective and was replaced by Gorden Nevers, who issued but three hits and pitched scoreless ball through 6⅓ innings.

POST-DISPATCH

Reader-Service Accident Insurance

Joseph H. Schulte was killed when he was pinned against the wall of a church by an automobile out of control. His wife, Mrs. Minnie Schulte, named as his beneficiary, received two checks totaling $2600.00 as payment of claims under the terms of his two Post-Dispatch Reader-Service Accident Insurance policies.

The Post-Dispatch offers TWO policies to its home-delivered and mail subscribers and members of their families. One policy is patterned especially for the Post-Dispatch by the Mutual Benefit Health and Accident Association; the other by the Washington National Insurance Co. Under the accumulation feature of these policies, major benefits increase 10% each year until 50% has been added. Mr. Schulte had prudently taken out both policies. His Mutual Benefit protection had increased from $1000.00 to $1500.00 because the policy had been in force for more than five years. His Washington National protection had increased from $1000.00 to $1100.00 because the policy had been in force for more than one year.

Post-Dispatch Accident Insurance Offers Liberal Benefits FOR ONLY 5¢ A WEEK

Post-Dispatch Accident Insurance pays cash benefits for ANY KIND of accident . . . at home, at work or at play. Yet each policy costs only 5c a week; both policies cost a total of only 10c a week.

Calling All Canada Geese.

WINTERING in a pasture at the August A. Busch Wildlife Area at Weldon Spring are 50 wing-clipped Canada geese, a "call flock" intended to persuade other waterfowl to settle at the reservation when next fall's migration gets under way.

The 50 geese were trapped last year at Missouri's Swan Lake refuge and sent to the Busch area in December.

When the southern migration starts, the birds will be moved from the pasture adjoining U. S. Highway 40-61, two miles beyond State Highway 94, and placed in big, open wheat fields.

There they will have an opportunity to sell other waterfowl, heading south from Canada for the winter, on the idea of making the Busch area their home, at least during the cold months.

Conservation Commission representatives hope that the "call flock," in addition to attracting visitors, will also produce their own broods.

Trailside Conservation Shows.

After a year's experiment, the Conservation Commission has opened four conservation trails to the public at the Busch area.

The trails are designed to demonstrate conservation principles relating to wildlife, farming, forestry and soil.

Paul Bruce Dowling, area biologist, said groups can get guided tours by calling NAtional 3-4688 and making an appointment.

Individuals can take the tours at any time with the help of self-guilding pamphlet which is available free at the area headquarters. The office is open from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. daily.

The wildlife and farm trails are near the area's entrance at U.S. Highway 40-61. The forestry and soil trails are a considerable distance away, at the western end of the 7000-acre tract in St. Charles county.

Twenty-eight kinds of animals and 264 species of birds have been noted on the area. Many of them are observed on the wildlife trail, along with muskrat houses and beaver dams and cuttings.

At times a deer, a red or gray fox or a lone coyote will be seen.

One feature of the trail is the wildlife food plot, which is replanted every year. It contains seedheads of grain sorghum, millet, sunflower and soybeans —used by quail, songbirds and sometimes rabbits and squirrels when wild foods are scarce.

Guides Aid Visitors.

On tours of the wildlife trail, guides will point out an area of wildlife cover provided by nature at an old homesite; pokeberry, which has highly nutritious berries; bi-color lespedeza, a preferred winter food for quail and a browse plant for rabbits; a brushpile, which provides protection for wildlife.

Bluegrass, a woodlot and natural fencerows are also objects to which the attention of visitors will be directed along the wildlife trail.

Signs have been placed along each of the four trails to direct those who have no guides.

Dowling said the trails will be enlarged as experience and public use increase. A fisheries trail and a demonstration area are ultimately planned.

The forestry trail has been laid out to demonstrate such subjects as: Forest soil, forest ecology, "nature's competition," "the fallen giant," oak woods, forest management and forest appreciation.

Represented along the farm trail are contour farming, strip cropping, stubble mulch farming, field borders, multiflora rose fence, cropping, terracing and farm ponds.

Soil profile and soil destruction are the chief points of interest in the fourth trail.

Fishing on the Busch area does not open until May 30, but the trails may be visited at any time.

Good Luck at Kentucky Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. Dale Bolyard, 1803 Alfred avenue, and Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Stanley, 2356 Lawrence street, had quite a fishing trip at Kentucky Lake last weekend, hauling in 81 crappie, but when it was over they got into the usual fishermen's argument: Who caught the biggest?

Finally, as they stood on the dock strongly debating the question, the resort owner brought out a scale. Bolyard proved to be the winner, with a 2-pound, 4-ounce crappie, but it weighed only an ounce more than Mrs. Stanley's top catch.

The St. Louisans were fishing near Cadiz, Ky., using a cane pole and tight line, with minnows as bait. Mrs. Bolyard said at least 20 of the crappie weighed as much as 2 pounds.

The Missouri Conservation Commission's magazine, the Missouri Conservationist, which has been carrying a series of articles, photographs and sketches on the state's wildlife, seems to get far afield in the current issue when it takes up the subject of the prairie meadow mouse.

Included are drawings showing top and bottom views of the meadow mouse's skull, its right front foot and right hind foot, some cheek teeth and foot tracks.

As one sportsman commented: "I guess it's all right, but I've never been meadow mouse hunting."

Tests Indicate Teachers Reach Students Through Sixth Sense

Results of Dutch Educator's U.S. Experiments in Extra-Sensory Relationship Are Announced.

DURHAM, N.C., May 12 (INS)—A Dutch educator is winding up experiments in North Carolina that indicate teachers reach their students by means of a sixth sense.

Results of a three-month investigation conducted by J. G. Van Busschback, an Amsterdam school supervisor, were announced at Duke University parapsychology laboratory.

Van Busschback used teachers and students in the public schools of Durham, Durham county and Burlington to see if there was any extra-sensory relationship between them.

The results of the test with fifth- and sixth-grade pupils were called "so far above the level of chance that there is only one possibility in a million of coincidence."

The tests in the United States corresponded to experiments conducted under Van Busschback's direction in schools of Amsterdam and Utrecht, Holland. Results of both tests were identical.

Van Busschback used a game-like test in which pupils were asked to guess which one of a set of five cards their teacher was looking at during a specified time. The teacher was seated behind a screen at the back of the classroom during each test.

Van Busschback said when the teacher was the "sender" the pupils scored many more correct answers than chance would account for. When other "senders" were used, he said, the results were chance.

The tests, which were worked with 2500 pupils and 80 teachers, did not work when applied to higher grades.

Busschback emphasized that the extra-sensory influence can be of no practical application in education at present and warned that there is no evidence between sixth-sense ability and teaching ability. He said some of the best teachers were the poorest "senders."

GENE AUTRY WILL GIVE UP HIS RADIO PROGRAM TODAY

HOLLYWOOD, May 12 (AP)—Cowboy actor Gene Autry is quitting radio tomorrow in what one source says is a disagreement over live and transcribed shows.

The announcement by CBS-radio president Arthur Hull Hayes yesterday said both the network and Autry's sponsor since 1940, William K. Wrigley Jr., were "surprised" by the decision. It is the longest sponsor-star relationship in radio history.

A source close to the millionaire cowboy said Wrigley "has never liked transcribed shows," adding he went along with part-time transcriptions when Autry's long rodeo tours kept him away from the studios. The star has been proposing transcription of all the shows, the surce said.

The actor's radio show has been chiefly a live program. Besides performing in radio, movies and TV, Autry owns five radio stations, two television stations, five ranches, two music publishing businesses and an interest in a Phoenix (Ariz.) newspaper.

For just this very reason.
Sadly missed by WIFE, CHILDREN and GRANDCHILDREN.

KILLES, JOHN, in loving memory, May 17, 1951.
Five years have elapsed since you went away,
But in our hearts you will always stay.
Sadly missed by SONS and ALL WHO KNEW HIM.

KOSSMAN, JUNE, in loving memory, May 13, 1955.
If all the world were mine to give,
I'd give it all and more
To have you here with me so dear.
Come smiling home once more.
Sadly missed by husband and daughter, ROY and SHIRLEY ROSSMAN.

LANEMANN, LENA; in loving memory of our dear mother and grandmother, May 8, 1944.
We have only a beautiful memory
To remember our whole life through
Its sweetness will live forever
As we treasure that memory of you.
Sadly missed by CHILDREN and GRANDCHILDREN.

LEAHEY, ALVINA A., in loving memory May 15, 1955.
God needed another mother,
A mother who never grew old.
He made her smiles of sunshine,
He molded her heart of gold.
She was the flower of our home,
She was the whole world's best.
God made a wonderful mother,
Then gave that mother to us.
Sadly missed by DAUGHTERS, SONS, SONS-IN-LAW, DAUGHTER-IN-LAW and GRANDCHILDREN.

LOSMANN, LIZZIE, in loving memory of our dear mother, who passed away May 10, 1951.
Sadly missed by CHILDREN AND GRANDCHILDREN.

LUADERS, CHARLES (RED), in loving memory of my dear husband, May 13, 1952.
There's a silence by the fireside,
A vacant chair in the home,
Only Heaven holds the answer,
Why you left us here alone.
And you'd never be forgotten,
Though I'm smiling through the tears,
For I'm always thinking of you,
And today is just as dear.
Sadly missed by your WIFE MINNIE, DAUGHTERS, GRANDCHILDREN SISTERS, BROTHERS AND WIFE.

INDUSTRIAL

There are excellent opportunities with a medium-sized, well established manufacturer of automatic controls, where recognition is given and advancement is based on individual performance. Our company is continually growing in size due to increased business and new products; therefore, very desirable openings develop frequently for young men with management potential. It is our policy to promote from within wherever possible. We are large enough to offer opportunity to the young man who wants to advance, yet we are not so large that the engineer is not given recognition as an individual.

Our automatic temperature controls division produces controls for use in the air-conditioning, heating and refrigeration field. This division offers challenging opportunities for engineers interested in design, development, application, methods, time study, quality control, production supervision and sales.

Our armament division is engaged in research, design and development of aircraft and missile guidance and control systems, servo systems, and reactor monitoring systems. Design engineers, systems engineers, electronics and mechanical development engineers, physicists and specialists in applied mechanics, are needed for advanced work on armament projects.

We offer full tuition refund for approved educational courses taken by our employees.

TRANSLATE ADVANCED ENGINEERING INTO MATHEMATICAL TERMS

Professional engineers and scientists, with a strong interest in digital applications and mathematics at GE's expanding Aircraft Nuclear Propulsion Department. Advanced engineering scientific knowledge is necessary, as well as the ability to analyze engineering problems. While computer experience is desirable, it is not essential.

Specifically, the men who undertake this work will be able to take a physical problem and translate it into mathematical terms suitable for digital programming analysis and solution.

Some of the most extensive and modern computer facilities in industry are at your service at GE's Cincinnati plant. You may also graduate work in your field under GE's reimbursed tuition plan. And the city itself, one of the country's well-known cultural centers, is a fine place to live.

Don't guess... be sure the home you buy has a wiring system planned for the future, for the electrical servants you'll need and want.

Democratic Politics

No Candidate Sure of Nomination Now

Stevenson's Chances Best but He Lacks Majority on First Roll Call—Lyndon Johnson Gains Prestige.

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 12.

WITH the Democratic National Convention just three months from tomorrow, present prospects are that while former Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson of Illinois has the best chance for the presidential nomination, none of the aspirants has anything near the necessary majority on the first and second roll calls.

The overwhelming beating Senate Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson gave Gov. Allan Shivers in the recent Texas precinct and county conventions made the tall Texan more than chairman of the state's delegation and its "favorite son" candidate at the Chicago convention. Together with Speaker Sam Rayburn, who will be the permanent chairman of the convention, the Texan will have a large and perhaps deciding voice about the Democratic presidential and vice presidential nominees and the major planks in the platform. There is no probability of their public disagreement. Johnson is a Rayburn protege and the younger man looks to his experienced friend for political and legislative advice.

Texas, with 56 votes, will be outranked by only five other states on the roll calls. The states with greater voting strength are New York, 98 votes; Pennsylvania, 74; California, 68; Illinois, 64, and Ohio, 58.

All the Texas votes will be controlled by Johnson and go for him until he releases them. He will also be the beneficiary of votes from other Southern states and perhaps one or two Western states whose leaders will be jockeying for vantage places when the showdown comes. It is not likely that Stevenson will have the unanimous support of the Illinois delegation or Gov. Averell Harriman of the New York group. It is questionable how long Gov. Frank J. Lausche can hold the Ohio delegation as its "favorite son." Michigan will have 44 votes at Chicago, but since Gov. G. Mennen Williams has announced for re-election, his "favorite son" candidacy is regarded as a tactical move to increase his prestige in his state and his power in the convention.

Until the Florida and California votes are tabulated, no estimate can be made of the support Johnson is likely to get outside Texas. A Stevenson victory in both states could start a bandwagon movement for the 1952 nominee; a victory by Senator Estes Kefauver of Tennessee would greatly damage Stevenson's chances and bring much temporary support to Johnson as a "stop-Kefauver" candidate until the convention leaders could decide on the eventual nominee. In that event, Senator Stuart Symington of Missouri would be in a favored spot.

In some respects it looks as though the forthcoming Democratic convention will resemble the 1932 contest when Franklin D. Roosevelt won the nomination after a deal with John N. Garner, then Speaker of the House and also the "favorite son" of Texas.

The 1932 meeting was the last time the Democrats required a two-thirds majority for nomination. Most of the Southern states were for Roosevelt. The aspirants blocking him were former Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York, who got 201 votes on the first roll call, and Garner, with the support from California, who got 90 votes. Roosevelt had 666 votes on the first ballot. He needed 768 votes to win. He won on the fourth roll call after Garner released his supporters. The deal, arranged by telephone, was that Garner would be given the vice-presidential nomination.

This year only a bare majority of 687 votes of the 1372 allotted to the states, territories and the District of Columbia is required for nomination. Politicians and political observers do not see how Stevenson can come up to the number on the first roll call. The Associated Press tabulation this week gave Kefauver 121 votes won in primaries to 103 for Stevenson. Many of the primary delegates are not bound to stick with the candidate to the end; some are not even required to vote on the first roll call for the primary choice.

On the first roll call at the 1952 convention, Kefauver led with 340 votes. Stevenson received 273; Senator Richard B. Russell of Georgia, 268, and Harriman, 123½. Stevenson won on the third roll call after Harriman threw his support to him. On that last ballot Kefauver had 275 votes and Russell 261.

THE POLITICAL EXPERTS guess that this year Johnson will have even greater support than Russell had as the Southern candidate in 1952. Their thesis is that the Democratic party is more divided over the Supreme Court's decision in the desegregation cases than it was over the general question of civil rights four years ago.

Johnson has repeatedly asserted that he is not a candidate for delegates outside Texas and that he is not running for anything this year except the restoration of his health from a heart attack last July. Senators Harry F. Byrd of Virginia and Russell of Georgia have announced their support of him, however, and other Southern leaders are expected to follow their example.

If Johnson becomes a serious candidate for the presidential nomination, he would have two powerful arguments to answer: first, that as a Southerner he would have little chance of carrying the Northern states with large Negro populations, and, second, that having had a serious coronary thrombosis, he would not be able to carry out the Democratic strategy to attack Mr. Eisenhower as a "part-time President" because of his lessening of the White House burden after his attack in September. As Senate Majority Leader, Johnson has greatly reduced his activities at the Capitol and, like the President, has taken frequent holidays from Washington.

The unanswerable question at this time is whether Johnson and Rayburn will use their influence for Stevenson at what they regard as the propitious time for the interest of the South, especially Texas, the Congress and the country.

Before Johnson's smashing victory over Shivers, which was initiated by Rayburn, the Speaker had kind words for Stevenson and the pre-convention campaign he is waging. Rayburn was one of Stevenson's most active supporters in 1952. Johnson has, since his recent win, emphasized that he is for "unity" and "moderation," thus indicating clearly that he favors Stevenson over Kefauver and Harriman. Before his heart attack there was talk of an understanding between him and Symington. Of late both have been silent on their personal plans. Symington had a hypertension operation in 1947 but has been given an excellent health report by his doctors.

The Rayburn-Johnson team will have more than a large voice on the presidential nominee. As leaders of both ends of the Capitol they will be deeply interested in the party platform, especially the civil rights plank, and the vice presidential nomination.

No experienced politician campaigns for second place on the ticket and presidential candidates, even President Eisenhower, maintain the fiction that the second place is filled by the convention. Actually, however, the presidential nominee has the final word. Roosevelt made a deal with Garner forces in 1932, insisted on Henry A. Wallace in 1940 and arranged for Truman's nomination in 1944. Gen. Eisenhower submitted a list of acceptable prospects in 1952 and the selection of Nixon was by a small group of leaders.

Political geography plays a large part in choosing the vice presidential nominee. In 1952 Stevenson selected Senator John J. Sparkman of Alabama in the hope this gesture would keep the South solidly Democratic. It didn't. Florida, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia went Republican.

If he wished, Johnson could probably have the second place with Stevenson or any other "moderation" candidate, such as Symington, with a mere nod of the head. The vice presidency is not onerous and the Capitol atmosphere would be pleasant to a man who has served in the House as well as the Senate. Two Democratic vice presidents, Garner and the late Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky, have made the office a powerful agency of government.

As legislators, Rayburn and Johnson will be deeply interested in a party platform that indorses the work of the current Democratic Congress and will help in keeping the Congress Democratic even though the Republicans win the White House.

THE PLANK likely to give the most trouble in Chicago, as it has in recent years, will be the one on civil rights. Northern Democrats, who must consider the Negro vote in the larger cities, are already demanding a flat indorsement of the Supreme Court's decisions in the school desegregation and other cases affecting Negroes while the Southerners, aside from the demogogues who are preaching "interposition" and "nullification," want to go cautiously with this plank.

The sentence in the 1952 plank that will be in bitter controversy this year says that all citizens "should have equal opportunities for education, for economic advancement and for decent living conditions."

That sentence can be interpreted two ways, one of which is that it condones the "equal but separate" school doctrine which the present Supreme Court rejected.

By their recent victory over Shivers in the Texas conventions, Rayburn and Johnson demonstrated there is a large "moderation" faction in the South that wants "unity" in the Democratic party on the presidential nominee and the platform. That does not mean they are not fighters for Democratic and Southern interests. Both have long experience in practical politics and that experience combined with their fighting determination to win the White House and retain the Congress for the Democrats will show up clearly at Chicago, whoever is the presidential nominee and whatever is in the party platform.

NATO Defenses Are Weakened Behind Brave Words on Unity

French Forces Shifted to Algeria, German Help Is Slow to Come—Little Political Progress.

By MARQUIS W. CHILDS
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

(Copyright 1956, The Pulitzer Publishing Co.)

WASHINGTON, May 12.

IN foreign policy the atmosphere in the West today is one of increasing unreality. In a kind of twilight zone we are not only willing but eager to accept the shadow for the substance, the word for the deed. That this is a dangerous way to live goes without saying. Either for individuals or for nations retreat from reality and the hard facts of life is a sign of failure.

The North Atlantic Treaty Organization has for a long time been ailing. Behind all the brave words about unity and strength the military front of NATO has been withering away. France has left scarcely more than 5000 troops in the NATO force, the rest having been pulled out to fight a guerrilla war in Algeria that few believe the French can win.

Of the 30 divisions on paper in Western Europe, at the most 12 are real, five American, three British and a scattering of others. Ten would probably be nearer the truth. After six years of discussion the German divisions are still a long way from existence.

IF THIS DETERIORATION of the planned military front were the worst that could be said, the plight of the Western alliance might not seem so grim. The divisions in being are a "plate-glass window." And while Soviet Russia has apparently given up any idea of throwing rocks through that window, still it is valuable, to use a much-overworked word, to have a deterrent on the East.

What has been happening—or, rather, not happening—behind the plate-glass window is the deeply disturbing aspect. To put it as simply as possible, the alliance has failed to take the steps for unity and cohesion that would have made Europe a strong force politically and economically.

The fundamental fact was that the old, haunting problems of poverty and surplus population could not be solved within national boundaries by nation states going it alone. Plans and proposals were debated. The organization for European Economic Co-operation came into being and did some effective analysis and co-ordination. But the effort fell pitifully short of what was required.

Now the formal step has been taken—it should have come at least two years ago and better still four or five years ago—to try to develop the political potentiality of NATO. The ballyhoo that accompanied the move in this country tended to make it sound as though something new and wonderful had already been created. But there were sharp differences at the meeting of NATO foreign ministers in Paris, with a large doubt remaining as to whether NATO, as a political organization, could perform any real function at this late stage.

PREMIER GUY MOLLET
Mission to Moscow.

Three foreign ministers, already labeled the Three Wise Men, have been named to come up with the answers. They will have to be wise indeed to develop an acceptable program. Significantly, despite a request from the other allies, the United States declined to put a representative on this committee. It would be easy, of course, to turn to America for a ready-made solution in the form of more aid.

There need be no debate about allocation of the blame for the sad status of the Western alliance since the supply is more than ample to go around. Britain has steadily refused to join in European Economic Co-operation. American tariff and immigration policies have had a depressing effect. The French have gone their own willful, tragic way in struggling to hold their overseas possessions against the tide of nationalism. As the fear of war has grown less, the impulse toward unity has dried up like a trickle of water in the desert.

With the initiation of the Marshall Plan to rebuild Europe's economy there was a realization of the need to try to remedy certain basic weaknesses. Italy was overpopulated with an excess of agricultural labor, and France needed farm workers. Italians, it was decided, should be brought into France to work on French farms. This effort ended largely in failure after a prolonged bout with bureaucracy on both sides of the border.

A similar effort has been made to get Italian coal miners to work in British mines. That, too, has largely failed. And in part because of a shortage of labor, Britain's output of coal has declined, compelling the purchase of American coal at a high cost in badly needed foreign exchange.

The situation in Greece and Turkey, NATO partners on the eastern flank, is even more revealing. Greece represents in one respect a triumph. A Communist revolution aimed at complete takeover was put down. American aid has done wonders in building up both agriculture and industry.

But with only one-fourth of the country arable, Greece simply cannot sustain a population estimated at nearly 8,000,000, with a birth rate that remains high. The nationalist riots flaming up over Cyprus are a symptom of deep-seated frustration and despair growing out of the confinement of a vigorous and hard-working people in an area impossibly small and impoverished by years of warfare.

America and Britain Are Backbone of Strength—Industrial Development of Turkey Is Lagging.

In Turkey a somewhat similar situation exists. Massive American military assistance has been supplied to keep about 20 Turkish divisions under arms. But industrial development has not kept pace and the military burden is heavy for a primitive peasant country.

One consequence has been serious inflation and a widespread black market complicated by corruption and inefficiency in the central administration. Rioting broke out in Istanbul on Sept. 6, 1955, and before it could be checked property damage of at least $100,000,000 had been done to Greek shops, schools and churches. In the wake of this disaster estimates of the property loss ran as high as $400,000,000.

Ostensibly the riots were touched off by Turkish feeling over Cyprus and the Turkish minority on that troubled island. But those who know the country believe the discontent goes much deeper and Cyprus was merely an excuse to give vent to long pent-up resentments. Despite repeated prodding by American officials in Turkey, the Turkish government has not moved to make the essential fiscal reforms.

If NATO were an entity both politically and economically the Turks might have been prevailed upon to reach a solution in co-operation with other NATO countries. Likewise, co-operative effort in a truly unified organization might have prevented Cyprus from becoming the source of a nationalist infection so grave it threatens the entire eastern flank of the alliance.

In the same way the problem of immigration might have been attacked by common effort. All the resources of relatively unpopulated countries could have been organized in the larger context of the United Nations. Immigration today is on a piecemeal, hit-or-miss basis.

This is merely to note in passing certain of the long-term problems that underscore the failure to develop political-economic unity which would buttress NATO's military strength. There are immediate differences in policy that were also accentuated at last week's NATO meeting in Paris: differences covered up by the bland words about a NATO "cabinet" and the "new look," put out by the American propaganda mill.

The basic difference is with the French. One observer in Paris went so far as to say that it comes down to the view of French Premier Guy Mollet and his Foreign Minister, Christian Pineau, that the cold war should be abandoned in the light of the overtures for peace made by Moscow. Mollet and Pineau are shortly to visit Moscow where they will find a warm welcome for this view. It was stoutly opposed by Britain and the United States with the support of other Western Europeans.

Western Germany is another point of difference. Many of the allies complain about what they say is America's rigid approach to German reunification. Secretary of State Dulles has always insisted that unification through free elections must precede any reconsideration of Germany's role in the Atlantic alliance. Recently the Mollet-Pineau team were talked out of a reversal under which first place would be given to a neutral or limited role for Germany in return for Communist assurances on uniting the divided country.

ANOTHER LONG DISPUTE centers on the refusal of the West German government to pay the share of the cost of NATO defense troops on German soil that the allies believe to be her fair share. This could have serious consequences in the near future. Already reports have circulated at NATO headquarters that Britain would soon move to reduce or withdraw entirely, over a period of months, the three divisions committed to Europe for an indefinite period by Anthony Eden, then Foreign Secretary, just after the crisis over the European defense community.

British officials deny these rumors. But they do say that if the Germans continue to haggle over who pays the bill, then certainly the question will come to the fore as to why Britain in the midst of its current economic troubles should have to find something like $60,000,000 a year in foreign exchange to sustain British troops on the Rhine. The Conservative Government in London has already drastically cut back the defense budget, reducing the number of men under arms in the British Isles.

Much of this comes under the head of the relaxation about which Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther, retiring commander of Europe's NATO headquarters, complained about this week. Perhaps when peace broke out in the aftermath of the summit conference it was inevitable that this relaxation should be accelerated. The pessimists have always said that the democracies once the spur of fear was removed could never maintain a unified, resolute posture of strength.

To put a gloss of optimistic words over the reality is a deep disservice. More and more Secretary Dulles has substituted words for acts. It is obviously so much easier to hand out a pill of optimism than to face up to the kind of surgery called for by the present situation. The structure of NATO stands and it is an impressive structure. But what is inside to support it becomes an increasingly urgent question that almost no one in official position is willing to discuss.

Indonesia's President Sukarno, Visitor From Asia

By GEORGE H. HALL
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 12.

THE United States is preparing an extraordinary welcome for President Sukarno of Indonesia, who will arrive in Washington Wednesday aboard President Eisenhower's personal airplane, the Columbine, for his first visit to a Western nation.

Although the visit is described as social, it could have a significant effect, for better or worse, on American relations with Asia, particularly on our relations with the so-called neutralist countries of India, Indonesia, Burma and Ceylon.

Sukarno is regarded by his countrymen as Indonesia's George Washington. There is no more question about his leadership than there is about that of Prime Minister Nehru in India. Since first impressions often are strong and lasting, those of Sukarno, if they are favorable, could be of great value to the West as well as to Asia.

Sukarno has been to the Philippines, India and Pakistan, and, as a Moslem, has made his pilgrimage to Mecca, but that is all. Shortly after he accepted the invitation proffered in March by Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, he was invited by Soviet Russia, Red China, Italy, New Zealand, Canada and three Latin-American countries. He agreed only to spend six days in Canada, after his two-and-a-half-week visit to the United States, before returning home.

Although the Republic of Indonesia, formerly the Dutch East Indies, is little known in the United States, it is the world's third largest democracy (the largest being India and the second largest the United States), and in terms of wealth of natural resources is surpassed only by the United States and the Soviet Union. Indonesia is the sixth largest country in the world. It has a population of 80,000,000 and occupies an area about the size of the United States. It is, obviously, a key Asian country and of great importance in the East-West struggle.

Like many Indonesians, Sukarno has but one name. The persistent fiction that his first name is Achmed was invented by a newspaper man in 1945. Among most Indonesians he is known as Bung Karno (Brother Sukarno). As supreme commander of the Army, Navy and Air Force he also has the title of Panglima Tertinggi; he is usually pictured in a military uniform.

Sukarno is supposed to be above and beyond politics and occupies a position something like that of the Queen of England or the President of France. Actually, he has the power to be a dictator if he wanted to exercise it. He is reputedly the finest orator in the Far East and is a man of charm and personal courage. He is 54 years old.

Because of his official position discussions of United States-Indonesian problems—there are no pressing ones at the moment as far as is known—will be conducted by responsible government officers. Sukarno will be accompanied by an official party of about 15 (including the United States Ambassador to Indonesia, Hugh S. Cummings Jr.) and an unofficial group of about 20, including his 12-year-old son, Guntur, and photographers and correspondents.

SUKARNO

In Sukarno's official party will be the Indonesian Foreign Minister, Ruslan Abdulgani; the leaders of five major political parties, who have been given the rank of Ambassador for the occasion, and the Governor of West Java. Java, with a population of 54,000,000, is the main Indonesian island and the site of the capital, Jakarta.

The Indonesian delegation constitutes probably the largest and most important Asian group to visit the United States under similar circumstances. Prime Minister Nehru of India is coming to Washington for three or four days in early July but his visit will be rather informal and he is expected to confer privately with President Eisenhower, possibly at some nearby resort.

Less fanfare accompanied the visit to the United States last June of Prime Minister U Nu of Burma, although the welcome was a warm one. Nu was much impressed with his reception and, in turn, made a favorable impression on the American people by his simplicity and ready wit. Sir John Kotelawala, Prime Minister of Ceylon until his recent election defeat, was in Washington in December 1954.

These visits underline the importance Asia and its underdeveloped countries, newly emerged from colonial status, have assumed in world affairs. They also tend to underline some of the advantages the West has in its effort to maintain the independence of the new countries and to prevent them from falling under Communist domination.

One obvious advantage is that of language. Few westerners can speak the difficult Asian tongues. There are virtually no Asians versed in the Russian language but many, particularly men of influence, who speak English. Kotelawala, Nu, Sukarno and Nehru are fluent in English.

India, Indonesia, Burma and Ceylon have a total population of about 475,000,000. In international politics they oppose commitments to either the great East or West power blocs, a fact which has complicated United States relations with them. Of the other Asian countries, the Philippines, Thailand and Pakistan are tied to the West by the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization; Formosa has a treaty with the United States; China is Communist; Korea and Indochina are divided; Japan faces West.

The tentative schedule for Sukarno leaves little, if anything, to be desired in the way of honors and opportunities to gain an insight into some of the major factors in American life. When the Columbine arrives at noon Wednesday (Mr. Eisenhower is sending the plane to Hawaii to pick up the Sukarno party) it will be met by Vice President Nixon, Dulles and a military guard of honor. Sukarno will lunch at the White House with the President and will be entertained at dinner by the Nixons. He will in turn give a dinner for the President and Mrs. Eisenhower.

In addition to the usual number of ceremonials, visits to historical spots and a round of social events in Washington, Sukarno will address a joint session of Congress and speak before the National Press Club. In the course of his trip he will place wreaths on the tombs of George Washington at Mount Vernon, Thomas Jefferson at Monticello, Va., and Abraham Lincoln at Springfield, Ill.

There may be something more than protocol in Sukarno's visits to the Washington, Jefferson and Lincoln graves. Sukarno is a student of American history and the successful revolutionary movement he led in the forties was in many ways inspired by the ideas of the American revolution. When Sukarno opened the historic 29-nation Asian-African Conference in Bandung, Indonesia, last year he recalled that the day, April 18, was the anniversary of Paul Revere's ride of 1775.

Sukarno will spend nearly two days at the University of Virginia, will go to Fort Bragg, N.C., for military demonstrations, and will be given a formal reception at the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis. In New York, after the customary ticker-tape parade, he will receive an honorary degree from Columbia University and will participate in various United Nations functions. He will visit the Stock Exchange, museums and housing developments. He will also make a kinescope for a May 27 NBC television broadcast.

After a day in Philadelphia, Sukarno will fly to Springfield on Saturday, May 26. He will be entertained by Illinois Gov. and Mrs. Stratton and probably will visit a nearby farm as well as the Lincoln shrines. He will leave Springfield Sunday morning for Detroit and tours of Ford, General Motors and Chrysler plants and then will fly west for a look at the Grand Canyon and Hoover Dam.

He will visit Hollywood as the guest of Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association, and then go to San Francisco, where he will visit the University of California at Berkeley. He will attend a special service at the Mormon tabernacle in Salt Lake City and then fly to Niagara Falls, N.Y., where he will enter Canada. He is due in Ottawa June 4. While in the United States his party will travel in an Air Force plane.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

With Six Months to Go

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

On a recent "Meet the Press" program 27,000,000 Americans had their first full-scale opportunity to view the man they voted for in 1952, to gauge any change, to see for themselves.

To this writer, Adlai Stevenson never fails to make me proud of my vote in 1952. His appeal to logic, intelligence, understanding and just plain human decency is unmatched in politics today.

He is informed, personally, which in itself is unique among the top brass these days. In this instance, his earnest concern for the American's right to know how and where he stands in today's world is an echo of every intelligent citizen's thought.

Even if no one listens to what our scientists and such men as Gen. LeMay are saying, most Americans know this is deadly serious stuff, and the best brains we can get will be none too good for the world game that's in the making. We have to grow up sometime.

Personally, it is inconceivable to me that Mr. Eisenhower hasn't lost many more than the 6,000,000 votes by which he surpassed Mr. Stevenson in 1952. That he should have won any from Mr. S. in his three years of motherly advice and little else is a near impossibility.

Give Mr. S. just a par representation on TV and the press of the nation and Americans cannot fail to recognize a potentially great man when they see one—not just a good man, but possibly a great man of whom history will make us proud.

LONELY PETUNIA.

Your explanation of Senator Kefauver's poor showing in the primary in Indiana sounds like something out of the mouth of Paul Butler. Of course it wasn't a general election but, boy, what a chance those poor, impoverished farmers in Indiana missed!

You carefully forgot to mention you can "cross-over" in the Indiana primaries and if the people—especially farmers—are so mad at Ike why the dickens would so many of them vote for him instead of Kefauver?

Like you say in "Those Primary Sweeps," "President Eisenhower always wins" and that's what irks you, which is your right. But don't let it warp your editorial thinking.

ART MARRIOTT.
Columbia, Mo.

When Eisenhower, unopposed for the Republican nomination, gets a good vote in the primary of a normally Republican state, the fact is heralded in headlines and editorials by the press as evidence of his great political strength. This is "bias of the press" of course.

But when Eisenhower's right-hand man in Texas, who bolted his own party last election, and with the help of oil carried his state with him to Ike, is overwhelmingly repudiated, the news goes almost unheralded in the press. And even in the Post-Dispatch, all the editor can feebly come up with in a one paragraph editorial is, "Doubtless a major factor was the many scandals that have revolved around Gov. Shivers."

Is the editor sure it was just scandals around Gov. Shivers? Does he really think this has no national significance? Has the Post-Dispatch, long praised as unprejudiced, gone biased too? We readers would like to keep our faith.

Silex, Mo. J. LUKIN BROWN.

In crimes such as robbery, to attempt is enough—
The law, in such cases, can be pretty tough.
If you try but you fail to make off with some stuff
The penalties still can turn out to be rough.

'Phone calls were put through by a known White House aide
To help Murray Chotiner. They seem not to have paid.
So, says Mr. E., since no profit was made
His White House directives, he thinks, were obeyed.

A flexible ethic, if comment I may,
Because it has failed—is the try
then O.K.?
If the final result hadn't been just that way,
What then, Mr. President, please would you say?

Dramatic and Accurate

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

This is to thank and congratulate you for the two-page spread in the April 22 PICTURES on seriously disturbed children.

It is not easy to write about mentally ill children. There are so many complicated, disputed and unknown areas. We at the League School have seen so much that was garbled and distorted written about our children that it was heartening to come across a job that had dramatic impact without sacrifice of accuracy.

In Paul Berg you have a warm, alert and keenly sensitive newspaper man with the rare gift of being able to establish rapport with our withdrawn and highly disturbed youngsters. We are deeply grateful to you and to him for the excellent job in enlightening the public on mental illness. You are maintaining the reputation you have long held—of publishing one of the world's really great newspapers.

CARL FENICHEL,
Director, The League School for Seriously Disturbed Children.
New York City.

Reading Comes First

One of the explanations for the "poor reader" who is a current problem on every level of American education points to the increase in the school population. More children are being educated, or so the argument runs, and therefore more of them are showing deficiencies in the fundamental skills.

If this contention is soundly based it can only mean that a disturbingly large number of the pupils in our schools are ineducable. For if they cannot be taught reading, writing and arithmetic they are obviously disqualified for higher studies. Nobody understands a text he cannot read.

If it be assumed that no improvement in facilities, methods or teaching personnel could substantially better the training in the elementary schools then admission to colleges should be made harder and not easier. It is a waste of everybody's time and of the public funds to force-feed a lot of young people with mental nourishment they cannot assimilate. It is worse to revise curricula downward in order to accommodate the deficiencies of an expanding number of undergraduates.

But must we accept the premise on which these unhappy conclusions are based? Is it a fact that a certain number of seemingly normal children cannot be taught to read, write or cipher?

Recently disclosed figures concerning education in the Soviet Union have a direct bearing on this question. According to the United States Office of Education:

> Whereas each of the more than 1,000,000 Soviet students graduating from secondary schools last June had taken five years of physics, one year of astronomy, four years of chemistry, five of biology, 10 of mathematics including algebra, geometry and trigonometry, less than a third of a total of approximately the same number of American high school graduates had taken as much as a year in chemistry.

It may be assumed that the current Soviet emphasis on science and engineering is partly responsible for these academic results. Nevertheless it should be quite evident that such comprehensive schooling in "hard" subjects could not be successfully undertaken if the students coming up from the primary schools were ill prepared in the basic skills.

Disturbing comparisons are also implicit in testimony submitted recently to the Research and Development subcommittee of the Joint Congressional Atomic Energy Committee. As reported by James Reston of The New York Times this testimony revealed in part that:

> The number of qualified teachers of science and mathematics in United States high schools dropped 52 per cent in the last five years, while United States high school enrollment has increased by 16 per cent.
> Fifty-three per cent of all high schools in the United States do not teach physics and only half of the high schools teach chemistry.
> Though six years of foreign language study is compulsory for every Russian boy and girl in the first 10 years of school, only 14 per cent of all United States public school students are now enrolled in any modern language class and over 56 per cent of United States public schools offer no modern foreign language instruction at all.

What transpires from all this is that American students are shying away from all "hard" studies—and not merely science courses—in larger relative numbers. An obvious reason is "lack of interest"; and it is fair to assume that insufficient basic preparation has contributed to such indifference. By comparison it appears that masses of young Russians are being thoroughly trained in the primary grades and are ready for advanced studies when they reach them.

To suggest that these figures indicate an inherent deficiency in American school children seems absurd. On the contrary the results shown in a number of better American grade schools imply very strongly that any child who is not psychologically or physically ill can be taught to read, write and cipher. Such at least should be a working hypothesis for a democratic society until it is found to be wrong by practical tests.

Extensive and intensive tests demand facilities that are not now available. And this, apparently, is the heart of the matter.

Until the American people are willing to provide the needed space, facilities and increased and improved personnel that our educational system so obviously needs, the reading problem cannot be effectively attacked at its source.

The problem is serious and national in scope. To solve it cities and states must join hands with the Federal Government.

Other Cities Move Ahead

About 60 per cent of 1137 cities with more than 10,000 population own and operate parking lots. Specifically, the Public Administration Clearing House reports, some 675 of these cities operate 2397 parking lots or garages, and the number has increased by 4 per cent a year. But St. Louis owns no real part of this record. This city has talked about building parking areas for years. It has won legal authority to do so though it still lacks some desirable subsidiary power, such as the right to use parking meter revenue to pay for new lots. A month ago the Off-Street Parking Commission recommended building two downtown garages and four outlying lots. And there we stand. When is St. Louis going to join the parade?

Execution to Assassination

If a tragic series of reprisals and counter-reprisals has not already begun on the embittered island of Cyprus, it seems only a matter of time before bloodshed increases.

The EOKA or pro-Greek Cypriot rebel organization has circulated leaflets claiming that two British soldiers, earlier reported missing, have been hanged in retaliation for Britain's execution of two Greek rebels. Field Marshal Sir John Harding, the British governor, says he does not believe the claim. He regards it as propaganda.

Propaganda or not, however, is it unlikely that the EOKA will attempt to retaliate? Cyprus has already experienced too much death to doubt that the rule of terrorism is an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth. And if the British do not believe that, they have only to remember their experiences in Palestine before Israel won freedom.

The ominous trend of assassination and execution on Cyprus should prove that bayonets will not solve the problem or determine the status of the island for long. The London press generally agrees on that. While British newspapers regard the hangings as a tragic necessity, they say the noose is no answer for Cyprus.

In view of that, it will be difficult for Americans to understand why some London papers are angry because Secretary of State Dulles reportedly warned Britain that postponement of the hangings might ease the Cyprus situation. Secretary Dulles may not have given such advice, but if he did it was sensible enough. The United States is caught between British and Greek resentment, the latter evidenced by cancellation of the Sixth Fleet's "good will" tour to the Grecian island of Crete. Britain's interest, and that of the West, is to maintain a military base in the Eastern Mediterranean. Spilled blood will not secure that base. Only determined negotiations with Greece, which after all is an ally, can bring any real security to the rebellious island. And every shot fired now will make negotiations more difficult.

Questions for Some Officials

It soon will be a month since the House committee, consisting of Representatives Denton of Indiana and Price and Simpson of Illinois, reported on the investigation of the toll bridge over the Wabash river on the highway between St. Louis and Evansville, Ind.

This committee of two Democrats and one Republican found so much financial monkey business in the private use of tolls collected from users of the bridge that the three Congressmen made a series of strong recommendations. Here are four of them in summary form:

1. That the books of the bridge commission be audited annually by the United States Comptroller General.
2. That the present members of the bridge commission be ousted, that new members be appointed and that the terms be made statutory for six years.
3. That the bridge be turned over to Illinois or Indiana and that if neither state takes it over in a reasonable time, it be taken by the United States Bureau of Public Roads.
4. That the Attorneys General of the States of Illinois and Indiana and the United States Attorneys in districts in which the bridge exists, pursuant to law, be advised of the findings "so that they or any of them may take whatever appropriate action they or either of them deem proper."

Last Sunday we suggested that United States District Attorney Clifford Raemer at East St. Louis would find the report interesting if he were to read it. Mr. Raemer has announced that he is asking Attorney General Brownell for instructions on how to proceed. The many users of the bridge who have been learning how Roy Clippinger and his associates on the bridge commission handled the funds they took in will now await Mr. Brownell's reaction.

The Attorney General of Illinois is Latham Castle who has been renominated in the Republican primary to succeed himself. What does Mr. Castle think of the committee's findings? Is he satisfied that all is well? If so why does the committee say the terms of the bridge commissioners should be declared vacant?

What about Congressman Charles W. Vursell of Salem in whose district the Illinois portion of the bridge is situated? Does the record of Clippinger & Co., now made public, suit him?

And what about Senator Dirksen who is asking the voters of Illinois to return him to office in the November election? What does he think of the diversion of many thousands of dollars in toll bridge funds for personal benefit?

What do any or all of these officials have to say?

Fit for the Fray

Nobody will wonder that President Eisenhower left Walter Reed Hospital for a round of golf wearing a jaunty air and a broad smile. He had just been given a medical report, based on his first full checkup since Feb. 11, which finds him in every respect in excellent physical condition. The whole nation shares his good spirits, and hopes that he went right out to Burning Tree and broke whatever score it was (90? 80? 70?) that he had a mind to break yesterday afternoon.

For DeVoto and Posterity

People who live within the St. Louis city limits probably will have to apply for traveling memberships in the Bernard DeVoto Memorial Battalion. This is a commendable outfit being recruited by Harper's Magazine to "fight people in town who believe that beauty is waste, that the community can't afford to leave a little open space here and there because it isn't earning money."

Except for the parks—of which there might be more—St. Louis does not have much open space left to be defended. Maybe the battalion will amend its by-laws to sanction the use of bull-dozers to create such spots of greenery, air and sunshine, instead of just marshalling forces on behalf of those which already exist. (If it wants an example of what can be done in this line, we refer it to the joining of the Aloe and Memorial plazas.)

The battalion should have no trouble, however, in finding members in the county and along some of Missouri's most traveled highways. There can be found "billboards and tourist cabins and juke joints, the asphalt parking lots and the prefabricated slums-of-tomorrow." No doubt, there is money in all of these; but cannot money be made without turning Nature's beautiful countryside into what the battalion calls a "hideous eczema, creeping like a Wave of the Future, from every metropolitan center?"

We agree with the battalion that this can be avoided. Consider, for example, the New York Thruway. It offers all the conveniences—gas stations, restaurants, motels and the like—the motorist can desire, yet by placing them a few hundred feet off the road and by thoughtful planning and planting they have been made to enhance rather than spoil their environment.

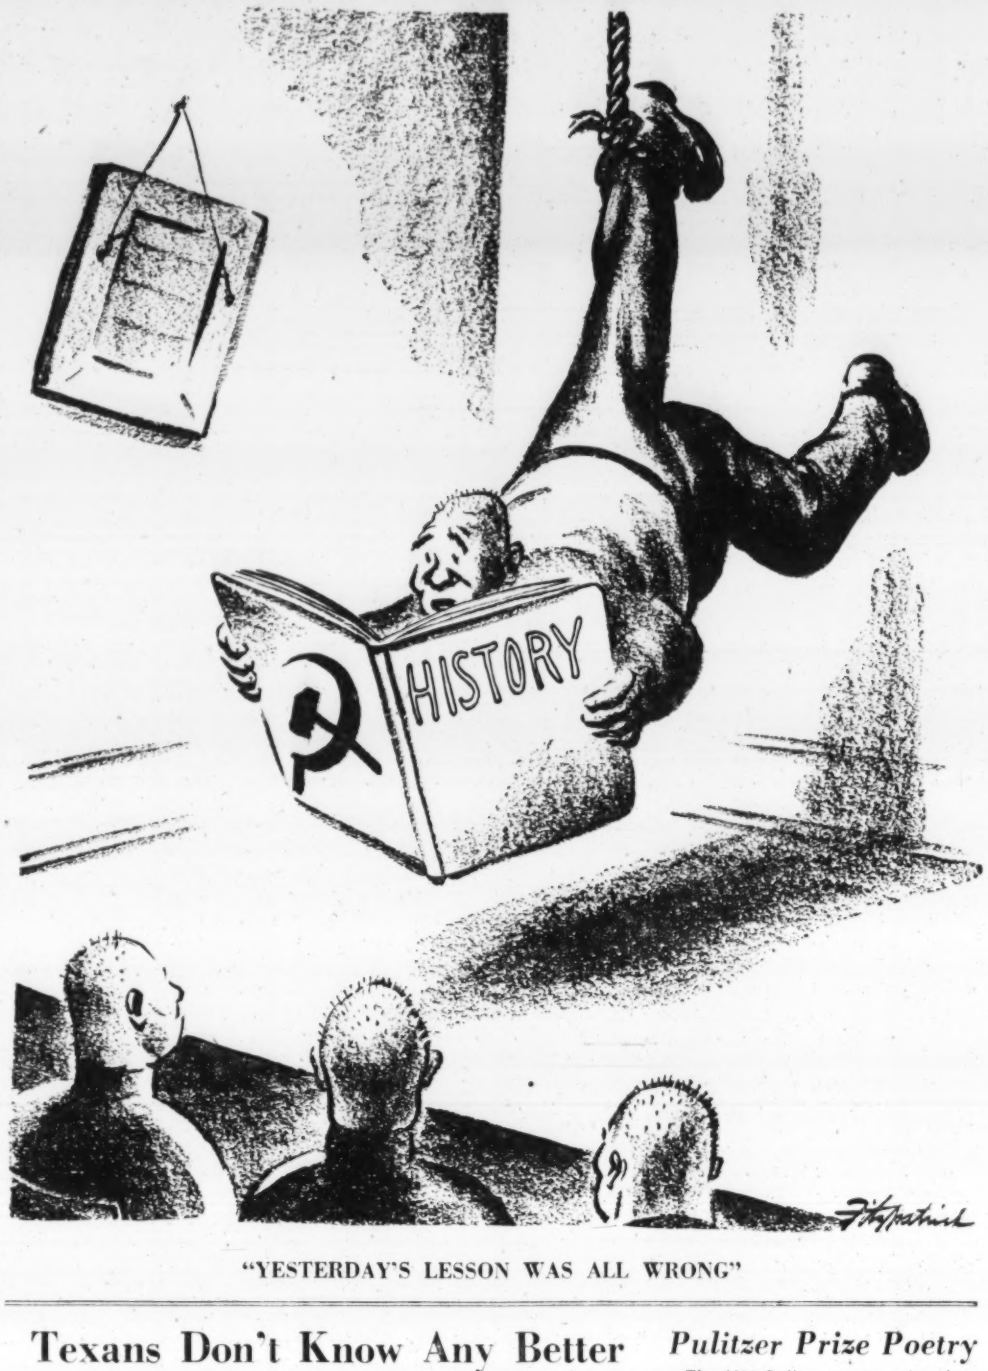

Reasonable zoning laws can do as much, especially in new and growing communities. But the adoption and enforcement of such laws—which can spare us the shame of bequeathing only unrelieved ugliness to our grandchildren—calls for work on the part of interested citizens. People must appear before community groups and municipal and county authorities to convince them that beauty should be conserved.

Don't Tinker With It

Senator Russell Long is one of the abler and more thoughtful of the Southern members of Congress. For this reason some attention may be given to the Louisiana Senator's proposal to limit the tenure of Supreme Court Justices to 12 years and to require at least half the members of the court in the future to have six years' prior judicial experience.

The fewer restrictions on the Supreme Court the better. The less Congress tinkers with the Justices and their work the better. Limited tenure would only move a Justice into retirement on a set schedule. If it would remove a mediocre Judge it would also cost the Supreme Court the best services of a John Marshall, an Oliver Wendell Holmes Jr. or a Louis Dembitz Brandeis.

As for Senator McCarthy's bleat in Congress that the Senate erred when it confirmed Chief Justice Warren, that is only another insight into the junior Senator from Wisconsin. Chief Justice Warren is making a good leader and a good administrator of our highest court. He will have few worries if the greatest of them is what Joseph R. McCarthy thinks about him!

"YESTERDAY'S LESSON WAS ALL WRONG"

Texans Don't Know Any Better

The Mirror of Public Opinion

Historian now living in Texas finds Texans are provincial because their press is; state's big newspapers ignore much national and foreign news; to avoid mental isolationism, readers might buy a Canadian paper; they would get more news of U.S.A.

Hugh Russell Fraser, Author, Journalist and Historian, in Harper's Magazine

Do you have an idea that most Texans don't know what is going on in the world? That they are cheerfully unaware of events in foreign parts—an area which includes forty-seven states and all other nations? That they are, on the whole, the most provincial people in America?

This is very close to the truth.

They don't know the score because their newspapers don't tell them. It might be hard to prove what many Texans have come to suspect: that their daily papers are the worst in America. But it is not hard to prove that they carry the least news. Less news, that is, of the nation and the world than you will find in the press of any other major state.

Like most of the big Texas dailies, the Dallas News is enormously prosperous. Yet it carries an average of only 5½ columns of world and national news, out of a total of 28 columns of news in a typical weekday edition.

Dallas and the Outer World

Suppose that you are an out-of-state visitor to Dallas, eager for the kind of informative reporting that you are used to. In bewilderment, you turn away from the News and buy a copy of its rival, the Times-Herald. An average issue of this paper, during last January, contained 29½ columns of news, of which 6 originated beyond the borders of Texas.

You might expect the Fort Worth Star-Telegram to try to outdo its hated rivals in the field where they are weakest. You would be right; but just barely. The same kind of examination of all January weekday editions yielded an average of 6½ columns of "outside" news, out of a total of 31.

In desperation, you might catch a plane for Houston, the biggest and loudest city in the state. Its two big papers are run by Texans who have seen something of the world — the Chronicle by Jesse Jones, financial wizard of the New Deal, and the Post by Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby, until recently an ornament of the Eisenhower Cabinet. Another encouraging sign, you might assume, is the radio and television advertising of the Chronicle, which boasts that the paper is served "by seven world-wide news services."

The announcer always forgets to add: "We throw away 93 per cent of all the wire news which pours into our office from the four corners of the earth." For the Chronicle prints an average of only 6 columns of such material, and the Post only 7½—although both papers publish more total columns of news than any other dailies in the state.

Comparison With Other States

Of course no paper could print all of the copy which flows in through its teletypes—but in other states the leading publications do roughly three times as well as their Texas counterparts. Consider, for instance, the space devoted to national and world news on a typical day in these three: the Kansas City Star—13 column out of 30; the St. Louis Post-Dispatch—13½ columns out of 33; the Denver Post—14 out of 32.

In fact the Post-Dispatch usually prints more news of the nation and world on page 2 alone than is to be found in the entire edition of any major Texas daily paper.

Space alone does not tell the whole story. The way the news is played in Texas is still more shocking. For example, on Nov. 5 of last year Harry S. Truman made a speech in New Orleans about the South and its politics.

Now it is obvious that, whether you agree with him or not, the fact that a former President spoke in that place on that subject was a major news item. It was so treated—on the front pages—in Atlanta, St. Louis, Oklahoma City, Albuquerque, Des Moines, and many other cities. But the Houston Post tucked the story away at the bottom of the fourth column on page 22.

Again, it is instructive to note how the Texas press handled the congressional battle over legislation to exempt natural-gas producers from federal regulation. Like anything which concerns the states's overlords—the oil and gas men—the story got a big play. Not a single paper in the state, so far as I can discover, bothered to mention the fact—emphasized repeatedly during the debate by Senator Douglas of Illinois—that Texas has 1,700,000 consumers of natural gas, but only 900 producers.

The Sahara of Journalism

In this journalistic Sahara there is one notable oasis: the Beaumont Enterprise. It is far and away the best edited newspaper in Texas, and the only one, with the possible exception of the Corpus Christi Caller, which gives intelligent and balanced coverage of national and international news. In January the Enterprise printed an average of 18 columns of news every day; and 10½ of these originated outside the state.

Even more surprising—for Texas—is its fairness. At the height of the Dixon-Yates controversy, for example, the Enterprise printed the Republican and Democratic arguments in parallel columns on the front page.

No other Texas daily remotely approached this kind of even-handed treatment. (Perhaps these facts explain why so many Texans buy the paper at hotel newsstands in Houston and Dallas.)

A handful of weeklies and country papers exhibit the kind of enterprise which ought to—but doesn't—shame their big city colleagues. Many of the scandals which have rocked the state during the last two years were brought to light by such small fry. The veterans' land frauds, for example, were uncovered by a little paper at Cuero, which earned a Pulitzer prize.

Fearful of Anything 'Foreign'

Reporters on the big papers aren't lazy exactly—but they get the impression that they would not further their careers by digging into the kind of news which might embarrass the local Chamber of Commerce, the oil men, the ruling political clique, or the lobbyists who crowd around the legislature.

The unknown is generally frightening—so it is not surprising that many Texans seem to live in fear. They are scared of many things with "foreign" origins—the Federal Government, labor unions (widely regarded as tools of Satan and Stalin), the United Nations, the national leadership of both parties.

A few months ago I was talking to a Dallas advertising man whose income runs into five comfortable figures. I was astonished to discover that he had never heard of three leading American historians: Charles A. Beard, Allan Nevins or Claude G. Bowers.

Later, by way of experience, I asked a group of ten people at a cocktail party to name the prime minister of either Britain or France. One suggested Eden for Britain; the others weren't so sure. As for France, nobody would volunteer to mention anyone.

For those Texans who refuse to put up with this state of affairs any longer, I can suggest a simple remedy. Let them subscribe to the Daily Star of Toronto, Canada. It carries more news about the United States than either the Dallas News or the Houston Chronicle.

Pulitzer Prize Poetry

The 1955 Pulitzer poetry prize given to North and South—A Cold Spring (Houghton Mifflin, 95 pgs., $3.50) further honors Elizabeth Bishop. She received the Houghton Mifflin Poetry Award for the first part of this volume, the source for the column below, and the 1952 Shelley Memorial Award. A former Library of Congress poetry consultant, she has received Guggenheim and Bryn Mawr fellowships and belongs to the National Institute of Arts and Letters. Although Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, is her home, the uncompromising rocks and the cold sea air of her native New England still show in her work.

Letter to N.Y.

In your next letter I wish you'd say where you are going and what you are doing;
how are the plays, and after the plays
what other pleasures you're pursuing:

taking cabs in the middle of the night, driving as if to save your soul where the road goes round and round the park
and the meter glares like a moral owl, and the trees look so queer and green standing alone in big black caves and suddenly you're in a different place where everything seems to happen in waves,

and most of the jokes you just can't catch,
like dirty words rubbed off a slate, and the songs are loud but somehow dim and it gets so terribly late, and coming out of the brownstone house to the gray sidewalk, the watered street, one side of the building rises with the sun

like a glistening field of wheat.

—Wheat, not oats, dear. I'm afraid if it's wheat it's none of your sowing, nevertheless I'd like to know what you are doing and where you are going.

Chemin de Fer

Alone on the railroad track
I walked with pounding heart.
The ties were too close together or maybe too far apart.

The scenery was impoverished:
scrub-pine and oak; beyond its mingled gray-green foliage
I saw the little pond where the dirty hermit lives, lie like an old tear holding onto its injuries

lucidly year after year.

The hermit shot off his shot-gun and the tree by his cabin shook.
Over the pond went a ripple
The pet hen went chook-chook.

"Love should be put into action!"
screamed the old hermit.
Across the pond an echo tried and tried to confirm it.

The Colder the Air

We must admire her perfect aim, this huntress of the winter air whose level weapon needs no sight, if it were not that everywhere
her game is sure, her shot is right.
The least of us could do the same.

The chalky birds or boats stand still, reducing her conditions of chance;
air's gallery marks identically the narrow gallery of her glance.
The target-center in her eye is equally her aim and will.

Time's in her pocket, ticking loud on one stalled second. She'll consult not time or circumstance. She calls on atmosphere for her result.
(It is this clock that later falls in wheels and chimes of leaf and cloud.)

GEN. PHILLIPS

Scientist and Aids in Bunker 19 Miles From H-Bomb Target To Feel First Effects of Blast

They Will Have Cameras, Other Instruments to Record Shock—Boulders to Be Thrown Around — Preparations Reach Climax on D-Day Minus One.

By BRIG. GEN. THOMAS R. PHILLIPS, U.S.A. (Ret.)
Military Analyst of the Post-Dispatch.

ABOARD U.S.S. MT. McKINLEY, Off Eniwetok, Sunday, May 13.

TODAY is D minus two. This is the status of operation that will remain in effect until task force officials find that the weather pattern has improved enough to warrant moving into D minus one operations prior to setting off the United States's first airburst of a hydrogen bomb, which now has been postponed for the sixth time.

D minus two is a sort of preparatory warning, but it is D minus one that sets wheels in motion. Before a blast, the islands are heavily populated with scientists adjusting their instruments and contractors installing instrumentation for tests to follow.

There are a multitude of buildings, bulldozers, hoists, instruments, cables, pipes and all manner of queer installations for incredible instruments. On D minus one the rollup starts.

The scientists check the instruments, put film in the automatic cameras, make final checks of the electric recording systems and leave late in the evening. Tents are taken down, buildings dismantled and all but the heaviest construction equipment is loaded on landing craft and removal to a safe place. The last personnel to leave are removed by helicopter.

Only 10 on Bunker.

On all of Bikini Atoll, with its 20 odd islands, only 10 men will be left in the bunker at Enyu where the control instruments are centered. Enyu is 19 miles from the shot island, Namu, but even that far away 30 or 40-foot waves set up by the blast may break over the island.

Dr. Galen Felt, with a small number of assistants, will man the bunker. The writer asked him what his sensation was when a shot went off (he has done this before). He said it was one of relief that it had not been postponed again. He will not know anything for two minutes after the shot, he said, then there will be some increase in air pressure as the shock wave hits and they will hear stones, boulders and everything movable being thrown around.

Felt's concrete bunker has openings in it to permit recording cameras and other instruments to register the heat and gamma radiation and to take pictures of the fireball from the instant it is a pinpoint of light, and of its growth. There is also spectographic equipment to measure the wave lengths of the detonations light so as to determine what constituents of the bomb burned. One device is a camera that takes pictures at the rate of 10,000,000 frames per second.

Exposed for 70 Frames.

This makes time all but stand still. It is as if one second were lengthened to three years. The camera only exposes 70 frames altogether, but on these the inception and growth of the fireball are recorded.

Then there is a shed full of cameras on steel posts embedded in concrete. The shed is open on the side toward the blast. It will be blown away by the shock wave. Each camera is at a different elevation so that successively they will have pictures of the fireball from the point of burst until it rises high in the sky.

Felt is the acting commander of the Scientific Task Force. As the chief, he feels it his duty to stay in charge of the dangerous job when the blast occurs. The official biography of Dr. Felt does not give his age, possibly because he is as young as he looks. He received a Ph.D. in physics from the California Institute of Technology in 1951.

He entered atomic energy work with the old Manhattan project as an enlisted man in the special Engineer Detachment in January 1945 and remained after his discharge as a civilian physicist.

Physics Student.

At the suggestion of Drs. Darol K. Froman and Alvin C. Graves, he entered Cal Tech to study physics, spending summers at Los Alamos.

The slight, deeply tanned scientist met the press outside his concrete bunker, clad in sneakers and shorts. His self confidence was innate and without blinking an eyelash he answered questions simply and straightly, turning aside with the skill of long experience those that touched on classified matters.

He was not in the least worried about his uniquely dangerous job. If all goes well, it will not be dangerous, but only uncomfortable for a time. But an error in the bomb drop or the height of burst could have serious consequences. Neither will happen, if the utmost in human care can prevent a mistake.

Complex Instruments.

The instruments used to find out just what happens when a big blast lights the skies for hundreds of miles are complex beyond imagination. A building for a spectograph to determine the wave lengths of the light of the bomb costs $150,000. The instrument costs another $100,000.

To detect gamma radiation, collimaters—tubes leading directly from the blast to successive bunkers—are erected so that the radiation can be detected without extraneous effects.

There are other instruments to detect gamma radiation, one operating very much like the photo electric cell used to open doors. As the radiation passes between the two instruments in pipes it registers.

Swift Recordings.

Some of the electronic recording instruments close to the blast must telegraph their record in a fraction of a millionth of a second before they are destroyed. The record is made on recording machinery in safe bunkers some distance away.

At 6 p.m., on D minus one, the B-52 bomber carrying the H-bomb is loaded and made ready as are the other aircraft that will be stationed at various points around the explosion. At 3 a.m., on D day the planes take off for Bikini Atoll 200 miles away. If the weather turns bad at the last minute the shot can be called off at any time up to one minute before it is scheduled to drop.

When the bomb is released it trips a frequency modulation wave that automatically starts the timer in the bunker. The timer actuates all the recording instruments and cameras at predetermined seconds, or thousandths of seconds, before the actual shot time. It also starts a tape recorder on which Felt's voice, already recorded, counts down the time of fall by seconds down to zero when the burst occurs.

Devastation at Runit.

Visit to the island of Runit, where a small bomb was exploded a week ago Saturday, reveals a scene of devastation near the blast, like nothing so much as a dreadful battlefield. Everything within half a mile was leveled, angle irons that once were part of the bomb platform are torn into two and three pieces and scattered over the sand. Pieces of aluminum roofing are crumpled like balls of paper.

The sands several hundred yards from ground zero are pressed tight, as if by a giant hand. A few slivers of wood can be found. The area was still so "hot" with radiation that at 700 yards it was necessary to don protective coveralls, bootees and caps. It was possible to approach to within 200 or 300 yards of the crater before the radioactivity became too intense for the very severe criteria of safety used by the AEC.

The rim of the crater was sand and limestone thrown up about 25 feet. It was irregular with peaks so sharp they looked like the mountains on the moon.

Shot Above Lagoon.

The crater appeared to be about 100 yards in diameter. The shot was fired from a platform just above the water of a shallow lagoon. It is now a lake filled with water to tide level. Judging by the size of the crater, this blast had a force of between 10 and 20 kilotons, and energy released equivalent to the explosion of between 10,000 and 20,000 tons of TNT.

From the ship 15 miles away the explosion seemed to be small. But it was beyond the horizon by some miles and then was quickly obscured by low hanging clouds. One unique piece of instrumentation for this shot was two absolutely straight pipes about 16 inches in diameter and half a mile long leading from ground zero to a recording bunker.

The air in the pipes was exhausted, leaving a vacuum, so that spectographic instruments could record the light waves without the interference of air. The blast tossed the heavy pipe around like match sticks for about 500 yards, great sections torn into pieces and others flattened. Some tents and buildings about a mile from the blast were left standing. They were damaged but not seriously.

Evidence Gone.

Most of the evidence had been cleaned up and burned. This shot exhausted part of its energy, up to 20 or 25 per cent, in making its crater. Like an artillery shell that bursts on the ground and sends its fragments upward at varying angles, the major force of the shock wave of this explosion also was considerably above the tent and machinery area.

There is not a tree or growing thing left on Runit. A large number of additional shots are scheduled for this series. It was possible to see from Runit seven shot towers built or building for more tests. Most of the islands are small and a single shot destroys the palms and pandamus trees that once covered them. The big blasts entirely wipe out the island.

A hundred years from now, when mankind has recovered from its atomic madness perhaps the palms and trees will have grown again and the Polynesian chiefs will be back, making castles out of what to them will be the mysterious bunkers, and the South Seas Isles again will be islands of peace.

TITO LEAVES FOR HOME AFTER 'SUCCESSFUL' TALKS

PARIS, May 12 (UP) — Marshal Josip (Tito) Broz of Yugoslavia headed home today after "successful" talks with French Premier Guy Mollet.

The talks were preliminary to visits to Russia by both Tito and Mollet. Ouf of them came Tito's statement that Yugoslavia plans to line up with neither East nor West but considers herself a mediating link between the two.

Anti-Shivers Swing Not All Anti-Eisenhower Vote; Governor Himself Has Lost His Political Glamour Supporters Deserted After He Ignored Texas Administration Scandals.

By SAM B. ARMSTRONG
National Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

AUSTIN, Tex., May 12.

TEXAS, true to form, has the biggest and bestest list of explanations for last week's Democratic uprising under which Gov. Allan Shivers, in the view of "loyal" Democrats, got his come-uppance.

The post-mortem catalogue is certainly the largest, because it includes all the reasons suggested anywhere else and then some. And in this comprehensiveness lies its claim to being the best, because of the diversity of interests that is to be found among the 254 sprawling counties of Texas.

If northern Democrats have any notion that shame-faced apostates who voted for President Eisenhower in 1952, penitently joined angry "loyal" party members and turned on the man who led the Texas defection, they are badly mistaken.

Some of the Eisenhower glamour is gone for Texans but it was not because of this that the Governor lost so much of the "Shivercrat" vote that had made it possible for the President to carry the state by 133,650 votes.

Own Glamour Tarnished.

A principal reason lies in the fact that Shivers, himself, has suddenly lost most of his glamour as his political chickens, hatched during almost seven years as Governor, come home to roost.

How ineffectual were the cries of "turncoat" was demonstrated in 1954 when Shivers won a third elective two-year term, after receiving 53.18 per cent of the vote in a Democratic runoff primary against Ralph Yarborough, Austin attorney. Shivers first became Governor in July 1949 to fill an unexpired term.

But the nonchalance with which the debonair young Governor had ignored the scandals which came to light during his administration finally caused resentment among erstwhile supporters. This record was gathered together by the opposition and displayed to the voters in the recent intensive campaign to wrest from Shivers control of the Texas State Democratic Convention which is to meet at Dallas May 22 to elect a 56-vote delegation to the Democratic National Convention at Chicago Aug. 13, where the party nominee for President will be chosen.

In Office Since Graduation.

The 49-year-old Governor who was elected to the State Senate in 1935, two years after his graduation from law school, and has held public office ever since, suffered his first political defeat last week. When precinct delegates met in each county to elect delegates to the state convention, the tickets supported by "loyalist" forces headed by House Speaker Sam Rayburn and Senator Lyndon B. Johnson won 1450 votes in the 1900-vote state convention and claimed 150 others contested by Shivers, who was able to elect only 300 sure delegates.

Shivers has contended that the duties of a governor, who sits on many commissions and boards, are so heavy that he cannot be held responsible for official wrongdoing by members of the administration. "Loyalist" and "liberal" Democrats held him accountable for the record of his administration, however, in numerous speeches sponsored by the Democratic Advisory Council set up under the direction of Rayburn when the Texas National Committeeman Wright Morrow was ousted by the Democratic National Committee.

Veterans Land Scandal.

One of the boards of which Shivers was a member administered the Texas veterans' land program for which the state had authorized $100,000,000 for purchase of land to be sold to war veterans at cost, in order to establish them on farms. The other two members of the board were Bascom Giles, who had been elected Texas Land Commissioner for nine terms, and Attorney General John Ben Sheppard.

Giles pleaded guilty of accepting a $30,000 bribe from land promoters who sold 663 acres to the state for subdivision and resale to veterans. He also was found guilty of another charge of abetting the theft of $6800 in a veterans' land deal. Other indictments charged him with consenting to accept bribes of $8,000, $15,000 and $36,000 respectively. Last Jan. 10 Giles was sentenced to nine 6-year prison terms to run concurrently.

The over-all picture of the veterans' land scandal showed a total of 319 indictments returned against 21 individuals in nine counties. Veterans' organizations were particularly incensed at this abuse.

Another Quit Under Fire.

Only three weeks after Giles was sentenced, the Shivers administration was squirming again. Garland A. (Chink) Smith, a former administrative assistant to the Governor, resigned as a member of the State Insurance Commission, saying his doctor had urged "rest for an indefinite period of time." Smith, under heavy fire, had been chairman of the commission until a short time before his resignation as a member.

Announcing Smith's retirement, Gov. Shivers said: "Although he is presently being criticized for closing some companies which were created illegally and operating unsoundly, I believe the future will commend him for initiating this worthwhile program in the face of criticism."

The Governor's high hopes for the reputation of the man he appointed to a board which was supposed to prevent "illegal companies" and "unsound" operations were not shared by the policyholders and investors in the 50 Texas insurance companies which had been placed in receivership since 1945, virtually all of them during his term as chief executive.

Sensational Bank Failure.

Last January's sensational developments also included the attempted suicide of A. B. Shoemake, president of the U. S. Trust & Guaranty Co. of Waco, Tex., who survived after he fired a bullet through his head. This followed by three weeks the filing of a receivership suit against the company, a hybrid bank-insurance operation that had escaped official state scrutiny for 10 years although widely advertising a 5 per cent return for investors. The company which had 5600 depositors and had written 140,000 policies, owed creditors about $7,000,000.

There was testimony that Shoemake had obtained $80,000 for political purposes shortly before his company was closed.

The state brought a conspiracy suit against four of its own insurance examiners and 45 officers of another defunct company, General American Casualty Co. of San Antonio, and asked for $6,640,000. It charged that the examiners accepted gifts from the company and falsely represented it as solvent.

Profit on Land Deal.

Only a few months before Gov. Shivers had disclosed that he had made $425,000 in six and one-half months (capital gain) on a land deal that was involved in a federal fraud suit against Lloyd M. Bentsen, father of Congressman Lloyd Bentsen Jr. of McAllen, Tex. He issued a statement contending there was nothing wrong in the deal.

In a deposition Shivers said he took an option on 13,000 acres of brushland in Hidalgo County on May 31, 1946, paying the elder Bentsen $25,000. The following Dec. 16, he sold the option back to Bentsen for $450,000.

The land then was sold to Charles Landergott of Cedar Rapids, Ia., and four other men, who charge in a fraud suit that it had been represented to them as irrigated land that would grow citrus fruits. They said they paid "$400 and up" an acre but that the land proved to be virtually worthless. The suit was settled out of court and the terms were never made public.

Shivers' testimony was sealed when his deposition was filed with records of the case and it took another suit in United States District Court by political opponents of the Governor to obtain access to it.

The testimony included Shivers' statement that he had sold 20,000 acres of the estate of his father-in-law, John M. Shary, a few months before the option deal in order to pay off $1,700,000 in estate taxes. He was asked if he had sold his father-in-law's property for $400,000 less than it was actually worth and let Lloyd Bentsen Sr. repay the $400,000 through the option sale and resale. His answer was "No."

He also was asked if he did not make the main speech at a testimonial dinner for Bentsen Sr. and his brother, Elmer Bentsen, also involved in the deal, after the Iowan brought suit. He agreed that he did but denied that it was for the purpose of influencing prospective jurors.

Wife and Mother in News.

Less than two years ago it was revealed that Gov. Shivers' wife and his mother-in-law had been profiting from state contracts for printing documents, legal forms and reports. One of the contracts obtained by the Times Publishing Co. of Mission, Tex., was for $27,000.

In 1953, records showed, the company printed all the papers for the state Agriculture Department, Architectural Examiners, Texas Southern University, Firemen's Pension Fund, General Land Office, Board of Hair Dressers and Cosmetologists, College of Agriculture and Industry, Labor Department, Lamar State College and numerous other departments.

The publishing company was organized in 1946. Shivers owned 7000 shares originally; his mother-in-law, Mary O'Brien Shary, owned 8000, and Joe T. Cook, 5000. The Texas Constitution provides that "no member of or officer of any department of the Government" shall be in "any way interested" in printing contracts, and makes all such contracts subject to approval by the Governor.

It was explained that Shivers had transferred his stock to his wife. By so doing, presumably, he no longer was "in any way" interested in printing contracts which he has continued to approve.

Apparent Political Blunder.

In the opinion of old observers of Texas politics, Shivers was guilty of a fatal faux pas last March 1 when he announced that he would not be a candidate for any office but would continue his fight for "states' rights" after his present term expires early next year. This, they say, left politicians and others, looking for favors or patronage, nowhere to go but into the Rayburn-Johnson camp.

"They'd rather be with a live Senator than a dead Governor," one old-timer remarked.

Growing union membership, its organizational experience and its financial assistance to the "loyalist-liberal-labor" campaign against Shivers was of no small importance in the cities. The labor groups emphasized the importance of getting their people into the little precinct meetings where delegates to the county conventions were elected with telling effect.

Shivers has said repeatedly that he would not support Adlai Stevenson this year if Stevenson were nominated. He avoided questions as to whether he would support Senator Johnson, who will go to the Democratic National Convention as favorite son and chairman of the Texas delegation. It is expected that Shivers will not be a delegate.

Shivers' rabid opposition to Stevenson resulted from his trip to see the new Democratic presidential nominee in 1952, when Stevenson was Governor of Illinois. At Springfield, Shivers asked Stevenson to come out for state control of off-shore oil lands instead of federal control. Stevenson refused and issued a statement giving the reasons for his action. Shivers returned to Texas and immediately announced his support of Gen. Eisenhower.

Shivers lost some friends among his own reactionary group over the Morrow committeemanship. When the Democratic National Committee refused to recognize Morrow, long an anti-New Dealer, Shivers, who controlled the Texas Democratic State Committee, continued to consider Morrow as national committeeman. When Shivers finally gave Morrow the gate last July, Morrow complained bitterly that the Governor merely was trying to get back in the good graces of national Democratic leaders. Shivers named Lt. Gov. Ben Ramsey as national committeeman. Ramsey did not campaign for Stevenson in 1952 but said he voted for him.

Gas Bill Veto Hurt.

President Eisenhower displeased some of his Texas supporters by his veto of the Fulbright-Harris natural gas bill because of the lobbying tactics of the oil companies. And there is some evidence that low farm prices are having an adverse effect on his popularity in some sections. Texans, too, heard Vice President Richard M. Nixon's boast in New York about the "great Republican Chief Justice" who led the Supreme Court in outlawing school segregation.

But it is highly doubtful that these were major factors in Shivers's Humpty-Dumpty act.

Perhaps the great fall, among other things, proves that Mrs. Shivers is something of an oracle. Gov. Shivers, himself, told the story two years ago before a women's club at San Antonio.

Looking up from a magazine, he asked his wife:

"Do you know how many really great people there are in the United States?"

"No," she replied, "but it's one less than you think."

Kuwait Typifies Vulnerability Of West in the Middle East

War in Cyprus Fought to Make Sure of Transit Base for Troops Bound for Wealthy Oil Region.

By JOSEPH ALSOP
(Copyright, 1956.)

KUWAIT, Persian Gulf.

HERE in Kuwait, the West's extreme vulnerability to the new Soviet flank attack in the Middle East is brought home with extreme vividness. This tiny desert sheikdom at the head of the Persian gulf is now little more than a vast oil well with a small town on top of it. Kuwait's oil output now substantially exceeds the combined output of Iran and Iraq. The famous "sweet crude" of the Kuwait wells now provides two-thirds of the oil fuel of the British isles.

The 50 per cent of profits paid to the sheik of Kuwait by the half British, half American Kuwait Oil Co. currently amounts to about $260,000,000 a year, or rather more than $1000 a year per head of the whole population of the sheikdom. And the people here are getting good pay, too, from the oil company and on all the construction and other projects that have been started by the influx of oil money.

In these circumstances, it is hardly surprising that Kuwait is a boom town. By Saudi Arabian standards, the ruling clan of Kuwait, the house of Al-Subah, is distinctly restrained, yet the desert is dotted with their palaces which they like to illuminate by night in a way that puts broadway to shame. With a lavish hand, the sheik is also building schools, hospitals, new roads, water distillation plants and great numbers of houses for his people.

Invests Funds in London.

Even after all these expendtiures, so much is left over that the British Government thought it worth while to send the British Ambassador in Washington, Sir Roger Makins, on a special mission here when he was one of the top officials in the foreign office. Sir Roger's task was to persuade the sheik of Kuwait to invest his reserve funds in London. The sheik complied. Today his money is probably the biggest single sum of new capital annually available for investment in the sterling area.

In these circumstances, it is not surprising that the British regard the Persian gulf sheikdoms, and especially Kuwait, as their hole card.

The entire population of the three oil-producing sheikdoms, Kuwait, Bahrein, and Qatar, hardly amounts to more than 400,000 persons. But even if all the other western positions in the Middle East crumble in the end under the pressure of the new Arab nationalism, spurred on and supported by the Soviets, the oil wells of these little sheikdoms can be made to meet Britain's and western Europe's requirement for fuel for a long time to come.

Choice Already Made.

If these grim circumstances ever arise, Britain will have to choose between holding the sheikdoms and surviving, and risking the loss of the sheikdoms and ending her career as a serious world power. The choice has already been made in London. The sheikdoms will be held, by naked force if necessary. The ugly war in Cyprus is being fought to make sure of a transit base for troops bound to this region.

The question is whether this British strategy of the hole card will really work. Certainly it will be difficult to execute. To be sure, there is little of the popular unrest in Kuwait that is creating such a problem in Bahrein. The house of Al-Subah really rules its sheikdom, and with an iron hand. Most Kuwaitis are contented by the new prosperity, and for any who are known to be subversive, there is harsh and summary punishment.

But even the house of Al-Subah will be anything but pleased by a military occupation, if this becomes necessary to protect the Kuwait oil source from the drive of nationalism in the rest of the Arab world.

Trouble Elsewhere.

The trouble in Bahrein, in this event, would of course be even worse. Furthermore, if the Arab nationalist drive finally forces Britain to play her hole card, one can foresee all sorts of other very grave troubles, perhaps on the borders here, certainly at Suez, and quite probably at Aden.

The Soviet object in the Middle East is simply to use Arab nationalism to bring down the western alliance, by encouraging the Arab states to deny to the West the vital oil on which Britain and western Europe so absolutely depend.

Since this is quite certainly the Soviet purpose, it is a little difficult to see what good results can be expected by trying to negotiate a Middle Eastern settlement with the Soviets. This increasingly popular expedient will be like sitting down with your own murderer to argue about whether he will stab you in the heart or only cut your juglar vein.

By the same token, however, the present British plan for dealing with the Middle Eastern danger if worst comes to worst does not look very practical or very attractive when one examines it on the spot, here in the gulf coast sheikdoms where the last ditch defense is to center.

The problem in the Middle East, therefore, is not just to prevent a new outbreak of Arab-Israeli fighting. The problem is to find a firm, united, imaginative and generous Anglo-American policy towards Arab nationalism which will frustrate the Soviet strategy and protect the oil source without recourse to desperate measures.

Few People Grasp Magnitude, Importance of De-Stalinization

Kremlin Leaders Regard Decision as Revolutionary Act, a Total Break With Immediate Past.

By EDWARD CRANKSHAW
(Copyright, 1956, by the London Observer.)

LONDON, May 12

SOVIET Communist party Secretary Nikita S. Khrushchev made no attempt to justify himself in London when he refused to have anything to do with the list of imprisoned Social Democrats presented by Hugh Gaitskell, leader of the British Labor party. There were no Social Democrats in the Soviet Union, he retorted, and he had no jurisdiction over the satellites, or people's democracies.

Back in Moscow, at the airport, he returned to the subject, showing how deep the matter went and said he regarded Gaitskell's intervention as provocative. At the same time he did what he had not done in London, and went on to justify his own brusqueness, and to explain why he had taken the appeal for the Social Democrats in such bad humor.

"We must tell you frankly," he told the Moscow audience, "that we have formed the opinion as a result of this meeting, that part of the leadership of the Labor party is reactionary and opposed to the Soviets.

'Harmful Opinion.'

"Certain leaders of the Labor party have not yet abandoned their harmful opinion of the Soviet Union, the Communist party of the Soviet Union, and the Communist and Workers' parties in the countries of the People's Democracies. . . ."

Then came the key sentence: "The Labor leaders would have thought up other questions than these if they had been well disposed to the Communist party of the Soviet Union; they know very well that we are doing everything possible to correct errors allowed in the past in a number of matters, that innocent people who had been condemned have been rehabilitated, and that both in the U.S.S.R. and in the countries of the People's Democracies such court cases as are subject to doubt on the grounds of their correctness are being re-examined. The whole world knows this. These leaders of the Labor party know it too."

That sentence is very important indeed, and goes a long way to explain the sharpness of Khrushchev's reaction. It is not, of course, by any means the whole explanation.

For example, Gaitskell's attitude was a powerful rebuff to the whole policy of popular fronts of Communist co-operation with West European socialists in order to win power and influence by parliamentary means. That in itself was enough to make Khrushchev angry. But the matter goes deeper than that.

No Matter of Course.

Outside the Soviet Union, very few people have yet grasped the magnitude and revolutionary importance of the de-Stalinization. We are so used to Soviet switches and upheavals, so used to being bewildered by them, that most of us were inclined to write down the destruction of the Stalin legend as simply one more violent change of course, a matter of tactical maneuver, which could be reversed tomorrow if the men in the Kremlin so desired.

To look at it like this also offered the line of least resistance. To take it at its face value, as a revolutionary action with all the infinite implications of revolutionary action, would have meant that we should have all had to do some very hard thinking.

And yet I am sure that this is how it should be taken. I am sure that for Khrushchev and his colleagues it was precisely this: A revolutionary act, in their eyes a total break with the immediate past.

It was a decisive action the consequences of which could not be clearly foreseen, and even now have scarcely begun to reveal themselves. It could not have been taken without long and elaborate discussion, and the most profound deliberation. It was the burning of the boats.

It was a decision which must for a long time have dominated the minds of Stalin's late colleagues to the point of obsession. And it is very hard for men in this condition to realize that people less immediately concerned are adopting a more detached and skeptical view.

Extraordinary Events.

"They know very well that we are doing everything possible to correct errors allowed in the past . . . the whole world knows this." . . . I have no doubt that Khrushchev really believes that the whole world knows it.

But the whole world does not. Extraordinary things are taking place in the Soviet Union. The release of prisoners from labor camps has become a flood. The rehabilitation of the falsely condemned during the great purges continues all the time (but, as Khrushchev so rightly says, there are no Social Democrats in the Soviet Union: They were all condemned to oblivion or death long ago, while Lenin was still alive).

The revision of the penal code is under way, and legality is taking the place of arbitrary police action. Stalin's apparatus of repression is being dismantled step by step.

But this is being done piecemeal and quietly, because if this astonishing development were to be publicized too widely the whole process might well get swiftly out of hand.

"Freedom within bounds" is effectively the slogan of the day. There is certainly to be more freedom; but, unless the regime is to be overtaken by chaos, there still have to be bounds.

Benefits With Control.

And the supreme task of the new government is to achieve the benefits of comparative freedom, while still keeping dictatorial control.

All this must be very much in Khrushchev's mind. He knows just how far the new government has gone in its efforts to restore the Soviet Union to mental health after the paralysis of Stalinist repression. He assumes the whole world knows this too.

But the world is skeptical. It has plenty of excuse for this. And while it is of the first importance for the world to recognize the changes taking place in the Soviet Union for what they are, and not unthinkingly reject all the evidence of these changes as an elaborate hoax, the Soviet leaders on their part must recognize that the world has earned the right to be skeptical of Soviet actions and motives, and that it will be a slow business convincing the skeptics that the lie of Stalinism, now exposed by Stalin's closest colleagues, has not been replaced by another lie. Khrushchev must be patient.

BRITAIN PROMISES EARLY FREEDOM TO GOLD COAST

LONDON, May 12 (AP)—Britain promised early independence to 4,500,000 people of the Gold Coast yesterday.

The offer, made with one condition, would set up the steaming, cocoa-producing colony in Africa's western bulge as the first Negro-ruled nation of the British Commonwealth. The present Prime Minister is American-educated Kwame Nkrumah.

The condition was spelled out in the House of Commons by Colonial Secretary A. T. Lennox-Boyd. He said if the Gold Coast held a general election and a reasonable majority in the new legislature voted for independence within the commonwealth the government would be willing to receive such a proposal "and then to declare a firm date for this purpose."

News from Accra, the Gold Coast capital, indicated the 416,000 people of British Togoland, adjoining the Gold Coast on the east, may join in the new independence. Togoland is administered now by Britain and France under U.N. trusteeships.

The dispatches said a majority of the people of British Togoland had voted, 92,775 to 67,529, in a U.N.-supervised plebiscite to join the Gold Coast when the latter attains its independence.

MENDES-FRANCE NAMED AS ACTING FRENCH PREMIER

PARIS, May 12 (AP) — The French Cabinet decided today that Pierre Mendes-France, Minister of State, will sit in for Premier Mollet during the latter's trip to Moscow beginning Monday. Mollet is to return to France May 21. Foreign Minister Christian Pineau, who will accompany Mollet, will stay longer.

CZECHS TO FREE MORDECAI OREN, ISRAELI POLITICIAN

JERUSALEM, Israel, May 12 (UP) — Communist Czechoslovakia informed Israel today it has ordered the immediate release of Mordecai Oren, a left-wing Israeli political leader jailed during the 1951 Rudolf Slansky purge.

Oren, a distant relative of Slansky, was arrested in Prague in December 1951, while visiting Czechoslovakia to attend a trade union conference. He was sentenced to 15 years imprisonment on charges of anti-state activity.

His release was expected last week on Czech independence day but he refused to sign a statement declaring that no force was used to make him confess to espionage at his trial, informed sources said. They said this delayed his release.

The Israeli Foreign Office said arrangements were being made to speed Oren home to Israel.

Oren was a leader of Israel's pro-Communist Mapam party. His arrest came during the purge trials that culminated with the execution of Slansky on treason charges in December 1952.

FRENCH INQUIRY STARTED INTO COMMUNIST PAPER

PARIS, May 12 (AP)—A French military tribunal began an investigation today into a Defense Ministry complaint that the Paris Communist daily L'Humanite had tried to undermine the morale of the army and the nation with the aim of hindering national defense.

The legal action was begun following government seizure yesterday of copies of L'Humanite and L'Humanite Dimanche, a Communist weekly.

The issue of L'Humanite carried on its front page a resolution of the central committee of the Communist party accusing the government of waging an "unjust war" in Algeria and calling on all Communists and sympathizers to intensify their efforts "to express the popular will to end the war."

The Fabulous First Oscar Hammerstein

By THOMAS B. SHERMAN
Book Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

OSCAR HAMMERSTEIN

OSCAR HAMMERSTEIN 1: THE LIFE AND EXPLOITS OF AN IMPRESARIO, by Vincent Sheean. (Simon and Schuster, 363 pgs., including index, $5.)

THE first Oscar Hammerstein built twelve theaters during his lifetime and not one of them would have been considered a prudent investment. A reputation for prudence, however, was not his aim in life, nor was he interested in wealth, social position or luxury. He wanted to produce opera on a grand scale and he got what he wanted even though he didn't keep it very long. How he did it is the main subject of a biography by Vincent Sheean which, as it turns out, is also a vivid chapter in the history of music with subsidiary disclosures of social life in an earlier—and more picturesque—New York.

The first Oscar Hammerstein is so identified to distinguish him from his grandson who wrote the books and lyrics for such justly famous musical plays as "Showboat," "Oklahoma!" and "Carousel." The second Oscar is an established VIP in the entertainment world. But nobody describes him as fabulous and fabulous is the inevitable word for the first Oscar.

It was this Oscar who pawned his violin for passage money to the new world from the Germany of his birth. It was this Oscar who parlayed his earnings as a cigar maker into a string of real estate investments, who built an opera house in Harlem in the 1880's when Harlem was a thinly populated suburb, who became the country's outstanding vaudeville impresario at the turn of the century and who challenged the reputation and wealth of the Metropolitan Opera by establishing the Manhattan Opera House.

THE Manhattan Opera marked the zenith of his career. Everything that followed — abortive ventures in Philadelphia and London and a half-hearted "comeback" at the Lexington Opera House—was a delaying operation on the down-grade. But the Manhattan Opera was everything he had hoped for. It was novel, it was artistically brilliant, it was shot through with the glamor of great names and it was HIS. He was his own architect, his own casting director, his own artistic supervisor and from a seat on a rickety wooden chair in the wings he watched the unfolding of practically every performance.

During the three seasons that he operated the Manhattan Opera on West Thirty-fourth street Hammerstein introduced to New York such artists as Mary Garden, Luisa Tetrazzini, Alesandro Bonci, Maurice Renaud and the Italian conductor Cleofonte Campanini. Nellie Melba reached the high point of her singing career at the Manhattan; and Debussy's "Pelleas and Melisande" was given its premiere performance there with Mary Garden as the star.

Hammerstein was driven to these operatic exploits not only by an incurable passion for opera but out of resentment against the Metropolitan. As a young man he had suggested an arrangement with the management of the older establishment whereby he would "present" several of its stars during the off-season.

THE brusque refusal of this offer affected the remainder of his career and was responsible, in part, for his ultimate failure. It not only set him against the management but against the whole apparatus of wealthy patronage and social exhibitionism that the Metropolitan represented to him.

He determined to go it alone. He refused to cultivate any well-heeled patronage; he was gratuitously rude to Mrs. Clarence Mackay whose husband would have gladly paid off his inevitable deficits. So when the box-office could no longer support the Manhattan in the style that Hammerstein demanded (1909-1910) the end was foreseeable.

Hammerstein had performed miracles of financing In his previous ventures some of which had made considerable money. By now, though, his back-log was exhausted, so he was forced to accept an offer from the Metropolitan Opera by which he received about $1,000,000 with the understanding that he would not produce opera in New York for 10 years.

What was left of the million, after satisfying his debts, was swallowed up when he undertook to compete with the Covent Garden Opera in London.

FROM the copious details of Mr. Sheean's biography it became amply evident that Hammerstein could have made several fortunes if he had wanted money above everything else. He sold off a number of ingenious cigar-making inventions at distress prices because he needed ready cash. His real-estate investments were sound ones if he had stuck to apartment houses. His Victoria Theater was the focus of the variety world and would have kept him in luxury if he hadn't milked it continuously for his operatic enterprises.

But he didn't need money except for opera. He lived simply; he shunned society. It is true that in all his public appearances he wore a frock coat, striped trousers and a top hat. But this to his mind, was the appropriate uniform for an impresario and if the top-hat was taller than most it was because he was only five feet four and needed the extra height. The top hat was one and the only outward sign that the first Oscar Hammerstein had any feelings of inferiority.

Lee the Man, Not Legend, Portrayed

ROBERT E. LEE: A GREAT LIFE IN BRIEF, by Earl Schenck Miers. (Alfred A. Knopf, 203 pgs., $2.50.)

Reviewed by
A. MERVYN DAVIES

ALFRED KNOPF'S series of "Great Lives in Brief" —of which this is the twelfth volume — should by now be well known to all devotees of biography. The idea behind it is excellent: the volumes are for readers for whom an encyclopedia account is too brief and dry, whilst a "standard" 500-page biography is too esoteric and too detailed. The aim is to present the truth, and to do it in a lively manner. Accuracy, brevity and clarity are the authors' watchwords.

One need say little more about Earl Schenck Miers's volume on Robert E. Lee except that it fulfills the requirements perfectly. Mr. Miers is a scholar of repute; he has written a number of distinguished works in the Civil War field.

He makes a special effort to separate the man from the legend and to give only the former. He succeeds in presenting Lee throughout his life as an intensely human person, with his weaknesses as well as his magnificent strength—one who made his blunders, and learned by them, and who had to earn the love and respect of his countrymen by his conduct—it was not given to him on a platter when the war began.

It is an ever freshly stirring story to read how the true magnificence of this man's soul rose in grandeur like a planet as year followed year of fearful testing, until it surpassed in brightness everyone's, save only his great antagonist.

Which makes it the more ironical that his greatest failure was his lack of understanding and appreciation of that antagonist! Apparently he seldom thought about Lincoln. He had a keen knowledge of all the generals who opposed him in the field—but not of the Commander-in-chief himself. And says Miers, he could not beat the North without that understanding.

A Streamlined Life

CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS, MARINER, by Samuel Eliot Morison. (Little, Brown, $3.75.)

ADMIRAL MORISONS' two-volume life of Columbus is probably the standard biography in the English language, but it makes a formidable work for the non-specialist to digest. Now the author has made it available to a wider audience by rewriting the story of Columbus as a straightforward narrative stripped of its detailed background and copious notes.

THE AGE OF REFORM; FROM BRYAN TO F.D.R., by Richard Hofstadter. (Alfred A. Knopf, 328 pgs., $4.50.)

IN his Pulitzer prize-winning work "The Age of Reform" Prof. Hofstadter of Columbia University directs his keen microscope at the period from about 1890 through the first years of the 1930 decade. His aim is to analyze it from the perspective of our own time. Today, he says, "we are more remote in time from the first inaugural address of Franklin D. Roosevelt than Roosevelt himself was on March 4, 1933, from the first inaugural address of Woodrow Wilson."

One of the commonest charges against the intellectual is "softness on Communism," and a whole stable of critics of the Roosevelt-Truman-Stevenson leadership of the Democratic party has sought to identify the one with the other. But as Prof. Hofstadter points out, many early critics of F.D.R.'s New Deal found in the NRA "a clear imitation of Mussolini's corporate state." Other critics farther to the right, "at first thought they saw Fascist tendencies in the 'violations' of fundamental liberties with which they regularly charged the architects of the New Deal. Only later did they find it more congenial to accuse the New Deal of fostering Communism."

To a sober mind all that rings false today, the author writes, since it is now easier to see that Roosevelt and his supporters were attempting to deal with the problems of the American economy within the distinctive framework of American political methods.

One of the chief lacks in this "age of reform" in the Hofstadter view, has been "the absence of a formidable and reasonable body of conservative criticism" of liberal positions and activities. But he sees a change here too: "Liberals are beginning to find it both natural and expedient to explore the merits and employ the rhetoric of conservatism. They find themselves far more conscious of those things they would like to preserve than they are of those things they would like to change." And he cites as an example Adlai Stevenson.

An illustration in "The Fabulous Democrats:" a cartoon by Rollin Kirby in the New York World in the Wilson Administration when G.O.P. opposition prevented American entrance into the League of Nations.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS AND THE UNION, by Samuel Flagg Bemis. (Knopf, 546 pgs., $8.75.)

FEW recent biographies have received the high praise that was accorded to "John Quincy Adams and the Foundations of American Foreign Policy," brought out in 1949 by Samuel Flagg Bemis, now Sterling professor of American history at Yale. It was promptly awarded a Pulitzer prize and fellow historians, including Dumas Malone, biographer of Jefferson, called it "distinguished," "mature," "worthy of the subject" and "painted from a palette of rich and rare pigments."

As the first chapter of the new volume reminds the reader, John Quincy Adams had a career before he became the sixth President. He was a Senator from Massachusetts, diplomatic representative of the United States to the Netherlands, and to Russia and Secretary of State in the Monroe Administration from 1817 to 1825.

The second career, which is told in this volume, takes him through the campaign of 1824 and to the presidency, through his defeat by Jackson in 1828, and his return to Washington as a Representative from the Plymouth District of Massachusetts. In this last-named post, he served for 17 years the cause of the Union in the mounting slavery struggle.

Prof. Bemis writes the story of this rugged, solid patriot with much appreciation of its drama, for dramatic it was clear to the end when Adams died on the floor of the House of Representatives in the midst of a battle against decorating the generals who led our troops in the war against Mexico. One of the books cited by the author is "John Quincy Adams: 'Old Man Eloquent,'" published in 1933 by the late Senator Bennett Champ Clark of Missouri.

THE FABULOUS DEMOCRATS: A HISTORY OF THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY IN TEXT AND PICTURES, by David L. Cohn. (Putnam, 192 pgs., $5.95.)

David L. Cohn is a lifelong Democrat, native of North Carolina and so interested in the history and lore of the South that he once wrote a book called "Where I Was Born and Raised." He has therefore a strong predilection in favor of the political institution that is the subject of his new book, namely, the Democratic party.

But although he is a dyed-in-the-wool Democrat with both sympathy and esteem for the oldest of our parties, Mr. Cohn is able to see his idol's warts as well as the beautiful features. He does not hesitate to criticize its failures and to cut down to size some of its presidential candidates. Thus Gen. Winfield S. Hancock, the unsuccessful Democratic nominee in 1880, is dismissed as a "nonentity."

On the bitterly controverted 1876 Hayes-Tilden contest he writes: "It would appear that the Democrats stole the election in South Carolina, Florida and Louisiana — the states from which 19 disputed electors were returned. Then the Republicans stole back the stolen election."

Mr. Cohn turns often to the Beards and Parrington and similar appraisers of political leaders with the result that his narrative includes a harvest of excellent quotations. Many of his nearly 200 pictures are from the Library of Congress collections. These pictures in themselves are most informative. Speaker Rayburn in a concise introduction expresses his pride in affiliation with a party that has "served the people and helped them fulfill their aspirations for a better life on this earth."

An example of Mr. Cohn's evaluation of the political leaders of his party is this estimate of former Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson: "A Jeffersonian rationalist, he used the language of reason as he addressed the nation, and the most careful examination of his campaign speeches yields no cargo of the base metal that so often is pawned off in political campaigns for sound coin of the realm. (He) conducted a campaign notably free of demagoguery, appeals to prejudice or promises of pie in the sky."

TRIUMPH OF THE EGGHEADS, by Horace Coon. (Random House, 309 pgs., $4.)

HORACE COON has been studying the influence of the intellectual leader in our political life for many years. His thesis is simply stated. It is that the periods which have counted for most in United States political history—the periods that were in effect peaceful revolutions —were with but one exception led by an intellectual man. Jefferson, Wilson and Franklin D. Roosevelt establish a rule to which only Andrew Jackson is not a party.

This, the author believes, is no accident. The people naturally turn to intelligent leaders with capacity to reason things out when the presidency must shape and control forces bent on change.

To Mr. Coon, Thomas Jefferson is "the archtype of the egghead in politics." Only from a man of ideas could come the Declaration of Independence, "one of the great revolutionary statements of all time."

After Jefferson until Wilson there was only one intellectual in the presidency, John Quincy Adams. The rest, as Mr. Coon reviews them, were "an extraordinary procession of varied characters, backwoodsmen, business men, party hacks, old soldiers and stuffed shirts." But with Woodrow Wilson the political leader possessed of intelligence truly came into his own. For not only did Wilson lead the nation into the New Freedom but he laid the groundwork for the New Deal.

Mr. Coon puts it this way: "Ideas from the minds of intellectuals are caught by the winds and blown to fertile soil, renewing and inseminating other minds. The triumph of the egghead is summed up in four words of Woodrow Wilson's: 'Ideas live, men die.'"

A Tired Pioneer Land

GENERATIONS OF MEN, by John Clinton Hunt. (Atlantic-Little, Brown, 307 pgs., $4.)

Reviewed by RUTH WALKER

THIS is a longish, and exceptionally well written first novel of three generations of men in the Oklahoma Indian country, but in today's time. The second generation is missing, but the third and the first are trying to find some common meeting ground in a tired and nearly abandoned pioneer country. We are not told what sort of life the third generation hero has come from, but it is in the life of old hunters, hound-dog men, and somewhat disintegrated Indians that he tries to find himself.

It is not a story of high drama or excitement, but is told with the slow, quiet pace that reflects the attitude of the weary old men whose rough lives are nearly finished. It is not a book of romance, and the few women in it are desultory characters.

The characters of the older men are excellently drawn, with sympathy, understanding and fine detail. The finest scenes, though undramatic, deal with the meetings of the hound-dog men and their fox hounds, the quail hunts, and the small incidents of the daily lives of the old ones. The color is drab, the description thoughtful; but somehow, the rock-like strength and character of the people and the country make a profound impression. For style and concentration, it is a rather remarkable first novel.

Life of Devotion to Honor

BELOVED, by Vina Delmar. (Harcourt, Brace and Co., 379 pgs., $3.95.)

Reviewed by
JANIE LOWE PASCHALL

VINA DELMAR

FOR this account of the life of the brilliant Jewish lawyer, Judah Benjamin, veteran novelist Vina Delmar has dived into fact and fiction of the ante-bellum and War Between the States era and come up with the most definitive and fascinating story of her productive career. The publishers assert it has "flawless, historical accuracy."

The young Judah was only 17 when he claimed New Orleans as his own and it was but a few years until New Orleans was proud to claim him, as the foremost southern lawyer of the times. This accomplishment was the more remarkable because he had left Yale without finishing his law course, stricken with man's inhumanity to him because he was a Jew. But his own humanity was limitless and his integrity a shining fact that lights the pages.

Through chapters headed Charleston, New Haven, New Orleans, Washington, Montgomery, Richmond, London and Paris we not only get a contemporary glimpse of those cities but we follow lawyer Benjamin through a life of love of family, friends and country, and a devotion to honor and duty never to be forsaken. The intense love affair between himself and his enchanting Creole wife, Natalie, who called him "Beloved," lasted and deepened always.

THE war years found him occupying ever higher steps in the Confederacy until he stood next to the top as Secretary of State in the Cabinet of Confederate President Jefferson Davis.

To Judah Benjamin this was an unenviable position which forced him to appear to support the vagaries of Davis in his stubborn determination to run the war single-handed, order advances and withdrawals, make and break generals according to personal grudge, refuse the sober counsel of his Cabinet, run himself and the Confederacy headlong into destruction. Only then did Judah leave him, after years of giving his brilliant best, and received for accolade the bitter word, "Jew." Still he went on to win through to the inner sanctum of British law in London.

Clear sidelights are thrown on such men as Generals Lee, Beauregard, Hood and Johnston, the cynical John Slidell, who remained Judah's best friend while he, Slidell, agonized and luxuriated in Paris during the death throes of his southland, August Belmont, whose friendship remained above the fight between North and South, stanch Varina Davis and many others.

This may well be the brightest historical novel of the year thoroughly diverting as well as controversial.

The great stories which have thrilled millions through the ages . . . the world's inspiring poems which have been remembered and recited over and over again . . . the essays which have won a lasting place as readers' favorites . . . America's stirring patriotic literature — all of these are now in three magnificent books. Here are volumes that belong in every home — perfect as gifts for weddings, graduations, birthdays, or any occasion when the giver wants to be lastingly remembered.

SCIENTISTS BEGIN TESTS ON LIQUID FUEL REACTOR

Atomic Furnace Holds Promise of Nuclear Power as Cheap as Coal by 1969.

By BILL RAWLINS

OAK RIDGE, Tenn., May 12 (AP)—Atomic scientists have begun tests on a liquid fuel reactor, or atomic furnace, which they believe holds promise of atomic power as cheap as coal by 1969.

The reactor, in which liquid atomic fuels are mixed together much like milk and cream in homogenized milk, is an improved version of one which generated enough electricity at Oak Ridge to light 50 houses. It is called a homogeneous reactor.

It is one of five reactor types which the Atomic Energy Commission is developing at various installations as a prelude to economical atomic power.

"Economical" is the key word. Dr. Alvin M. Weinberg, director of Oak Ridge National Laboratory, points out that atomic power now is too expensive to compete with power generated at coal-fired steam plants.

Excessive Cost.

At it stands now, it would cost as much as 5 cents per kilowatt hour to generate electricity on a large scale with atomic energy. This compares with Tennessee Valley Authority's cost of about three-tenths of a cent per KWH for electricity generated at its steam plants.

"There is little question that ultimately nuclear energy will be as cheap as coal energy," Weinberg said. "And there is little question that our coal reserves ultimately will disappear."

Asked when he thought atomic power could compete on a cost basis with coal power, Weinberg said, "I think there's a good chance that we'll have competitive nuclear power by 1969."

Weinberg noted that Britain already faces a coal shortage, and is going ahead with plans for eight gas-cooled atomic power stations which, while expensive to operate, are considered essential to Britain's economic survival.

No Need for Speed.

There is no need for such a rush in the United States. The AEC consequently has time to experiment to cut down the cost of power production. The AEC indicates it is optimistic that the homogeneous reactor ultimately will do the job. A year ago, the AEC gave this statement, regarding its power reactor program, to the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy in Washington:

"Major effort is directed toward a two-region thorium system (the homogeneous reactor), believed to be capable of producing lower cost power than other designs with fewer remaining development problems."

Asked if this optimism still exists, S. E. Beall, project engineer for the homogeneous reactor test, replied:

"Yes. The whole basis for our job is the belief that this system in the long run will prove to be the most economical."

The test reactor should be in operation by fall and, Beall says, "We should know in about a month of operation just what it will do."

Value of Test.

Beall emphasizes that this particular reactor won't show how cheaply atomic power can be generated. The chief reason for this is the small size of the test model.

The value of the current test is that it will provide information on how cheaply this type of reactor can be operated, in comparison with other types of reactors and with coal-fired steam plants.

By translating this information into what could be done on a large scale, the slide-rule men will have a pretty good idea what to expect from any commercial reactor which might be built.

The pear-shaped reactor core—that part which holds the fuel—is about the size of a big beach ball—32 inches in diameter. But the complex plumbing system which goes with it takes up a warehouse-like building two stories high, with an area of about 2400 square feet.

The fuel to be used is a diluted solution of uranium sulphate, expected to be about 90 per cent uranium-235—the fissionable material used in the atom bomb. Temperature and pressure at which the reactor will operate have been increased greatly over the 1953 model.

RESEARCHER TO SPEAK ON MULTIPLE SCLEROSIS

Dr. Frederick L. Stone of New York, director of the medical and scientific division of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society, will address an open meeting to be held under the sponsorship of the St. Louis chapter of the society at 8 p.m. Wednesday at the Veterans of Foreign Wars Hall, 1717 Big Bend boulevard, it was announced yesterday.

The meeting is planned to permit interested multiple sclerosis patients and their families and friends to attend, with ramps available to permit easy access for wheel chair patients, Charles P. McBride, chairman of the board of the St. Louis chapter, said.

Dr. Stone will speak on the topic, "Where Do We Stand on Multiple Sclerosis?" He has served as chief of the research fellowship program at the National Institutes of Health at Bethesda, Md.

CITIZENS SCHOOL AID GROUP FOR CLAYTON

Will Seek to Improve Education — Organization Meeting Tuesday.

Plans for the organization of a citizens' group seeking to promote improvement of public school education in the Clayton School District were announced yesterday.

An organizational meeting of the group will be held in the Clayton Community Center, 2 Mark Twain Circle, Clayton, at 8 p.m. Tuesday, it was announced. Speakers will be Ethan A. H. Shepley, chancellor of Washington University, and Henry F. Chadeayne, chairman of the St. Louis Public Schools Advisory Committee.

On the agenda for the meeting are the adoption of a constitution for the group, to be known as the Clayton Association for the Public Schools, and the election of an executive board.

The association will be nonprofit, non-partisan and nonsectarian, and all residents of the Clayton School District except members and regular employes of the Board of Education will be eligible for membership.

The new group originated with a recent meeting of the DeMun School P.-T.A., in which parents discussing problems facing the Clayton schools came to the conclusion that some problems were system-wide and beyond the, scope of an individual school P.-T.A. The idea for the association was formulated in a series of three informal meetings, which gained broad support.

The association is designed to foster citizen interest in Clayton's public schools, to promote continuous improvement in the quality of education, to conduct studies of matters pertaining to the schools, to serve as a medium for disseminating information about the school district and to sponsor and conduct public discussions on educational issues.

MUNICIPAL OPERA SCHEDULES FINAL SINGING AUDITIONS

Final auditions for the 1956 Municipal Opera singing chorus will be tomorrow at 2 p.m. and at 8 p.m. at the American Theater, 318 North Grand boulevard. Dancing chorus members have been chosen and are now in rehearsal.

John Kennedy, productions director, and Edwin McArthur, musical director, will supervise the singing tryouts tomorrow. Candidates are requested to bring music for the number from light opera or a musical play they wish to sing and a recent photograph of themselves.

Irvin Berlin's "Annie Get Your Gun" will open the 1956 season at the theater in Forest Park on June 7 with an 11-night run. Five musicals never before produced here that will be included this year are "Paint Your Wagon," "Wish You Were Here," "An Evening of Great Music," "Peter Pan" and "Kismet."

Season tickets at reduced rates will remain on sale for two more weeks, through May 26, at the Municipal Theater Association office, 1876 Arcade Building.

JUDGES URGED TO ATTEND TRAFFIC COURT CONFERENCE

All Missouri municipal judges and other officials and attorneys concerned with the handling of traffic cases have been urged by Gov. Phil M. Donnelly to attend a Traffic Court Conference at Washington University beginning tomorrow and lasting through Wednesday.

The main objective is improvement of the court handling of traffic violators. A number of specialists in the field will speak and take part in several panel discussions.

The conference is sponsored by the university School of Law, in co-operation with the American Bar Association, the Traffic Institute of Northwestern University, the Missouri Municipal League, the Bar Association of St. Louis, the Missouri Bar, Integrated, and local safety councils.

STEVENSON GROUP SEEKS WORKERS, CONTRIBUTIONS

A drive to enroll supporters of Adlai E. Stevenson and obtain contributions for his campaign for the Democratic nomination for President will be conducted next Friday, designated as "Let's Talk Sense Day," by the Metropolitan Stevenson-for-President Committee.

Lemoine Skinner Jr., chairman of the committee, said the goal is to make possible a St. Louis-financed national television program for the candidate prior to the Florida and California presidential preferential primaries.

A special canvass will be made Friday, as part of the program of the national Stevenson-for-President Committee. Skinner said the local group does not intend to interfere with the regular Democratic organizations at the precinct level, or to seek to influence the selection of delegates to the state party convention. The purpose, he explained, is to enroll persons favoring Stevenson and give them an opportunity to contribute to his campaign.

THE POUF CUT

Hair styles have an enchanting new look this season . . . a wider look. However, Coiffures Americana* cautions against the exaggerated "lioness" hair-do's that distort the shape of the head and are completely unwieldy. We recommend a modified or semi-bouffant effect that is pleasing, wearable and adaptable to all hair lengths. Our Pouf Cut makes the perfect foundation for this new flattery.

U.S. NAVY NERVE CENTER IN HUGE JAPANESE CAVE

Command Post Inside Mountain at Yokosuka Ready for Use if War Breaks Out.

BY GENE KRAMER

YOKOSUKA, Japan, May 12 (AP)—The United States Navy has an atom-proof nerve center here inside a mountain which was hollowed out for protection from American bombs in World War II.

In case of another war, United States carriers and cruisers in the Japan-Korea theater would be controlled from what is called the "command cave" of Yokosuka naval base.

Even now, combat operations duty officers stand watch 24 hours a day here, protected by walls of concrete-reinforced rock, multiple steel doors and double marine sentries.

Outsiders are barred from inner recesses of the now modernized, air-conditioned catacomb which until V-J Day was an emergency headquarters for the Imperial Japanese fleet and shipyard.

Several score of specially screened American staff officers and sailors work daily in the fluorescent-lighted underground chambers housing the base's communications center, intelligence and other staff sections.

Charts Two Stories High.

The walls of the command center, big as a theater stage, are lined with secret charts, two stories high, to plot the movements of task forces.

One officer likened the command cave to the emergency operations deep under the Pentagon and elsewhere near Washington.

"Every military command has to have an operations center for use in an emergency. We are lucky that ours was dug for us," he said.

The secret command cave is just one corner of a 22-mile labyrinth under the mountains bordering Tokyo bay. Less than 17 miles have been mapped.

Dank, gloomy passageways and stairways bear the hackmarks of picks and shovels wielded by 20,000 diggers ordered by the Japanese navy in 1940 to build underground shelter for the entire base.

The United States navy has electrically lighted several miles outside the command cave in preparation for restoring some of the tunnels to their original use, an emergency hospital.

A large chamber used as an operating room is being renovated. The passageways are lined by enough racks to keep 2000 stretchers above the damp floor in case of attack.

Here and there are old rusted lockers and wall safes, relics of a defeated, disbanded navy.

Although some of the tunnels are useful, the navy considers much of the network a nuisance.

437 Entries; Most Blocked.

Some of the 437 entrances jut up into tthe backyards of family housing areas, where they are a menace to adventurous children. As a result, most entrances are boarded up, except some designated as air raid shelters.

The major mishap so far was in a dockside cave that once housed a midget submarine plant and later was turned into a highway tunnel. A section of the ceiling collapsed and crushed a truck cab. No one was hurt.

The marine drum and bugle corps used to practice in one of the underground chambers until its vibrations loosened chunks of soft sandstone ceiling.

Occasionally new caves are discovered. When a base street was being paved in 1953, the ground suddenly gave way under a heavy roller, exposing a room filled with rusty rifles used by the nearby headquarters of the Japanese naval shipyard.

Ironically, the tremendous cost in manpower to burrow beneath Yokosuka during the Pacific war was largely wasted. The base was raided only once and a ship and a drydock were destroyed.

TOWN AFFILIATION IDEA ENCOURAGED FOR AILING WORLD

WASHINGTON, May 12 (AP)—The United States Information Agency looks to town affiliations—that is, ties among American and foreign municipalities—as a healthy way toward international understanding.

Spokesmen said they welcomed all the help they could get from private outfits like Operation Town Affiliations, Inc., of New York City, in promoting this program.

The USIA, as a Government agency, prefers to stay in the background. Its role, as officials describe it, as that of a catalyst, with the town affiliations being as spontaneous as possible.

The USIA has set up a special office to handle this and similar types of programs. It is called the Office of Private Co-operation.

The town affiliation program works this way: The mayor of an American town, say, writes a letter to his counterpart in a foreign town. This invitation to affiliate can lead to swapping photographs, souvenir products, visits of choirs and orchestras, and so on. "Name towns" are popular — like New Rochelle, N.Y., and La Rochelle, France.

Hundreds of town affiliations have sprung up since World War II.

Foot Health Week.

Foot Health Week, proclaimed here by Mayor Raymond R. Tucker, will continue through next Thursday. In the proclamation he cited contributions of the St. Louis Chiropody Society in maintaining clinics voluntarily at several hospitals here.

North Has Race Discrimination, Too, but There's a Difference

It Is Being Cut Down Steadily and Negro Has Right to Agitate Against and Fight It.

By BEM PRICE

DETROIT, May 12 (AP)—The problem of race relations is not confined to the South.

There is racial discrimination in the North, certainly in the parts I visited. Many of the harsh things southerners say about the life of the Negro outside the South are true.

But there is a difference: legal and actual.

The last time I was in Jackson, Miss., William J. Simmons, administrator for the prosegregation White Citizens Councils, said, "Why don't you go up North and write about the way Negroes are treated?"

So I went to the North-South city of Baltimore and to New York, Chicago and Detroit.

The schools, I found, are integrated in all these cities. Negroes are working at jobs which are closed to them in the South. With the exception of Baltimore, Negroes come and go in hotels, restaurants and theaters.

Further, each of these cities in the past 10 years has adopted anti-discrimination ordinances—Baltimore just last month.

Each city has set up an active public commission against discrimination with the expressed mission of breaking down prejudice because of race, religion, ancestry or national origin.

There is nothing comparable to these commissions anywhere in the South.

Discrimination in Jobs.

There still is discrimination against Negroes in private employment in these four cities and barriers against them in private housing. A survey in New York, for example, indicates that 90 per cent of privately-owned housing is not accessible to Negroes. All public housing is open to them, however.

In Los Angeles, Associated Press reporters Graham Berry and H. D. Wilhoit looked into the racial situation and found that, with the exception of the housing field, it paralleled that in the four cities I visited.

"The Negro population," they report, "has a greater geographic spread in Los Angeles than probably any other city of comparable size in the nation."

Housing is the greatest single source of racial tension in all the cities I visited.

There are cities such as Cicero, Ill., adjacent to Chicago, and Dearborn, Mich., next to Detroit, which exclude Negro residents through community pressures.

And you can find instances in the North of mob action when a Negro family moves into an all-white neighborhood.

Where statistics are available it can be shown that Negroes account for most of the arrests for major crimes—two-thirds of the murders in Chicago, 69 per cent of all felonies in Detroit.

'Crime Among the Poor.'

New York City does not break down its arrest figures by race. Deputy Police Commissioner Walter Arm explained why.

"We find," he said, "that crime is among the poor. It is not by race."

The majority of people on the general relief rolls are nonwhite—69 per cent, for example, in Detroit. Chicago gives aid to 55,433 dependent children, 75 per cent of whom are Negro.

Does the Negro leave the South just to get on relief rolls? The question was put to welfare commissioners Dan Ryan of Detroit, Henry McCarthy of New York City and Alvin Rose of Chicago. Their answers:

"I personally don't think the Negro moves North to get on welfare," said Ryan. "I think he comes in search of job opportunity."

McCarthy said, "They don't come to New York to get on relief. They come to work."

"No," answered Rose, "and besides it is almost impossible to get on relief immediately. There is a residency requirement of one year in the state and six months in Chicago. They have to have all sorts of records, too, before they can qualify—birth records, school records, doctors' certificates."

All three commissioners told the same story: The number of actual employables on general relief is small. More than 75 per cent of the people on relief are the aged, the ill, mothers with small children, and children.

Still Moving North.

Despite the slums and the discrimination, Negroes still are moving north and westward by the thousands.

There are no really reliable figures on this migration and there won't be until after the 1960 census. One study, though, estimates that Negroes are arriving in Chicago at the rate of 2500 a month.

In Los Angeles, it was found that Negroes are arriving in the area at the rate of 1500 a month. Many are coming directly from Alabama and Mississippi. Formerly the influx came largely from Louisiana, Texas and Oklahoma.

In New York I asked Roy Wilkins, executive director for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, to explain this migration.

"There is an old expression among Negroes," Wilkins replied. "It goes, 'I'd rather be a lamp post in Harlem than the Governor of Georgia.' There is discrimination in the North, but here you can agitate against it, seek the outlawing of it. It is being cut down steadily — in restaurants, theaters, parks, hotels, swimming pools and even schools."

In New York, Los Angeles, Detroit and Chicago a Negro can—and often does — go to places he wouldn't even try to enter in, say, Memphis.

Unsegregated Transportation.

If he is well dressed and obviously able to pay his way, he can register in any hotel, eat at any restaurant (though he might be seated by the kitchen entrance) and drink at any public bar. He can ride unsegregated on any bus, subway, train or airplane. He can use any public sanitary facility, drink from any fountain and sit where he pleases in any situation.

In Baltimore, which has a southern orientation, the barriers are breaking down. In the last two years Negroes have begun to patronize the stand-up, quick lunch counters in department stores and drug stores.

By and large the Negro in cities still works at the day labor and semi-skilled jobs, but that does not tell the whole story. There has been a breakthrough on the white collar front.

In Detroit, Chicago and New York Negroes can be found as sales personnel in the leading department stores. The communications industries in New York and Detroit are beginning to hire on the basis of ability, not color.

Scattered here and there in office buildings you will find Negroes working as stenographers, bookkeepers and clerks. Negroes are nurses and technicians in hospitals. You will find Negroes operating buses and subway trains.

Detroit, Chicago and New York have opened civil service rolls to Negroes. There no longer is a place on job application forms for designation of race or religion. Baltimore recently voted to follow suit.

The net result is that in New York, Detroit and Chicago Negroes are working in all city government departments and as policemen and firemen.

Discrimination in Unions.

Even in these cities, although all labor unions incorporated in the AFL-CIO have anti-discrimination policies, not all follow the principle.

In Detroit, New York, Baltimore and Chicago leaders on the interracial Urban Leagues, devoted to improving the lot of the Negro, said industrial unions generally were much better in practicing anti-discrimination than the craft unions, especially the building and printing trade unions.

In Los Angeles Lee Meriwether, N.A.A.C.P. local secretary, said the Negro had little trouble working in factories though there is resistance to upgrading. He added that the Negro could join unions at will but sometimes finds there aren't jobs for him.

One of the great worries in the South, and the source of considerable agitation, is school integration. The schools in all the cities I visited are integrated. There are some all-white schools and some all-Negro, chiefly because the surrounding school districts are comprised of one race or the other. Most of the schools are mixed.

With some exceptions private schools also are open to Negroes. Henry Moon, N.A.A.C.P. publicity director, put it this way: "Everybody up here who can afford it, sends his children to private schools. It has nothing to do with race. It is just that the caliber of instruction is higher."

'Socializing' Question.

Another great worry to southern parents has been "socializing" at school functions. Ed Lewis, head of the Urban League of New York, was asked how this worked out.

"Fine," he said. "The kids come if they want to. There are no social pressures. Negro kids are selected for positions of leadership. They go to mixed dances and have mixed bands. I find that if you give the kids a chance to handle a situation, they handle it. Mongrelization is pure propaganda."

I searched in all four cities for statistics on racial intermarriage. I could find none and neither could the two Los Angeles reporters, so I asked Moon to make a guess.

"Just from the top of my head," Moon replied, "I would say that of all the marriages in New York involving Negroes, it would be way less than five per cent, so small as to be insignificant."

The one really sore spot I found among Negroes is housing. In the three largest cities I visited some sections of the slums are almost incredible. Negroes are concentrated—Harlem in New York, Center City in Detroit and the South Side in Chicago.

In New York's Harlem I found 20 persons crowded into three rooms with one bathroom.

now you can stop worrying over wrinkles, creases, facial furrows, dry skin!

Tests prove amazing B-21 nutritive cream makes you look years younger!

Imagine — now you can discover how an amazing new formula ends your dry skin problem . . . softens and reduces lines, wrinkles, creases and furrows on your face . . . keeps your complexion flower-fresh! Gone are messy greases, spilly powder or burning soaps — with just a simple pleasant application of nature's own formula, you win a glowing new complexion. Here's the full story about this new discovery that lets you look younger.

by John Abbott

AT LAST NATURE SUCCEEDS WHERE OTHERS FAILED!

For years, skin specialists have searched for something that would carry water down into your dry, parched skin ...keep it there...maintain its moisture there. They found the answer in a new natural element which scientists found in all living cells of animal and plant life—Lecithin — miraculous substance which holds water, carries water, maintains moisture! Lecithin is used in the oleomargarine industry because it prevents water from draining out. Lecithin is being used in a leather industry because it restores and preserves suppleness in tough, dry, leatherly skins! In the chocolate and bakery industries — yes, wherever a natural chemical is needed to maintain moisture and freshness — Lecithin — nature's own wonder—is used—and succeeds where others failed!

Skin specialists know — here at last is the agent that can carry water deep into the deserts of your skin and keep it there!

TRY B-21—NO RISK MONEY BACK! GUARANTEED

Try B-21 at NO RISK for one month. If you are still not convinced that it has performed the complexion miracle of a lifetime — simply return unused portion — get FULL REFUND. Thrill to the new complexion you've always dreamed of — the B-21 way—you have nothing to lose but the dried-out look of age — and you have a radiant new complexion to gain!

THE SECRET OF YOUTHFUL COMPLEXION

Your skin is dry because the water in your face is always evaporating — robbing your face of the moisture it needs to stay fresh and smooth — causing the facial skin to become brittle, hard, dry and lined.

It is now known that oils cannot keep skin moist and supple. If yours is an overoily complexion, has it kept your skin from becoming dry and wrinkled? The only thing that can keep your face soft and supple is water itself. Water . . . in the skin . . . constantly refreshing your face . . . the way it freshens a lovely flower.

Because water cannot penetrate any deeper than the surface of the skin, washing your face is not enough! And even if you could get it to penetrate — it would only evaporate!

Keep your house as FRESH as a DAISY...

EVEN if a long and relatively cool spring may have kept St. Louisans more cognizant of the need of heating equipment hereabouts, than of any need for summer cooling, summer in all its torrid temperatures already has sent forth a courier or two and shortly will be riding in on the hot valley winds.

To keep the home as fresh as a daisy, once the heat begins to bear down, nothing can top the assist from an air-conditioning unit, be it of sufficient size to handle one room, or big enough for the whole house, office, store or workshop.

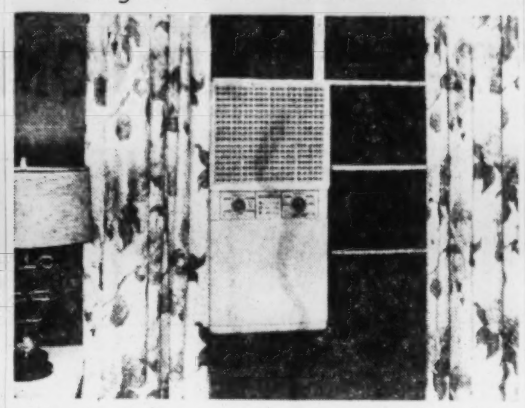

More and more, the heating and cooling industries are drawing together in their understanding of what makes and keeps a place comfortable, whether the time be winter, summer or the wily-nily days of spring and fall when (in the St. Louis area in particular) it can feel like winter in the morning and a mid-July day on a Florida sand beach by mid-afternoon; or one day can be very hot and the next very cold.

It is even temperature and even humidity, with the most imperceptible motion of air currents, at all levels from floor to ceiling, that spell freshness and comfort. The answer is air conditioning, which can control all three.

Designed to Fit Casement Sash

This unit, with three-quarter horsepower, directional cooling, thermostatic control, high to low fan speed and high power factor fits any casement window without modification, replacing screen and allowing full opening and closure of the window. No part of the unit extends outside.

Conditioning Aids Gardening Indoors

Bobbing up in accounts of new houses with central air conditioning installed, are reports of whole gardens built inside the house, often partly roofed with translucent roofing material. These are not matters of a window ledge full of plants, but beds of them.

While the air conditioning world doesn't go so far as to say they've given every owner a green thumb, it is delivering home air conditions in which plants will thrive where they didn't before.

This is a secondary achievement of air-conditioning, its engineers will say, since their first concern is people, not plants. But the experts in both fields are finding that the better air for one is better for both, generaly speaking.

It is not likely that everyone will be moving into greenhouses, but some of the greenhouse art may come along into more homes with the air under proper control.

EQUALS TON OF ICE

A one-ton air conditioner can supply the equivalent amount of coolness which could be produced by the melting of a ton of ice in a 24-hour period.

Cooling capacity is rated in British Thermal Units. Capacity of a one-ton unit is equal to 288,000 Btu's per day. A Btu technically is the amount of heat required to raise the temperature of a pound of water by one degree.

Air-Conditioning Helps Businesses Make More Profit

Air conditioning has become a fast-growing business and of course there is a reason. People buy the things which help them live better, make them more comfortable or which bring them a profit.

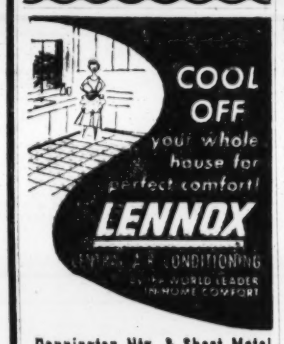

The profit motive is the real reason back of the increased air conditioning of business establishments.

Here is the proof says a spokesman for the Air-Conditioning and Refrigeration Institute.

Results from actual surveys as reported in Management Methods Magazine show the following increase in volume of various businesses after installing air conditioning:

Beauty Shops	33.3%
Barber Shops	25.0%
Bowling Alleys	25.0%
Confectioners	22.5%
Dairy Stores	10.0%
Department Stores	9.9%
Restaurants	36.06%
Men's Furnishings	10.0%
Opticians	29.0%
Offices	15.0%
Physicians-Dentists	24.0%

Never Need For Family To 'Tinker'

"Automation in home comfort."

That's the term being applied to the modern weather-making magic of central home air conditioning systems and their year-round climate control.

Today's versatile year-round residential comfort installations are designed for efficient, low-cost indoor climate control. And thanks to automatic operation, there's no need for a family to tinker with a multiplicity of dials and thermostats.

What's more, a home owner doesn't have to be a graduate mechanic to follow the few simple maintenance rules guaranteed to keep his central system running at peak efficiency.

Here, are the do's and don'ts to observe in maintaining your home weather-making unit:

Don't tinker with the thermostat. Once you've set the control center for the temperature zone most comfortable to you, let the unit function automatically to maintain that comfort level.

Your air conditioner is designed to take advantage of "thermal mass"—the capacity of your home to store cooling during the night and then release it during the day. Jiggling the thermostat may make it difficult for the unit to operate in this efficient manner.

Do inspect your unit's filters at least once every two months. If moderately dirty, they may be cleaned with a vacuum cleaner or by tapping lightly over a newspaper. To assure maximum air circulation, replace with new filters of the same size at least twice a year.

Don't ever run your unit without filters. If you do, dirt will sweep unobstructed into the unit and clog the cooling coil, thereby decreasing capacity to cool.

Do lubricate the fan motor bearings and fan shaft bearings of your home air conditioner every three to six months with a good grade of SAE 20 motor oil. Your owner's manual will show you the location of oil cups to be filled.

Don't call your service man immediately if the unit fails to cool. The trouble may be minor and easily located. Follow this 5-point check list:

1. Check thermostat setting.
2. Make sure lever on front of unit or selector switch on control panel is in "cooling" position.
3. Take off easily-removable front panel and push and release "reset" button on motor starter.
4. Check filter to see if clogged with dirt.
5. If none of this helps, call your service man.

Do set your unit to operate in your absence if you're taking a vacation by:

1. Moving the lever to "heating" position.
2. Setting the thermostat at 60 degrees.
3. Making sure your fan switch is left at "auto" if you have a remote control accessory.

And here's some general advice:

In some areas it may be necessary during cold weather to drain water pipes or cooling tower, if any, to guard against freezing. Your dealer can advise you.

Have your dealer in once a year to give your air conditioner an annual checkup. The cost is nominal, as well as good insurance for continued efficient operation and top home comfort.

In his checkup, your dealer should give the unit a complete going over. This includes:

1. Lubrication of fan shafts and fan motors.
2. Checking of filters for cleaning or replacement.
3. Cleaning of coil, drip pan and heat exchanger.
4. Adjustment of burners, whether oil or gas.
5. Checking of controls and adjustment if necessary.
6. Complete checkup of refrigeration system, including refrigerant, oil and operation.
7. Cleaning of blower wheels.
8. Check of safety controls.
9. Touching up cabinet if necessary for corrosion resistance.
10. Cleaning and flushing of condensate drain.
11. Check of water lines into unit (where water-cooled) for adequate flow.

INSPECTION URGED.

Periodic inspection by a qualified air conditioning service man is essential to maintain efficiency and long life of your room air conditioner.

In addition, filters should be cleaned or replaced at regular intervals.

Newest Window Conditioners Have No 'Bulges'

Newest in designing of room air conditioners this year is the unit that mounts flush, or almost flush with the window itself, doesn't protrude into the room. The unit shown in this photo is only sixteen and one-half inches deep, so doesn't loom bulky on the outside, either. Flexibility of installation make possible mounting in upper as well as lower sash area, or, it can be adapted for casement windows.

For Outdoor Installation

Designed for outdoor installation, this condensing unit is one of the newest styled to blend with surroundings and be completely safe with children and pets around. All moving parts are housed well inside the grill work.

for customers in hot weather has been a large factor in the multiplying number of department and retail store installations. Merchants find that air conditioning their stores attracts more customers and encourages them to spend more time inside the store.

President, Staff Can Keep Cool in The White House

No matter how hot it gets in Washington, President Eisenhower and members of his staff housed in the White House are able to make their decisions in the coolest of atmospheres for the White House has one of the most efficient systems for indoor climate control.

To keep cabinet meetings, receptions and conferences cool this summer, 106 thermostats, all strategically placed, will work overtime to cope with the hot, humid Washington weather.

A compact master-control air-conditioning panel is the heart of the complex, modern system designed to keep the Executive Mansion cool. With this unique panel, one engineer keeps an eye on the temperature and humidities in each of the 132 rooms and can easily make push - button adjustments.

When the button labeled "Green Room" is pushed, the Green Room alone is illuminated on a floor plan graphically displayed on the panel. An instrument dial then rotates to indicate the exact temperature in the Green Room. Signal lights on the control board also warn of excess heating of air conditioning equipment and critical temperatures in the areas leading to the Green Room.

Some idea of the complexity and efficiency of the master control can be appreciated from the fact that it has 91 air lines feeding to it and 102 electrical connections for the equipment, exclusive of the push-button thermostats and temperature controllers, 112 valves and motorized valve assemblies plus 97 relays and switches.

Lincoln's Tomb Air-Conditioned

The tomb of Abraham Lincoln in Springfield, Illinois, has been air-conditioned, one of the first times for a national shrine.

A small, roughly rectangular granite structure, Lincoln's Tomb offered very limited space for the placement of air conditioning equipment. The three major areas to be air conditioned were the sarcophagus chamber and the crypt room, situated at the north end of the structure, and the rotunda though which the public enters, situated at the south end. The areas are connected by an open marble hallway running entirely around the interior portion of the tomb. Three packaged air conditioning units were used.

Tenants Want It

A rising demand among tenants for comfort has spurred the growth of installations in office buildings, as has the landlords' desire to increase property values, since the average tenant is willing to pay higher rents to insure comfort.

How It Was Named.

Air conditioning got its name from the textile industry where yarn conditioning was the term used to describe controlling the amount of moisture in the fiber, just as the air conditioning process was one of controlling water vapor in the air.

Discomfort Increases in Home Five Ways

HOW TO CUT AIR CONDITIONING COSTS

Copyright 1956, Carrier Corporation

According to air-conditioning experts, there are five ways heat sends up the temperature in your home. Direct radiation from the sun, and the heat and water vapor in the outside atmosphere are three important ones. Also, heat and moisture are released by occupants, and by lights, appliances, showers and other household devices. To provide effective low-cost air-conditioning, today's year-round comfort conditioned home makes use of the design, location, building and shade techniques shown to reduce heat load. In a "new look" air-conditioned home, roofs become white and roof overhangs extend to protect windows from radiant glare. Careful attention is paid to orientation of windows and walls, with window concentration on north and south exposures. Along east and west, the house is sheltered from the worst heat of the sun by walls without windows, a garage, and by shading devices such as trellises or landscaping.

Multi-Unit Cheaper

Are you planning to get rid of your old gravity warm air furnace?

Then take this hint. It will cost you less to install an efficient year-round air conditioning unit that will provide both heating and cooling than it would to install a new furnace now and cooling equipment at some later date.

One advantage lies in the fact that it will be necessary to change outlets and ducts only once.

Another lies in the convenience of having the work completed in one step instead of two.

And the savings may well amount to hundreds of dollars.

HEAT MEASURE—BTU.

British Thermal Unit is the measure of heat required to raise the temperature of a pound of water one degree Fahrenheit. BTU's are used to calculate both heating and cooling requirements. One ton of cooling is equivalent to the removal of 288,000 BTU's in 24 hours.

Why Does Air Plant Cost More?

Perhaps you are one of those persons who has asked the question "Why should a room air conditioner cost as much as an eight-cubic-foot household refrigerator when it is so much smaller in size?"

Now there is an interesting question. Let's see if we can make a comparison.

Retaining a constant temperature of approximately 40 degrees F. is relatively simple in the case of the refrigerator because of the fact that the area to be cooled is only eight cubic feet in size and is a sealed, air-tight compartment, whereas the task of the room air conditioner is to extract the heat from free air. In a room 12 foot square this is 1152 cubic feet or 142 times the cubic content of the refrigerator.

Takes More Power.

Also, remember the fact that this is not an air-tight space. The heat of the sun coming in through windows and from sun-baked walls is added to the heat thrown off by those in the room, plus the heat of lamp bulbs, radios, television sets, motors, cooking and whatever else takes place in the area.

An eight-cubic-foot household refrigerator uses only a one-sixth horsepower motor. The most-comonly-used room air conditioner is a three-quarter horsepower which is four and one-half times larger than the one-sixth hp. motor on the refrigerator, and everything else connected with the unit is also relatively that much larger . . . the compressor, the condenser, the tubing . . . plus a thermostat. Everything about it is so much heavier and more rugged that the average three-quarter hp. room air conditioner will weigh two hundred pounds. Your refrigerator requires only one small fan which is run by the one-sixth hp. motor, while a three-quarter hp. room air conditioner requires two and sometimes three fans. One of these fans blows the air coming into the room over the cooling coils. The other cools the refrigerant by blowing air across the condensing coil. Each must have a motor of from one-tenth to one-twenty-fifth hp.

Compact, Efficient.

One can readily see, therefore, why the cost of this equipment should equal the cost of a household refrigerator.

Your household refrigerator runs intermittently. It also has the benefit of the finest insulation. Your room air conditioner, on the other hand, must run continuously day and night, if need be, to bring down the temperature to the comfort point you select.

If you are fortunate enough to see a room air conditioner stripped of its outer shell, you will find one of the most compact and efficient pieces of machinery which comes out of our modern factories and you will never again question the reason for its price.

Your own experience will vouch for the fact that the household refrigerator of today is trouble-free. These efficient machines run on and on, 365 days a year, with never a bit of repair. They last from 15 to 20 years whereas your room air conditioner will probably be used less than six months out of the year. Your room air conditioner will therefore give you an equal number of years of service, or more, and about all the attention it will require is a few drops of oil every three months and a change of filters as often as needed.

SLEEP IN THE SUN?

The old saying that "only mad dogs and Englishmen go out in the midday sun" can be turned around a little to fit the plight of night workers.

It's often the sleeping in the midday sun that is a problem.

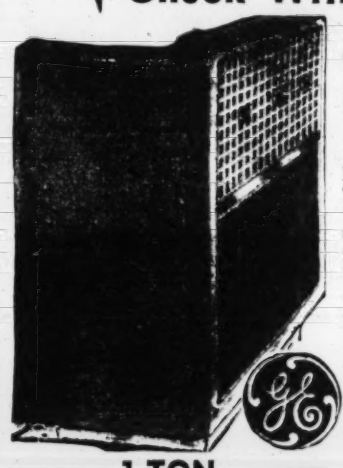

Air-conditioning officials estimate there are six million night workers. Problems of daytime sleeping can be overcome by the use of air conditioners.

The units allow you to close the window tight, shutting out bothersome noises, and brings in cool, clean and comfortable air, circulates it, removes excess moisture and pumps out stale air.

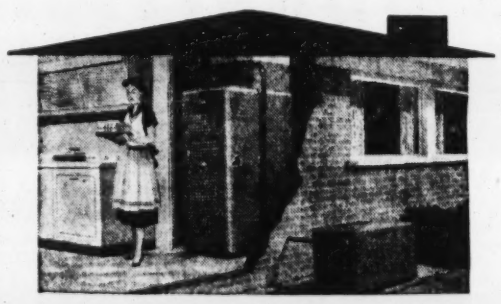

The night worker needn't have a dilemma.

Color Design Important, Too

Window air-conditioning unit designers have become color conscious as well as concerned with power ratings, capacity to cool, etc. With this unit six panels of varied color are available to mix or match with the room decorating scheme.

70 Degrees Best Temperature for Working Alertly

Science has found the best temperature environment for performing mental work is in the mid-70-degree range.

Studies of office workers at varying temperature conditions show efficiency drops markedly as the temperature rises above this range. Body heat rises rapidly because the atmosphere is unable to absorb the extra heat generated in the body. This results in a rapidly decreasing ability to perform even simple tasks requiring mental alertness, accuracy and speed.

There are three basic ways the body can combat this building up of energy-destroying excess heat. These are radiation, or passing off the heat directly to the air, evaporation of moisture or perspiration and by contact with a cooler surface which will absorb the excess heat.

The most efficient way to keep cool is to lower the humidity and temperature of the atmosphere.

Heat Slows Efficiency.

Tests conducted among students at a large midwestern university during winter and summer showed that the students suffered an average drop in mental efficiency of 40 per cent during the hot, humid summer months. The tests were similar in each case.

Conditioners Go To Alaskans for Dehumidifying

A large shipment of room air conditioners was forwarded several months ago to Alaska. They weren't wanted for cooling up there. They were wanted for ventilating and air circulation and for dehumidification. They could deliver control of inside atmosphere.

The shipment emphasizes that room air conditioners are a lot more than heat-wave antidotes. They have usefulness for seven or eight months a year in northern cities as well as for torrid July and dog-day August.

In the temperate months of spring and fall, they perform air-circulating, ventilating and filtering without doing any cooling. They get rid of tobacco smoke, cooking odors, stale air, dust and pollens in the air.

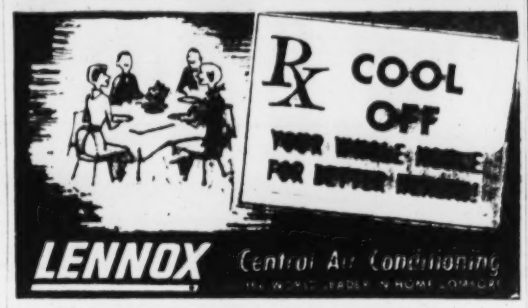

Incidentally, you don't have to bother to remove air conditioner in the winter and put it back in next season. It will weather right in place.

Wasted Energy Conserved With Air-Conditioning

The impact of air conditioning on man's future was described eloquently recently by the Air-Conditioning and Refrigeration Institute.

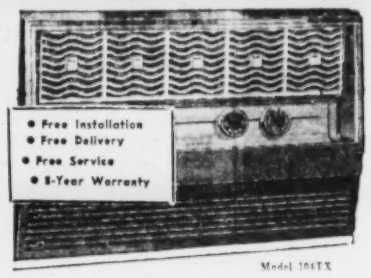

"Man will wake up in an air-conditioned bedroom, eat breakfast in an air-conditioned breakfast nook, drive in an air-conditioned car to work in an air-conditioned manufacturing plant or office building, return for dinner in an air-conditioned dining room, relax in an air-conditioned movie or sit in an air-conditioned living room watching a color television program originating from an air-conditioned studio.

"He will simply set a thermostat and forget both heat and cold. The energy once thrown away in the battle with environment will be turned to more useful pursuits."

Financing Equipment Is Possible

Don't worry about having to get a lot of money together to finance a central air-conditioning installation in your home.

First, it will probably cost you overall a lot less than you think.

Second, an array of extremely low down payment financing plans have been made available with pay-off periods ranging from three years to the entire length of the home mortgage.

Some of these plans are provided through the dealer himself and others through lending institutions.

If you're building or buying a new house, the cost of air-conditioning simply becomes part of the long-term mortgage. But suppose you want to air-condition the home you're presently living in?

Here are the possibilities:

Three-Year Financing — A new three-year plan has just been made available through certain dealers.

It requires only 10 per cent down and the dealer handles all processing details with the financing organization.

The additional mortgage — There are several ways of financing central air-conditioning on a long-term mortgage.

One of the simplest is to obtain a new mortgage covering the air-conditioning cost and then incorporate it into the present mortgage on the home.

If this new mortgage is extended to the total term of the present mortgage, your monthly payments may run well under $10 a month with some types of equipment.

Refinancing—This is another way of doing the same thing.

The original mortgage is replaced by a larger one, with the difference to be used for the air-conditioning installation.

There's still a third way to spread your payments over the long term.

It's the widely publicized open end mortgage — provided you have an open end provision in yours.

When you have paid off a portion of the mortgage, you can usually increase the balance up to the original level to pay for the air-conditioning.

That's your choice. Between conventional and government-insured plans and special financing provided through air-conditioning industry arrangements, it is easy for you to get central air-conditioning.

Industry representatives promised that it will seem easier still, once you've begun to enjoy complete built-in comfort.

Air Conditioner Called a Working Girl's Best Friend

A working girl's best friend—during the summertime, anyway—is an air conditioner, according to the Air-Conditioning and Refrigeration Institute.

With it, she's a crisp, cool career girl; without it, a limp, languid shadow of herself, with damp curls and a nose shiny with perspiration.

The demand for air-conditioned offices is growing rapidly, the Air-Conditioning and Refrigeration Institute reports. A recent survey showed that 85.9 per cent of building owners and business men contacted are experiencing an increased demand from tenants for air conditioning. The majority of this group feels that it must air condition office buildings now in order to keep them competitive.

One impelling reason for office air conditioning, according to the institute, is the matter of retaining qualified office personnel and attracting new help. Girl graduates of business schools, colleges and high schools are more and more inclined to rate pleasant working conditions and interesting jobs above a slightly higher wage.

How Air Conditioner Works

The grimy little fellow diving into the top of the room air-conditioner represents air that is hot and humid and laden with dust and pollen. At (2) the filter removes dust and pollen from the air; at (3 and 4) moisture is condensed out of the air as refrigerant lowers its temperature, leaving dry air and cool to enter the room; at (5) cool, clean air is blown into the room. Some units also provide year-round air-conditioning by blowing clean air over heating elements on chilly days and nights.

New Era Of Beauty Arrives

By VERA DUVALL

The American homemaker can look forward to a new era of beauty for both herself and her home, thanks to a new mechanical household "servant"—air conditioning.

The housewife who redecorates this spring will be completely free to choose colors for the best effect without worrying about soilage. With air conditioning, the windows can be kept closed so that summer breezes do not carry in the dust and dirt of the city or the pollen and dust of the suburbs and country. She may use the new pale pastels and bright colors for walls, draperies, upholstery and carpeting and be sure that new paints and fabrics will stay bright and new-looking.

Filters Out Dust.

With air conditioning, she will have more time for hobbies and outside interests because over 90 per cent of the dust will be filtered out of the air before it has an opportunity to settle on walls and furniture. Dusting, therefore, will no longer be a daily chore, and walls and window sills will not require frequent scrubbings which loosen paint and dull finishes.

The housewife need no longer worry about air-conditioning units protruding into the room nor about blending of colors with her furnishings. Many manufacturers are now making units in pastel shades of blue, yellow, green, pink and ivory as well as the usual greys, beige and mahogany tones and nearly all models may be mounted flush with the window sill so that drapes may be hung as usual or drawn when the conditioner is not in use. The units will not interfere with furniture placement under the window.

Those house plants which sometimes droop in the heat will thrive in an air-conditioned atmosphere where their leaves are free to "breathe" without a coating of dust.

Housewife Slick Chick.

Then, when the man of the house returns home after a hard day's work at the office, the homemaker will no longer meet him at the door with shiny nose, drooping coiffure and limp dress. Her household chores having been reduced, she will have had time for an afternoon nap (with the windows closed and shades drawn for quiet, cool, comfortable rest). She will also be able to cook complete, healthful dinners in comfort and will not have to rely on the usual summer cold cuts and salads. And, the meal will be greeted by good appetites when she places it before the family.

She may also dress in costumes with snugly-fitted waistlines, so flattering to the feminine figure, and still be comfortable in the pleasant temperatures of an air-conditioned home. Light, sheer woolens will also be comfortable as will three-quarter length sleeves and the pretty sweater-dress combinations. She may choose light, fragile shades of pink, lilac, periwinkle, yellow and green, etc., to blend with her new light and bright furnishings. Her permanently-pleated skirts and sheer billowy cottons will look fresh and crisp instead of wilted.

There is one other point we should not omit. Her health will be better: her complexion better and her skin will not take on that parched, dry look that comes with the blistering heat of summer in an un-air-conditioned home. Want to look lovelier? Then live in an air-conditioned home.

Clean Odor Found In Home That Is Air-Conditioned

Your home has a wonderfully clean odor all the time if it's air conditioned.

Fry fish, boil onions, or bring out the limburger cheese. The odor disappears into that wondrous invention, the air conditioner. Think about it. Seldom do you notice any stale air or a "smoke-filled room" in an air-conditioned home.

Those with an allergy (hay fever or otherwise) can appreciate what an air conditioner does to filter the air, because the pollen is trapped before it ever gets into the house.

Dust filters in the modern conditioners take dirt out of the air before it can settle on furniture, and the housewife with such units will say that her light, luxurious fabrics stay clean longer and that dusting isn't done anywhere near so often.

Tired of living in a "hothouse"?

WORTHINGTON'S Climate Man will show you how to air condition your home the easy way

You don't have to put up with it, you know! And the man who can take you away from all that is no farther than your telephone.

He's the Worthington CLIMATE MAN—a real whiz at figuring out the easy way to take the heat off your entire house.

Maybe you're hazy now on how air conditioning works, and just why people who have it think it's the most. But when you see the Worthington CLIMATE MAN's demonstration right in your living room, you'll know the answers. You'll also know why Worthington air conditioning gets the nod from experienced architects, engineers and home-builders. No mystery about that—Worthington makes such a wide line of equipment that there's virtually no house that can't be turned into a pleasant oasis even in the hottest weather.

You can have a complete year-round system (heating and cooling) or you can have "add-on" units that hook right into your present system. You can put a Worthington FLEXI-COOL unit in your attic. And you can also order it in sections—one part in your basement or crawl space; the other in your garage or outside.

But the quickest way to learn why Worthington is the fastest growing name in air conditioning is to call your Worthington CLIMATE MAN right now. He'll give you all the facts—and all the figures . . . fast.

FHA Loans Apply To Conditioners

A matter of interest to the purchaser of any piece of equipment or article designated for summer comfort is that ample credit is available to place it in the home.

Refrigerated air conditioning, either central plant or window units, can be installed under the FHA home improvement loan plan, whereby the purchaser pays at his own convenience in small monthly installments.

In the case the FHA loans plan does not meet your requirements, all dealers have liberal credit plans that amount to practically the same thing.

So don't let immediate cash available deter you from being comfortable at home this summer. You can be comfortable and pay for it as you use it and finally own it free of debt.

Unit With Disposable Filter

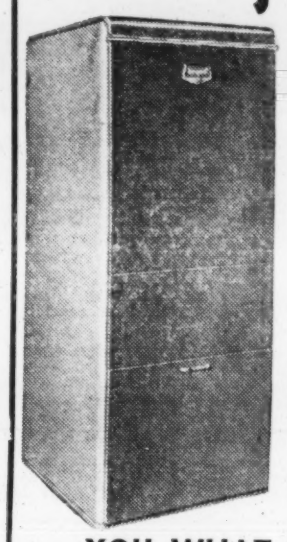

This room air-conditioner is equipped with an electronic filter, the first of that kind ever used in room-type air-conditioning equipment, and it is easily disposable. In seconds, the housewife can remove the grill front, lift out the old and replace a new filter to assure a continuous flow of clean, fresh air.

summer weather place an additional strain on the heart and is one reason one feels listless and lazy, loses pep and energy, when the heart tries to cope with hot weather. Studies show air conditioning can bring relief from the added strains of hot weather.

New Furnace Now Means Cooling, Too

The traditional role of the home heating unit as "just a furnace" is about to go the way of the Great Auk, a leading spokesman for the home comfort industry predicts.

Spectacular gains in complete home air conditioning are also bringing profound changes in the residential heating business.

Today, the home heating plant is really the first step toward complete air conditioning. Heating, as such, is becoming simply a phase of all-season air conditioning.

From now on, the key phrase for furnace buyers will be "easy convertibility" to year-round comfort.

Home owners who will be replacing their worn out forced air furnaces are urged to give consideration to air conditioning when the heating system is installed.

Can Save Money.

One company has just introduced a completely new line of forced warm air furnaces embodying an "air conditioning design" for simple and economical adaptation to year-round comfort in the home.

In some models the dealer need only lift a removable cover on the furnace, slip in a cooling and dehumidifying coil, and connect it to an air-cooled condensing unit located outside in order to convert to year-round air conditioning.

Many of these furnaces can save the home owner an average of $150 in converting to complete air conditioning in the typical house, compared to the cost of adapting a standard furnace.

Installation practices recommended through dealers for the new type furnace will call for duct systems and outlets planned to handle the complete air conditioning job.

'Significant Changes.'

A number of furnace manufacturers have been merged with air conditioning companies during the last few years and many of the rest are producing air conditioning equipment of their own.

Coupled with a demand for year-round air conditioning, this "growing together" of America's air conditioning and heating industries has already produced significant changes in home heating design and in the kind of equipment used.

The following changes are predicted for the heating segment of the air conditioning industry:

Dealer and Installation Techniques—Dealers currently specializing in heating will find it necessary to become well-rounded experts in complete air conditioning or find their business diminishing.

In addition, virtually all heating installations will be made with complete air conditioning in mind. Provision will need to be made for economical conversion and for precision control of temperature and quality of air throughout the home.

Public Awareness—Since air conditioning adds a completely new dimension to the home, the man who enjoys it will be far more aware of it as the center of home comfort than he is now aware of his furnace.

With installation of air conditioning a source of family pride, the owners of such systems are more fully aware of their attractiveness and the reliability of the manufacturer.

Heating Equipment—In addition to the design changes embodied in many modern forced air furnaces, the influence of air conditioning will make itself increasingly felt in the "wet heat" segment of the heating industry.

Radiators, panel heating apparatus, convectors and most other present-day devices installed in living areas for "wet heat" systems are not practical for use with cooling. Manufacturers in the "wet heat" field will therefore find it necessary to undertake considerable modification of the room device used with warm water or steam heat systems to give them the advantages of easy convertibility.

TAKES 64 QUARTS.

A three-ton air conditioner takes 64 quarts of water per day from the atmosphere of the average six-to-eight-room home. Removing this moisture and thereby lowering the relative humidity in the home greatly lessens the chances of damage to the house and household equipment.

Ton to 400 Feet.

It is estimated that it takes approximately a ton of air conditioning for each 400 to 500 square feet in multi-story office buildings.

To cool a single floor, a ton of air conditioning is needed for each 350 to 400 square feet of floor space, and a ton is needed for each 250 to 300 square feet on the top floor.

HEART POWER PLANT.

Your heart is the power plant of the human body and in one year it pumps enough blood through your system to fill 80 to 200 tank cars of 8000 gallons each. Heat and humidity of

New York to Get Air-Conditioned Omnibuses Soon

One hundred air-conditioned buses have been ordered by the New York City Omnibus Corporation, which operates most of the buses in Manhattan and Queens, according to James J. McCarthy, president.

The first of the buses is scheduled to be delivered by April 15 for immediate test operations, and it is hoped to have 100 buses operating by the end of 1956.

In addition to a ten-ton air-conditioning unit, each bus will have picture windows, fluorescent lighting, improved heating for winter and will be larger than current buses, each bus seating 50.

The principal reason for the air-conditioning feature is to stimulate bus riding during hot weather when the number of passengers normally drops sharply. It is also a move to try to stop the overall declining trends in bus riders.

Air-conditioned taxicabs are also making their appearance on New York streets. At least one fleet of fifty cabs and a number of individually-owned cabs will have mechanically refrigerated air conditioning. Oddly enough, the New York Police Department's Hack Bureau will not allow such cabs to be marked "Air-Conditioned" because they say it would mean unfair competition, but you may be sure that when the weather is unbearably hot, the telephone lines of the air-conditioned cab company will also be hot as riders quickly recognize the advantages of an oasis of comfort in an air-conditioned taxi.

A spokesman for one of New York's principal taxicab dealers said that fleet companies had found that automatic transmissions and power steering had increased driver efficiency and believed that air conditioning should have beneficial effects on the drivers in addiiton to providing cool comfort for the passengers.

Conditioners Now Necessity In Competition

Air conditioning which first moved into the commerical field in the 1920s and 1930s now has become a competitive necessity for businesses serving the public.

Comfort for the customer has proved a major drawing card for such establishments, giving them a big advantage over businesses or stores which aren't air conditioned.

It has been estimated by one manufacturer of air conditioning units that when the amount of air-conditioned offices in any city reaches a given point—estimated by the American Institute of Management at 15 per cent of the desirable space available—it becomes a competitive necessity for all other buildings in the city.

New Neighborhood Shopping Center Ready for Opening

New half-million-dollar shopping center, designed and built by Fischer and Frichtel, Inc. in Frostwood, Berkeley subdivision, will open Wednesday. Structure features architectural stylings similar to those of contemporary modern Frostwood home, shown in far background.

Frostwood Shops Set To Open

A $500,000 shopping center to serve the Frostwood development and other adjacent homes in Berkeley, has been completed by Fischer and Frichtel, Inc., and will be opened official next Wednesday. The building will house a super market, hardware, variety and drug stores, and is located near the center of the 190-acre subdivision, which also has been designed and built by Fischer and Frichtel.

Architecturally, the 120 foot by 200 foot building is a king-sized Frostwood home. The structure embodies the same economy of line and freedom from convention found throughout the subdivision. The contemporary modern architectural features include flat, built-up roofs, projecting dramatically in four different planes, and ceilings following identical angles. Wide canopies, with recessed lighting, overhang the walk areas.

Largest unit in the building is a 12,500 square foot I.G.A. super market, leased to Frank Italiano. It is one of few grocery outlets in the St. Louis area to feature laminated column and beam construction.

Gravity Conveyors.

Other features include a ball-bearing gravity conveyor leading from the meat-cutting department across the entire back wall of the store, behind the meat counters.

Another is a powered belt conveyor to move bottles from the front of the store to the loading dock 120 feet to the rear. A gravity conveyor located above this one returns empty cases from the back of the store to the bottle return counter in the front. The attendant may remove an empty container from the upper conveyor, load it with incoming loose bottles, and place it on the belt conveyor bound for the loading dock in about 15 seconds.

The store has pastel walls, a full-width mural of a rural scene on the back wall, and dark terrazzo floors. It is illuminated by floor-to-ceiling glass on the front (like all other areas in the building), and by fluorescent fixtures studded against the acoustical tile ceiling, which is sloped with the roof angle.

Hardware and Variety.

Both the Brooks Hardware and Paint Co. and the Ben Franklin store, located in the central, flat-roof portion of the building, have 3000 square feet of space and asphalt tiled floors.

Frostwood Drugs, occupier of the remaining 3800 square feet of the building, has a terrazzo floor, sloped ceiling. It will be a self-service type of drug store.

Individual heating and air conditioning units are used in each space. Return ducts for the super market space are located on the perimeter, burrow beneath the concrete slab to deliver air to the central unit.

Plantings have been installed in free-form areas at opposite ends of the building. It is served by an asphalt-paved lot capable of parking 230 automobiles.

Ground will be broken soon for an adjunct to the shopping center, across the street north from the new building. This unit will house barber, beauty and childrens' shops, and probably some medical offices.

A new service station, now under construction at the opposite end of the parking lot, will be completed shortly.

Pershing Gallery Building Acquired By Investor Firm

The Pershing Gallery Building, 5569-89 Pershing avenue, a prominent store, office and garage building distinguished by elaborate terra-cotta trim front has been sold by Robert E. and Jane B. Bush to interests taking title in the name of Republic Realty and Investment Co.

Documentary stamps indicated a sale price in excess of $200,000 with the Edw. A. Pollack & Son R. E. Co., acting as agent in the deal.

The property has an aggregate frontage of 200 feet, a depth of 180 feet. There are eight stores, offices on the second floor among which is part of the auditing branch of the United States Post Office, and a two-story fireproof garage building in the rear having 15,000 square feet on each floor.

Gross annual rent of the property is approximately $34,000. Pollack & Son will retain the management of the property.

Aviation Firm Buys Property On Olive Road

The Larkin Packer Co., which recently moved its headquarters and factory operations to Texas, sold its plant in University City last week to Steuby Aviation, Inc.

Rodemyer-Christel & Co., real estate agents, negotiated the transaction.

The property is located at 6201 Olive Street road at the intersection of Olive Street Rd., Hayes avenue and Skinker boulevard.

It consists of 92,500 square feet of land and four one-story buildings with a total of 57,700 square feet of space. In addition to the main building, a brick and concrete structure with 43,500 square feet of space, improvements include a blacksmith shop, a pipe shop, a restaurant and washroom building.

The Larkin company, manufacturers of oil well drilling supplies, moved its operations to Waxahachie, Tex., in December.

Firm Moves Office

The St. Louis Railway Supply Co., which owns its warehouse building at 2112-2114 North Second street, has moved its offices out of that building to new quarters in the Railway Exchange Building. Former office space has been added to the warehouse operation.

Wool Mart To Move to 1st, Delmar

A transaction involving buildings long important in the industrial life of St. Louis was closed when the Main-Morgan Realty Company (formerly Christian Peper Tobacco Company) sold two six-story buildings at the southwest corner of First and Delmar to the Sanger Realty Company, a real estate investment concern.

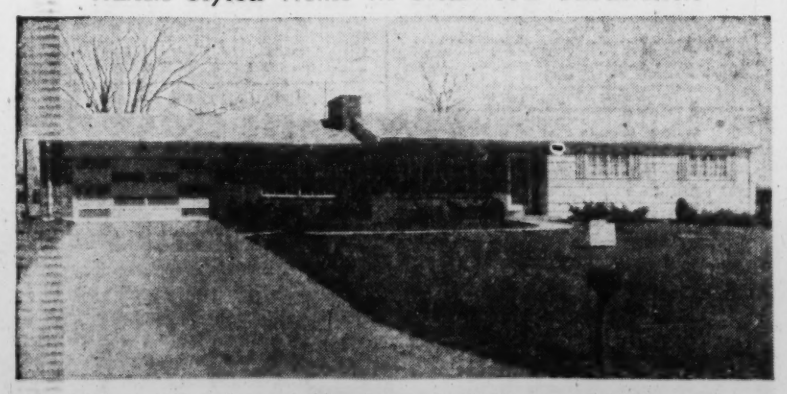

The two six-story buildings contain 100,000 square feet of floor area and comprise a part of a group of four buildings long occupied by the Christian Peper Tobacco Company which ceased operations in 1952. Founded in 1852, the tobacco firm occupied the corner building at First and Delmar from the early 1870s. This building has interesting use of the architectural feature of the iron facade which flourished in the river-front buildings in St. Louis in the middle of the 19th Century. The adjoining buildings were constructed at the turn of the century and all are of mill type construction, sprinklered throughout.

The Sanger Realty Company will lease the buildings to various tenants, the principal new tenants being Sanger-Brothers and Midwest Wool Marketing Co-operative, both of whom are moving from 1221 North Broadway, the latter premises having been acquired by the State Highway Department for the new Third Street Highway.

The Main-Morgan Realty Company, of which Elmer C. Peper is president, retains ownership of the two remaining buildings, which contain 125,000 square feet of floor space and extend south along First street to Lucas avenue.

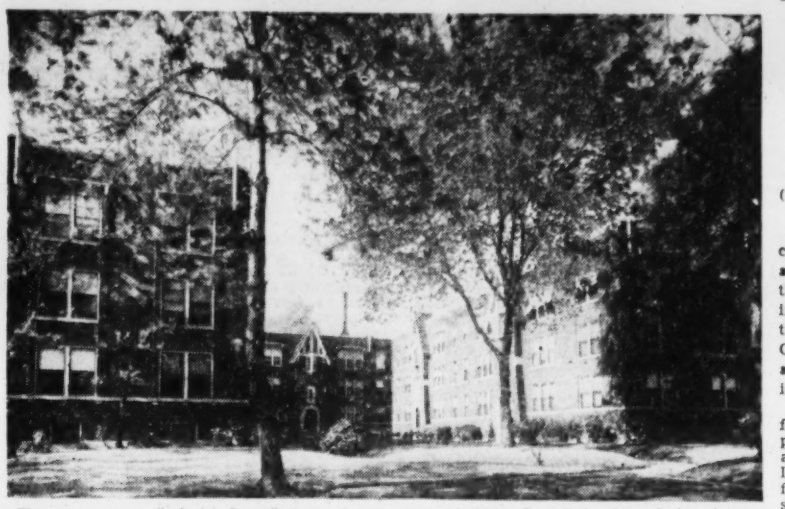

The purchaser was represented by Earl Susman, and Christian B. Peper represented the seller.

Ranch Styled Home In Briarwood Subdivision

This home at 1049 Springwood drive, Briarwood, off Warson and Clayton roads, has been sold for Mr. and Mrs. Dewey E. Ward to Mr. and Mrs. Bryan Coffman. Bayer-Rickhoff, Realtors, Inc., was selling agent.

Russell Arms Apartments Building Purchased

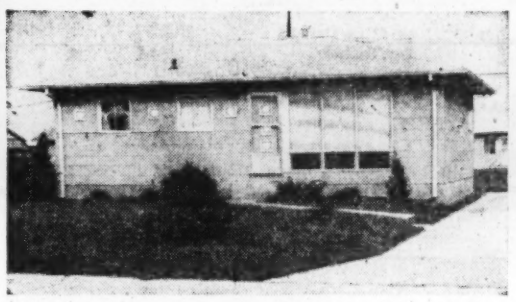

This property, called the Russell Arms Apartments, at 3300 Russell boulevard, has been sold by the Russell Arms Corporation, which held it under a voting trust agreement, to a new corporation called the Shell Development Co., Inc. Purchase price was reported to be in excess of $200,000. The property, with 30 dwelling units, is said to have an annual gross yield of about $30,000. John A. Wolf and the Glick Real Estate Co., Inc., were agents in the deal, which was closed in the offices of the Title Insurance Corporation. Lawyers who checked legal matters in the deal were Lee, Fricke & Lee and James McClellan. The Sacks Real Estate Co., in association with the purchasing organization, will manage the property.

Architect's Sketch For Riverfront Offices

This is Architect Diedrich F. Rixmann's prospective sketch of six-story office building to be erected soon at cost of estimated $1,000,000 at Third and Vine streets on the downtown riverfront facing the Jefferson National Expansion Memorial park site.

The house has a 12-foot square kitchen with steel cabinets, has gas fueled hot-air heat, full basement, is on 60x125-foot lot.

'X' to Mark the Spot In Mystery Realty Fete

X will mark the spot at the Starlight Roof of the Chase Hotel where the "bosses" in realtor offices will be praised, conjoled and saluted by the Women's Division St. Louis Real Estate Board next Wednesday evening.

Commemorating the tenth consecutive year they have dedicated their anniversary party to their "bosses," the Roman numeral X will also be used mysteriously to denote the unknown quantity in satirizing their profession and the men in their offices.

This year the "bosses" will be hailed as X and decorations and programs will carry out this theme. The main feature of the evening will be the show also titled "X," written and produced by Mrs. Mabel N. Kisling, vice president of the Title Insurance Corporation and a past president of the Women's Division.

As is customary, talent for the skits, songs, dances, stage management, etc., has been recruited entirely from the membership of the organization, with the exception of Tony J. Kisling, the only male member of the staff, who has, throughout the years, been the accompanist for the show.

Dinner will be preceded with a cocktail party in the Zodiac cocktail lounge.

Mrs. Clara Pendleton Welsch, president of the Women's Division, will preside at the meeting and greetings will be extended to Clarence C. Turley, president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, Joseph A. Goeke Sr., president, and Clarence C. Lang, executive secretary, of the St. Louis Real Estate Board.

Assisting Mrs. Kisling, general chairman and Mrs. Jayne Pulliam, vice chairman, will be Mrs. Harriet Hohman and Miss Betty Lux, hostesses; Mrs. Marie Holman Morris, reservations; Miss Helen Rogers, decorations; Miss Rosamond Smith, invitations and programs; and Miss Mallie Thompson, dancers.

Mrs. Helen Blanke, Mrs. Helen Rembold and Miss Betty Siska will be in charge of props and wardrobe.

The cast and chorus include Mrs. Cleo Bradley, Mrs. Alice Brooks, Miss Jayne Dameris, Mrs. Anita Flaming, Mrs. Jeanne Fuchs, Miss Betty Anne Gray, Mrs. Hohman, Mrs. Elna Hoover, Miss Dottie Julius, Mrs. Wanda Kickel, Miss Mary Linton, Miss Lux, Miss Rita Malecek, Miss Dorothy McCorkell, Miss Ruthie Schaeffer, Miss Pat Slessinger, Miss Dolores Tognoni and Miss Carol Will.

The dancers are Miss Marcia Fricke, Miss Janet Gantner, Mrs. Jackie Harah, Miss Peggy Lovely, Miss Virginia Pape, Miss Thompson, Mrs. Beverly Trapf and Mrs. Helen Warren.

Expands Operation

The House of Floors, formerly at 8145 Delmar boulevard, has moved to larger quarters at 8131 Delmar, due to rapid business growth. The concern was founded in 1950 and has concentrated on residential work, was first to use brass strip in vinyl design floors. Earl M. Roberts is operator.

Offices Downtown Planned

Plans to construct a six-story modern office building at the southwest corner of Third and Vine streets in downtown St. Louis were announced last week by Tectonics, Inc.

The structure, combining four floors of office space and three levels of inside automobile parking, will be the first major new office building constructed in the downtown area in more than 25 years. It will cost in excess of $1,000,000.

The unusual structure, first in the downtown area to incorporate parking for tenants' cars in the building itself, will be located on the site now occupied by a public parking lot and a smaller building occupied by a seed company. It will occupy a lot with 135 feet frontage on Vine street and 97-foot street frontage on the new Third Street Expressway.

Of contemporary design, it will provide 36,000 square feet of air-conditioned office space and room for parking 135 automobiles. Lobby and auto entrances will be on Vine street. Exterior will be of concrete, masonry and glass.

Under Floor Ducts.

Acoustically treated both outside and inside to control noise, the building will feature modern underfloor duct wiring throughout to permit maximum flexibility of office arrangement and desk placement. This wiring system will allow location of telephone and electrical outlets at any point in the offices.

The parking levels on the basement, ground, and second floors will be connected with wide concrete ramps. Automatic elevators will connect the parking levels with office floors. Parking space will be reserved for tenants in proportion to office space occupied. Interior

Missouri Looks for Industry

By LESLIE G. KENNON
(Missouri Division of Resources and Development.)

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo.—In case you hadn't noticed, there's a big push on in communities of the state for industry; a growing, concerted effort, largely through Industrial Development Corporations, is being made on a state-wide level—and it's paying off.

Last year was a record one for numbers of new and expanding industry, and 1954 was also a big success. To top this, Lisle Jeffrey, industrial director for the Missouri Division of Resources and Development, has pointed out that already the total is larger in the first five months of 1956 than in '55—and there is "every indication" that 1956 will be "another big year" in Missouri's growing industrial picture.

There is a need for greater understanding of how the state goes about getting this new industry; a feeling, supported in earnest by the various news media, that the people need to know what an industry can mean to them personally in the way of a higher standard of life. There is also a need to know what to do to attract industries to their communities—and people of more than 100 communities in Missouri have shown their willingness to do their share by forming and contributing to Industrial Development Corporations.

Groups Responsible.

These groups—known generally as the "I.D.C.'s"—have been responsible for a lot of Missouri's new and expanding industry.

They are equipped to do many things, including the erection of buildings, buying and improving of industrial tracts, conducting surveys to find out the type and quantity of labor, resources, etc., located in their community or area, borrowing money or going into debt if need be to get the job done.

Selling communities on this is just one phase of the work of the industrial section of the Missouri Division of Resources.

The section also prepared the annual and mid-year reports; puts out a steady flow of booklets and material to keep the public—and prospective industries—informed; aims national advertising at specific industries; screens and advises prospective industries on location.

They furnish industries with a list of available buildings, industrial tracts, and give them information they'll need such as data on taxes, labor laws, etc.

Actually, the service offered by the division's industrial section is a "personalized" one. They advise, co-operate and help—but it's largely up to the communities themselves to "put their house in order."

Some You Expect.

There are many things to be done before attracting industry; some of these things that most of us think little about where industry is concerned, such as does the city offer adequate recreation, churches and schools. Then, there are the ones you would expect—what are the city's natural resources, the water supply, labor quantity and quality, etc. The industries also watch civic progress and attitudes; they don't want to locate in a non-progressive atmosphere.

"If the communities don't come through, there's not much we can do about it," pointed out industrial assistant Richard M. Kinne. "It's up to them to do the final selling job."

The industrial section also maintains a research section, headed by Richard O'Brien. This department keeps up a steady flow of industrial and economic data and keeps the communities informed as to the latest available industrial statistics while informing industries not only of community progress and data but of general state-wide items like retail sales, manufacturing costs, —everything which the prospect might find of interest.

Currently, the research section is completing a recreational survey—where the tourist goes, what he spends, what he likes, etc. The tourist business is Missouri's third largest industry and a vital segment to planning.

Prospects are kept confidential by the industrial section until the prospective industry is ready to release the news that

Over 500 Attend Builders' Spring Dance at Hotel

More than 500 builder and associate members of the Home Builders Association of Greater St. Louis and their key personnel were feted at a Spring Festival Dinner Dance last Sunday evening at the Chase Hotel. The entire roof had been reserved by the association for the occasion and all tables were filled.

Ben Goldberg, chairman of the entertainment committee, said "We were extremely pleased with the response to the spring dance and will in all probability make it an annual affair." Music was furnished in the Starlight room by Johnny Polzin's orchestra, and guests in the Zodiac were entertained by the Versatones.

Gene Vescovo, president of the association, praised Goldberg and his committee for organization of the affair and the smooth running efficiency with which all details were handled. The committee was also responsible for favors distributed to all the women during the evening.

The dinner was held as a get-acquainted affair for the promotion of closer relations and wider acquaintanceship among the members.

Methodists To Lay Cornerstone This Afternoon

The cornerstone of the new educational building of the Kirkwood Methodist church, under construction at Washington and Clay avenues, is to be laid at 5 p.m. today with Bishop Ivan Lee Holt officiating.

Savings, Loan Agency Opening Ferguson Office

The Hamiltonian Federal Savings and Loan Association of Ferguson plans grand opening of its new quarters at 201 North Florissant road this week.

Robert Victor, executive vice president, states: "We, at Hamiltonian Federal, feel that this modern building is a symbol of faith. Faith in our future and that of the entire community. Since our organization in 1920, Hamiltonian Federal has paid 72 consecutive dividends, and these new quarters presage even greater things in the years ahead."

The two-story structure, of contemporary design, is fireproof, with concrete, steel and glass construction. The exterior has granite facing and large areas of glass.

Facilities include seven teller windows, safety-deposit boxes, a massive, steel vault, waiting lounge, conference rooms, offices. Parking area is provided adjacent to the building.

Interior decor is in harmony with the design of the building. Executive offices are carpeted; cork tile is used in heavily-trafficked customer areas. Walls and ceilings are painted in pastel shades.

The building is heated and cooled by an air-to-air heat pump with zone control.

In addition to the new Ferguson quarters, Hamiltonian Federal has an office in South St. Louis at 3142 South Grand. Both offices provide complete savings and loan services.

Hamiltonian Federal officers, besides Victor, are: William R. Barnes, president; Karl F. Kirberg, vice president; Jay H. Lartonoix, secretary-treasurer; Eleanor Strobl, assistant secretary-treasurer.

Cornerstone Ceremonial In Kirkwood

Members of the Kirkwood Methodist church are to lay the cornerstone for their new educational building at Washington and Clay avenues at 5 p.m. today. The new building, to cost $250,000 will accommodate more than 500 Sunday School students. Present attendance already runs to that figure.

Following a program in the sanctuary, an outdoor ceremony will include the placing of a Book of Worship in the cornerstone box by Bishop Ivan Lee Holt, acting as master of ceremonies. Also to go into the box will be a Methodist Discipline, deposited by Superintendent H. H. Luetzow; a Bible, by the pastor, the Rev. H. S. Anglin; a church directory, by the minister of education, H. W. Becker; a hymnal, by the organist, Mrs. Frank Parker; a building program brochure, by Sheldon E. Risley; together with lists of names of organizations; the building fund finance committee, by Ralph Curry; W. S. C. S., by Mrs. Sig. Heiman; building fund contributors, by Spencer Gould; Sunday School officers and teachers, by Harry Leinberger; board members, by John Craigo; building committee, by Robert Young Jr.; new coins, by the treasurer, Frank McCullough. The Post-Dispatch has previously covered the construction story.

MORE WILL BUY.

More Americans plan to buy a house this year than last, according to the United States Savings and Loan League. The League basese its belief on a recent survey of the Federal Reserve Board which showed nearly 10 per cent of consumer spending units plan to buy a house this year, slightly more than in 1955.

Labor Executive, St. Louisans on Masonry Program

A national labor executive and a St. Louis civic leader will share top billing at a membership meeting of the Unit Masonry Association of Metropolitan St. Louis at 8 p.m. May 23 in the ballroom of the Coronado Hotel, Leo F. Havey, president, reports.

The principal speakers will be John J. Murphy, secretary of the Bricklayers, Masons & Plasterers International Union, and Aloys P. Kaufmann, president of the Chamber of Commerce of Metropolitan St. Louis.

The program will also feature a brief talk by Fred H. Daues, president of the Mason Contractors Association of America. James B. Crowley, executive director of the Unit Masonry Association will serve as master of ceremonies.

Five hundred persons, representing all of the various groups in the masonry industry, are expected to attend.

105-Acre Tract Bought for New Homes Program

A tract of 105 acres at the northwest corner of Shackleford road and Mullanphy road in Florissant has been acquired by the Pokres Construction and Realty Co. as the site for a new development of homes.

Of the tract, 83 acres were purchased from Mr. and Mrs. John Behlmann, 22 from Mr. and Mrs. John Boegemann.

Pokres has sold 10 acres of the 105, facing Mullanphy, to the school district there as a site for an elementary school, and 18 acres on Shackelford at Humes Lane has been sold to the school district for a high school site.

The Kelly agency handled and reported the transactions, with William W. Brown acting for the school.

G.I. Loans Cutoff Plan Is Decried

WASHINGTON—A cut-off of the G.I. home loan program next year will have an unusually heavy impact on the home building industry and repercussions throughout the entire economy, John M. Dickerman, executive director of the National Association of Home Builders, asserted yesterday.

"A careful review of the situation shows that the consequences of allowing the law to terminate on July 25, 1957, will mean a severe disruption of home building in many areas and a sharp cutback in total housing production," Dickerman said. "It is well to remember that in 1955 G.I. houses accounted for more than 30 per cent of the 1.33 million starts.

"The building of fewer homes touches off a chain reaction both in the community and the general economy. It adversely affects labor, manufacturers, suppliers, retail merchants and lending institutions as well as home builders. And, of course, if the law expires hundreds of thousands of World War II veterans now in their early thirties will lose the entitlements at a time when they would be most valuable."

House Votes Grace.

Dickerman set out the home builders' position in response to reports that the Congress may ignore the recommendations of NAHB and major veterans groups to extend the G.I. housing benefits to July, 1960. These benefits include low down payments on Government-guaranteed home loans and a four and one-half per cent interest rate. The House of Representatives has voted a one-year grace period for contract-backed G.I. applications in process at the time the law expires, but no action has been taken by the Senate.

The home building official said circumstances beyond anyone's control combined to set the stage for the unusually heavy impact which the loss of G.I. housing would have upon the industry.

Far-Reaching Effects.

"Elimination of the G.I. program in 1957 would restrict housing aids at the very time when liberal terms are most needed," Dickerman said. "The adverse effects will be far greater than they would have been in the immediate post-war years when housing was in drastically short supply, or will be in the 1960s. Here is why:

"The period 1955 through 1960, which we are in now, is one when the low birth rates of the 1930s show up in a lower net family formation. The number of new families formed in this period certainly will be below the 1950-1955 level. And, of course, the rate of family formation has a significant bearing on the housing market.

"It follows that the relatively low rate of new family formation is now a negative factor in the housing market. Furthermore, it will continue to be until the 1960's when a new surge in family formations, the result of the high birth rates during the war and immediate post-war years, will set in."

Dickerman pointed out that in years immediately following the war, net nonfarm household formation rose to about 1.5 million. In 1950, he added, the rate was 1.6 million, but then a decline set in and by 1955 it had fallen to about 850,000. He sadi it should continue at the latter level, or slightly lower, for the rest of the decade.

Builders Here Will Attend Capital Meet

The annual spring meeting of the board of directors of the National Association of Home Builders will be held in Washington, D. C., for one week beginning next Thursday.

Representing the local affiliated association, the Home Builders Association of Greater St. Louis, as directors on the national board, are President Gene L. Vescovo, Gerald F. Borgschulte, John Herdlein, alternate for Richard C. Higginbotham, and Clarence T. Wilson.

In addition to the various association matters and pending legislative bills to be presented before the assembly, the highlight of the six-day meeting will be the congressional banquet to be held on Monday evening, May 21, in the Mayflower Hotel. A reception at 6:15 p.m. for N.A.H.B. members and their congressional guests will immediately precede the banquet.

Equitable Life Will Open New City Quarters

The Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States will formally open new offices on the sixteenth and eleventh floors of the Mississippi Valley Building in the heart of the financial district at 506 Olive street next Friday.

The Harley J. Simpson and Donald L. Bryant Agencies are located on the sixteenth floor, as is the mortgage appraisal department headed by Donald M. Comer. The group department, under the direction of John H. Goddard and the cashier, R. S. McDaniel, are located on the eleventh floor.

The entire 12,000 feet has been modernized and air-conditioned under a long-term lease.

Julius Epstein and Associates own the building. Remodeling was done by the Willingham Construction Co.

Friends and customers of Equitable Life will be invited to morning "open house" Friday.

Harold C. Narrow and Sterling A. Long, representing Draper and Kramer, Inc., building managers, will attend. The Mississippi Valley Building is 100 per cent occupied.

Office Plan

partitioning and construction will be designed to suit the specific needs of tenants.

One floor is expected to be occupied by Woods, Tussey and Associates, St. Louis general agents for the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Company of Springfield, Mass. Negotiations are under way with other prospective major tenants. Preference is being given to large space users in leasing.

Recently Organized.

The architect for the building is Diedrich F. Rixmann. Construction is expected to start in the near future upon completion of current leasing negotiations.

Tectonics, Inc., was recently organized to co-ordinate and execute planning, designing, financing, leasing, and construction of major commercial, industrial and residential properties. Officers of the new development organization located on the tenth floor of 509 Olive st. are Carl D. Rixmann, president; Ralph Toensfeld, vice president; Tracy Whitton, treasurer; and Francis A. Casserly, secretary. Rixmann is a retired lumber company executive; Toensfeld is a mechanical and electrical engineer; Whitton is a public accountant; and Casserley is an attorney.

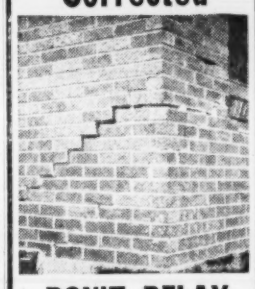

"Tectonics, Inc., has been formed to render a vital over-all co-ordinated professional and technical service to investors and developers seeking solutions to the complex problems of proper planning and construction of modern building projects," Rixmann declared. "By co-ordinating the varied and diverse phases of building development through one organization, Tectonics, Inc., will relieve the developer of the necessity of dealing with numerous different professional and technical contractors and subcontractors and will assure efficient, economical building development.

"In addition to providing the talents and services of its own officers in their specialized fields, Tectonics, Inc., will call upon other outstanding professional and technical personnel as consultants in accordance with the needs of specific building projects."

Ground Breaking Service at Bethalto Today

This sketch from St. Louis Architect Walter Manske is of new Zion Lutheran Church and Parish hall for which groundbreaking ceremonies are to be staged at 2:30 p.m., daylight time, today at Bethalto, Ill.

By-Laws Revision Committee Named

Gene Vescovo, president of the Home Builders Association of Greater St. Louis, has appointed a by-laws committee to consider revision of some of the existing provisions.

William Cassilly, builder, who operates his business at 534 S. Elm, Webster Groves, is chairman. Other members will be Max Barken, builder, who heads his own firm at 8008 Carondelet in Clayton, and Warren Jones, who is a partner in the Wardoc Construction Co.

Vescovo said, "revisions in our by-laws, which we anticipate, are necessary in order for the building industry to keep pace with the constant changes and various problems which confront us daily."

ATTENTION BUILDERS

Dig Starts For Church In Illinois

Zion Lutheran Church of Bethalto, Ill., will have a ground-breaking service for a new church and parish hall at 2:30 p.m. today. The speaker is Dr. Richard R. Caemmerer, professor, Concordia Seminary, St. Louis. Also taking part in the ceremonies are the Rev. W. G. Bruegmann, retired pastor of the congregation, and the Rev. Robert Bentz, assistant pastor. Ceremony of turning the first shovel of ground will be performed by the present pastor, the Rev. Erwin J. Kolb.

Three choirs, women, men and teen-age, and the Sunday School will sing.

Mrs. Fred Helmkamp of Bethalto wrote one of the songs to be sung.

Representing the building committees and the organizations will be: Wilfred Suessen, president of the congregation; Homer Albers, chairman of the building committee; Erwin Plegge, chairman of the building finance committee; Ralph Schuette, superintendent of the Sunday School; Charles Schoenbaum, Golden Age Club; Harold Albers, Men's Club; Mrs. Charles Levi, Ladies Aid; Vernon Deist, Serve Our Savior Club; Donald Emde, Walther League.

Zion congregation was started in 1859 with a small brick church. When that became too small the present frame building was built on the same location in 1910. The new church and parish hall will be adjacent to the original property on an additional five acres purchased for the expansion program.

The building has been planned and designed by Architect W. P. Manske, St. Louis. It will be in a "T" design with the parish hall across the end of the building, 121 feet long, while the length will be 132 feet. The church will be 45 feet wide and the parish hall 52 feet. The parish hall will be used for Sunday School and overflow seating for the church. Also, in one wing of the parish hall, will be church offices and a small chapel for private ceremonies, in which the altar of the present church will be used. The building will have a full basement.

The church will seat 570 with additional 300 in the parish hall and vestibule overflow areas. By using chairs in all available areas 1000 could be seated.

The church has decided to build on a "cost-plus" basis, hiring Walter Neumann, a Bethalto contractor, and using volunteer labor from the church. The contract price of the building, without donated labor, is $286,436. With the furnishings of the church, such as altar, organ, pews, etc., and the architect's fee, the price would be $340,000. By building on a "cost-plus" basis it is hoped to bring this figure down, even though it extends the period of construction. It is estimated that it will take 18 months to build.

Parking Interests To Meet Here for Spring Conference

Outside of Detroit there are probably no business men more vitally interested in the size and shape of tomorrow's automobile than the men of the parking industry. The parking garages now under construction and on drawing boards all over the nation must be planned to accommodate the cars that Detroit will build.

For this reason the members of the National Parking Association, which represents the industry that provides more than 94 per cent of America's off-street parking through private enterprise, have scheduled Roy A. Brown, chief stylist of the Ford Motor Company, to be the headline speaker at their fifth annual convention to be held in St. Louis May 21-23. Brown will give the parking men a preview of the design characteristics of the automobile of the future.

More than 500 parking operators and guests from 36 states and several foreign countries are expected to attend the three-day convention at the Chase and Park-Plaza hotels.

Another feature of the parking meeting will be an exhibit of the latest forms of mechanical parking devices, ticket machines, structural steel garages, time recording equipment, and coin operated parking gates.

USEFUL HARDBOARD

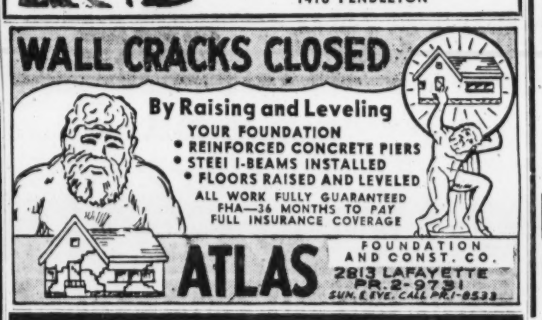

A hardboard that's both useful and ornamental is "pegboard" paneling. Metal fixtures fitting any of the holes will support shelves and a variety of storage items.

Open House At Kirkwood G.M. Center

People of the St. Louis area will have their first opportunity to inspect the General Motors Training Center on Lindbergh boulevard in Kirkwood, when that center joins with other General Motors plants and facilities across the country in holding open house next Wednesday to celebrate the dedication of the vast new General Motors Technical Center in Detroit.

The Training Center will be open for public inspection from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. on that date.

The Kirkwood center is one of 30 centers established across the country, to insure that the persons who buy GM cars and trucks will continue to receive efficient and satisfying service. The centers will make it possible for GM dealer service personnel to keep up to date on a systematic basis with improved service methods and technological advances such as power steering, power brakes and other major improvements.

The center was opened on Jan. 7, 1955. More than 4200 mechanics attended courses during the first year of operation. These mechanics were employes of GM dealerships, mechanics from independent shops who enrolled through United Motors systems, and mechanics employed by owners of GM fleets located in Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois.

The modern brick and steel building has more than 26,000 feet of floor space. There are eight specialized shop classrooms, one for each of the following divisions: Chevrolet, Buick, Oldsmobile, Pontiac, Cadillac, Fisher Body, GMC Truck and United Motors Service. For meeting purposes, there is a fully equipped conference room which will seat 50 persons, and an auditorium complete with stage and projection booth which can accommodate 300.

A cafeteria and kitchen are maintained for the convenience of the students.

Visitors will have an opportunity to inspect all facilities at the center, and instructors will be in attendance to explain the operations.

Gardens on Tour Follow Trend for Outdoor Life

By Eleanor B. McClure,
Post-Dispatch Garden Writer.

The 1956 Wellesley garden tour should be of special interest in that it offers such excellent examples of the modern gardens-are-for-people trend. Each one of the nine gardens that may be visited next Tuesday has been planned and developed to fit the needs of a definite family.

Consider, for instance, the distinctive "town" gardens at the homes of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Johnson, Mrs. Mark Steinberg and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Schlapp Jr. Many of the same plant materials are used in all three gardens—azaleas, hollies, roses, perennials, myrtle and ivy, for example. Yet each garden is radically different in design, treatment and "function."

Since moving into the Portland place residence some three years ago, Mrs. Johnson has redesigned the garden and replanted most of the beds. She has added broad-leaved evergreens for winter effect and extensive beds of roses and perennials for spring and summer bloom. Not only does she enjoy working in her garden, but she also likes to make arrangements with the flowers she has grown.

Attractive Picture.

Her garden, formal in design, is planned both to be looked at and lived in. It affords a feeling of seclusion, sheltered as it is on two sides by the wings of the house and by high brick walls on the others. At one end is a terrace beside the house, at the other a brick pavilion.

The formal pattern of gay flower beds and trim edgings makes an attractive picture to be enjoyed from the principal rooms of the house, as well as from the terrace. Even in winter the warm hues of the brick paths combine with the fine foliage of the broad-leved evergreens in a charming effect.

These evergreen plantings actually make a "frame" for the garden, with wide beds of azaleas, mountain laurels and rhododendrons displayed against hollies, magnolias, euonymus and ivy. A large central panel of grass is outlined with beds of floribunda roses defined by a trim edging of ivy. There are bands of ivy, too, around the large circular pool, which with its fountain forms a focal point for the garden, and also around pairs of boxwoods that accentuate the ends of the garden area.

A wide brick path between the azalea beds and the roses links the terrace and pavilion, making an elongated "O." There is a gate that opens on Lake avenue and another giving access to Portland place. Three doors connect the house and garden, too, so that there is easy "circulation" of guests when the garden is the enchanting setting for teas, receptions and outdoor dinner parties.

Designs Green Garden.

Mrs. Johnson also designed the unusual "green garden" for Mrs. Carl Schlapp Jr. Enclosed with stucco walls, this garden is formal in the Mediterranean style. It is paved with stone, with an octagonal fountain and curbs beside the elevated plant beds also made of stone.

Among the features of the planting are two handsome specimens of the evergreen magnolia, the Magnolia grandiflora. The beds, planted with yews and dwarf hollies, are carpeted with ivy.

In recent years Mrs. Schlapp has added beds of azaleas and a planting of Fashion roses. "We enjoy the color," she says, "but I really don't want many flowers. I like the effect of the ivy beds, and this garden was planned for low maintenance. I just don't like to work in the garden very much."

Although planned for year-round effect, this is a delightful summer garden. Ample shade is provided by large trees and the wisteria-draped arbor, and the ivy beds seem cool and refreshing. The Schlapps enjoy having their meals in this comfortable "outdoor living room," and like to entertain their friends there at informal luncheons or supper parties.

All Space Used.

An archway leads to a smaller garden adjoining the swimming pool. Here is a woodsy planting of hemlocks, hollies, viburnums and dogwoods, with a soft carpeting of myrtle and ferns.

Almost every inch of available space has been used in developing the garden at the home of Mrs. Mark Steinberg on Woodbourne drive. Recently redesigned by Mrs. Harriet Rhodes, it now has new plantings of broad-leaved evergreens and extensive beds of roses.

The garden is actually in the shape of an inverted "L." A terrace garden adjoining the house has a screening and background of large East Palatka hollies. Twin fountains are sculptured pieces by Sheila Burlingame, and there are beds of Peace roses. An interesting note: strawberry plants serve both as ground cover and as edging for these rose beds.

A lily-bordered path, on an axis from the terrace, leads to a dramatic garden sculpture in a landscaped setting. From this point there is a secondary axis (the base of the L) developed into a rose garden with an intriguing pattern of grass paths and brick-edged beds. In the background are tall deciduous shrubs and handsome old apple trees.

Building Erected In 1932 Traded For Apartments

The State National Life Building at the Northeast corner of Eighth and Market street, has been exchanged for an 18-family apartment building located at 150-152 Brentwood boulevard, Clayton, and other real estate. This is the first change of ownership of the State National Life Building since it was erected by A. M. and F. J. Cornwell, in 1932.

The structure is a six-story fireproof office building fronting 75 feet on Market street and 108 feet on Eighth street.

Among tenants in the building are the State National Life Insurance Company, many lawyers and investors.

The transfer took place at Lawyers Title Company. Louis Steinbaum took title to the State National Life Building, with legal details handled by the law offices of Naftalie Lefkowitz. The Trade Realty and Building Company, a Missouri corporation, took title to the Brentwood apartment building.

The real estate brokers were David B. Shepley of Acme Realty Company, and A. M. and F. J. Cornwell.

State Cities Go Out After New Industry

they're looking at "such and such" a community themselves.

Other projects now being worked on by the industrial section include compilation of information on activities of the industrial development corporations, compiling information on industrial tracts, and preparing a series of maps to be published in the Missouri News Magazine which will ultimately make up an economic atlas of Missouri.

The Missouri News Magazine (free upon request to the Division of Resources) is published monthly and goes to industrial prospects and interests as well as other interested persons.

The section is also revising the industrial brochure from the 1954 U. S. Census of Business, Agriculture and Manufacturing.

Projects recently completed include revision of the oil and gas pipeline map and electric transmission map and compilation of data on industrial tracts in all cities over 5000 population.

Another service is helping persons with mineral deposits on their land find out their worth and a market for these deposits.

In 1955, 197 new and expanding industries were recorded—compared to 160 in 1954 and 67 of these were new. It added a total of more than 4,500,000 square feet, added $23,721,047 in wages and gave work to 8135 more persons.

Already, in 1956, with only slightly more than four months past, a total of 105 new and expanding industries have been recorded (based on Dun & Bradstreet figures). Last year, 65 had been reported after the first six months.

It is a symbol that better things are yet to come. Nationally, the industrial picture is bright—and Missouri can get its share if communities themselves want it. As the division's industrial section points out—it's up to the community; all the work that is done on a statewide basis and national basis will accomplish nothing without the follow-through by the cities themselves.

Amateur Growers Of Dahlias Here Plan Plant Sale

Amateur growers of dahlias who belong to the Dahlia Society of Greater St. Louis are planning to take part in a sale of potted dahlia plants next Saturday and Sunday for the purpose of financing a dahlia show that comes up later.

The sales is to be conducted from 9 to 5 p.m. at the home of the society's president, Charles S. DuChesne, 5457 North Kingshighway, and the home of Mrs. Ollie Hocken, a member, at 71010 Morganford road.

This year's show is to be at Shaw's Garden Sept. 29-30, and, also in the picture is the Midwest show to be held here next year.

Jerry Ludwig, public relations member of the society said last week that any time now through the first week of June, Dahlias can be set in permanent garden locations. Fertilizer or organic materials should be mixed with the soil in the hole dug for the plant, and that when the plant is placed it should be watered well.

Well drained soil and a sunny location are important, and the plants should be staked at the time of planting. Staking later will damage roots.

When plants are about a foot high (with four or five pairs of leaves) pinch out the top to start side growth, Ludwig advises, and make the plant grow bushy. Cultivate at least once a week. In mid-summer mulch helps hold moisture, keep ground cool and protect feeder roots.

D.D.T., chlordane and malathian can be used to fight most enemies of the plants such as leaf hoppers, thrips, aphis and red spider.

MADE BY BLASTS

Hardboards are made by exploding wood chips and then forming the fibers under high heat and pressure into strong, grainless panels.

your roses may be begging for help!
Know these signs of distress—
then give quick first aid treatment for all these insects and diseases with ORTHO Rose Dust—the easy to use, combination insecticide-fungicide.

APHIS attack and suck the very life out of new shoots and flower buds, attract ants and may even cause fungus growth. Lindane in ORTHO Rose Dust gives excellent control of this most common pest.

BLACK SPOT is a fungus disease spread by wind and rain. Bad infestation even causes leaf drop. The captan, ferbam and sulfur in the ORTHO Rose Dust control black spot.

JAPANESE BEETLES are vicious leaf chewers, but the DDT and lindane in ORTHO Rose Dust knock 'em out. Dust upper and lower leaf surfaces and on the soil around the plants.

POWDERY MILDEW is more easily prevented than cured. This disease turns leaves, buds and stems of plants a sickly, powdery gray. Experts recommend sulfur for powdery mildew.

ROSE SLUGS are small, green pests that look like caterpillars and chew all of the leaves but the veins. DDT controls these rose enemies.

ROSE RUST is generally revealed by yellowish or powdery pustules on undersides of leaves. Ferbam, in ORTHO Rose Dust, is the recommended control for rust.

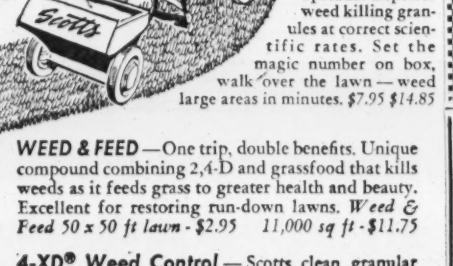

THRIPS, 1/8 of an inch long, puncture buds, causing them to become discolored and fail to open. DDT and lindane control these insects.

Controls these pests, too!

Bal Masque Gay Event at Art Museum

Exotic Italian Setting Provides Background for Fabulous Headdresses —1000 Guests Attend.

By Margaret Allen Ruhl

THE dignity of a palazzo in ancient Pompeii shortly after the birth of Christianity and the gaiety current in the streets of all Italian villages were subtly contrasted Friday night at the City Art Museum where 1000 dancers took part in the much-heralded Bal Masque Italien.

St. Louisans in their best ball gowns and fearful, wonderful and often beautiful face and head coverings began to arrive at 10 o'clock. A gilded obelisk towered on one head, a gondola complete with gondolier and passengers on another, the ruins of a miniature Pompeii on still another and so on to the severe, jewel-wound Renaissance Titian wig made by the Denver Museum and presented to Mrs. William T. Chafee. Mrs. Chafee, president of the Women's Association of Friends of the St. Louis Museum, kept her mask a secret until her arrival.

An orchestra in harlequin costume played near the entrance of dimly lighted Sculpture Hall and Leaning Towers of Pisa, made of silverflake paper and set in a base of flowers, centered each of dozens of supper tables. Debutantes distributed perfume; flowers were sold. The decorations in this room were largely confined to trees high on gray walls and ferns at the bases of statues thrown into spotlighted relief.

It was in the galleries on each side that the decorators, the Hyman Brothers and Adrian Delsman of Famous-Barr Co., which was co-sponsor with the Women's Association of the ball, concentrated their efforts.

The reception was given at the Raleigh home, 217 South Woodlawn avenue, Kirkwood, which was adorned with Easter lilies in Dresden vases, and spring flowers. A garden breakfast was planned with tables set on the lawn and decorated with swags of daisies and ivy.

The bride's mother wore a beige shantung dress, a toast colored hat and a corsage of green slipper orchids. Mrs. Niewoehner chose a navy blue dress and a matching hat beaded in white. Her flowers were white carnations.

The bride and bridegroom, after a wedding trip to Florida, will live at 7429 Lyndover place, Maplewood.

Miss Hamilton Becomes Bride Of T. F. George

(Photograph on Page 3I)

THE spring season was reflected in decorations and in gowns and bouquets of the bride's attendants for the wedding of Miss Jeannette Ann Hamilton and Thomas Francis George yesterday morning at St. Gabriel the Archangel Church. The bride, called Jeanne, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Lawrence Hamilton, 6517 Walsh street; Mr. George's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Francis L. George, 6210 Westminster place.

White spring blossoms adorned the candlelighted altar at each side of which were arrangements of woodwardia fern. The center aisle, down which Mr. George escorted his daughter, was illuminated with candles in tall wrought iron hurricane lamps garlanded with greenery and tied with white satin bows. The ceremony was performed by Msgr. Harry E. Stitz.

Miss Janet Moore was maid of honor and Miss Nancy Claire Cooke, Miss Susan Metzger, Miss Arden Rischbieter and Miss Mary Vassely were bridesmaids. They were in pale yellow silk organza dresses, the bodices overlaid with lace and studded at the necklines with tiny sequins. The bouffant skirts were terrace length. The young women wore wide-brimmed crownless hair braid hats to match their gowns, trimmed with streamers falling from bows. The honor attendant carried violets and yellow roses while the others had similar bouquets of violets.

The bride's white silk organza gown was made on princesse lines with a tucked yoke and short tucked sleeves. The full skirt, which cascaded into a train, was decorated with appliqued ribbon bow knots. A four-tier fingertip illusion veil was held in place by a lace crown outlined with seed pearls. The bride's bouquet was lilies of the valley centered with a cluster of white orchids.

Mr. George's cousin, John Edwin George, Fort Wayne, Ind., was best man. Ushers were the bride's brother, James L. Hamilton; John George, a brother of the bridegroom; George Heil, Thomas Joseph Tracy, Richard Moore and Robert Verhunce. Martin and Francis George, twin brothers of the bridegroom, served as acolytes at the nuptial mass.

The wedding reception was given by Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton in the Tower room of the Congress Hotel. The bridal table was decorated with white flowers and lighted with tapers in cherub candelabra. White blossoms and candles, in silver candelabra, ornamented the buffet table while bowls of white flowers were arranged on the tables at which guests were seated for breakfast.

Mrs. Hamilton wore a two-piece aqua blue silk linen costume with a matching hat and a white orchid corsage. Mrs. George was in a pearl gray linen sheath dress, a pale pink hat and a pink gardenia corsage.

After a wedding trip to Florida, Mr. George and his bride will live in Clayton.

Bal Masque Gay Event At City Art Museum

Satyr, who spouted wine last year, was back at his task in a lighted setting of greenery and flowers near the gallery entrance. Enormous stone urns led the way. The gallery might have been the Casa del Vettii in old Pompeii. Black columns reached from floor to ceiling at intervals around the room and between them murals, executed on black velvet with pastel chalk, depicted the Baccanale degli Amorini, a chariot race, and Venus Punishing Cupid, to name a few. Wrought iron panels pointed the way to a green garden espaliered on the far wall.

It was in the gallery to the right of Sculpture Hall, however, that the guests really had fun. Entering into the spirit of the street scene they ate apples from carts which, with tall red rose trees, delineated a circular dance floor. They visualized people living in the brightly colored buildings, some with awnings, some with peaked roofs, which towered upward from the walls, and laughed at the family laundry hung on clothes lines from windows. A monkey and an organ grinder added even more realism to the scene.

As the museum became warm, guests swarmed on the terrace which was open for the first time. They danced on the railings to music by an Italian orchestra. They sang and finally, after the mask judging was over, they served themselves from three long buffet tables in Sculpture Hall and many had their supper, including pizza and antipasto, in the cool air.

There were flower masks and fruit masks, and wimples, fruit carts and even paintings for headdresses. The collection worn by guests selected as possible prize winners was formidable. Given a card at the door they assembled in a small gallery at 11:30 while three masked judges officiated.

At midnight a glittering Venus de Milo towering above the head of Mrs. Stuart Baker and a flashing blue and green peacock, its fan tail spread wide, worn by Mrs. Charles Krause Jr., of Milwaukee, reigned as winners. Mrs. Baker was given a certificate entitling her to a portrait by Charles F. Galt, and Mrs. Krause, a painting by Aimee Schweig.

The two grand prizes were awarded by Charles Nagel, museum director, from a platform near the entrance. Smaller gifts from the Italian government were distributed to those given honorable mention, by Roberto de Cardona, Italian Consul in St. Louis. Notable in this group was Mrs. Harry Hemingway of Lake Forest, Ill., who carried on her head a basket weighing not less than ten pounds, containing a complete Italian dinner (a real one) to serve two persons. Spaghetti with tomato sauce in a center casserole was surrounded by a complete set of silver condiment jars, all filled, celery, green onions and carrot sticks and a salad, with the necessary table silver wired to the handle. Mrs. Hemingway and Mrs. Krause, with their husbands, came to St. Louis for the ball as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Russell E. Lortz.

Mr. and Mrs. George K. Hoblitzelle won honorable mention for their enveloping headdresses depicting portraits by fifteenth century Italian artists. Mrs. Hoblitzelle's, The Portrait of a Lady, by Uccello, was superimposed stiffened gold card board jeweled in pearls, which reached her shoulders; her husband's, on black velvet of equal length, was the Portrait of a Young Man by Da Messina.

Mrs. Otto Erker carried a lovely silver bird cage on her head; Miss Vita Viviano a carousel, 18 inches tall and fringed with gold, which she called a Carnivale. Her escort, Robert Deppe, balanced Chianti wine bottles and grapes.

Small batteries illuminated the "Fontana del Bachino," a green hedge surmounted by a figurine, worn by Miss Anne Bazan. Joseph J. Hayes Jr., who escorted her, combined the colors of the Italian flag in his face mask.

A wired black net gondola with black bird of paradise forming the bow and stern, was worn by Mrs. de Cardona, whose gown was a sheath of exquisite tan Italian brocade.

The success of the party reflects credit on the committee headed by its capable chairman, Mrs. Henry Belz; to the museum staff, which had the task of moving countless paintings and art objects to make room for party appointments and to the caterers and decorators.

Some of the masks were created by their owners, many were done by Washington University students and by Tom Blazier, talented artist. Whatever their origin, at 3 o'clock this morning some of their owners had gone home, leaving their masks behind them. On the table near the door lay a limp, harmless octopus.

Literature Groups to Meet.

The Afternoon literature group, American Association of University Women, St. Louis branch, will meet Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Glenn V. Burroughs, 548 Chambers road. Mrs. David J. Beaver will lead the discussion on the Arab-Israeli situation. The Southside literature group, A.A.U.W., will meet at the home of Mrs. J. H. Leas, 22 Redwood, Florissant, Wednesday night, May 23, at 8 o'clock to discuss the book "After You, Marco Polo," by Jean Shar. Mrs. I. Orval Eagle will be leader.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

Resort, Hotel and Travel Directory

THREE CAPITOLS

Little Rock claims the distinction of being the only capital city with three capitol buildings. The present domed statehouse is of classic design, supplemented by a series of modern office buildings.

The former state capitol building, one of the finest examples of antebellum architecture in the South, has recently been restored and designated as Arkansas Museum of History.

Ste. Genevieve.

Ste. Genevieve, oldest permanent settlement in Missouri, is full of historical importance, old homes and fascinating places to visit.

Right Here in Missouri

— Massie—Missouri Resources Div.

No, this isn't a European festival—it is a scene in our own state as residents of historic Hermann celebrate their annual Maifest, scheduled for May 19-20. The town was founded by German immigrants, and today's townsfolk strive to maintain the flavor of the past.

COLLEGE OF IDAHO TO HOLD CLASSES AT SUN VALLEY

An experiment in combining education and vacation will be made at Sun Valley this summer.

The College of Idaho, Caldwell, Idaho, noted in the West for its scholastic standing, will move a special summer session to the beautiful upland vacation valley, where the cool summer climate assures a temperature conducive to study. Fully accredited college courses in contemporary studies will be given by faculty members and guest instructors from July 2 to Aug. 10.

Since the myth has long since been exploded that the average American finds study either a bore or a chore, the summer school should add one more attraction to vacation time at the Union Pacific resort.

Students in search of college credits—or in some cases advanced undergraduate credits—will have to sacrifice no part of a summer's pleasure to get them. The trip itself into a frontier region at the gateway of Idaho's vast primitive area will be broadening experience for students from the big cities of the East and Midwest.

The sports facilities for which Sun Valley is famous will, of course, be available to students on the same basis as to other guests.

Full information concerning courses and credits may be obtained from the Summer Session Director, College of Idaho, Caldwell, Idaho.

FRENCHMAN'S COVE

Frenchman's Cove, Jamaica's resident colony which has become the unofficial headquarters for visiting best-selling novelists, famous artists, and theatrical producers, has a natural charm which is typically Jamaican and yet uniquely its own.

The beaches are superb, with long stretches of white sand, avenues of coconut palms, and forests of giant cottonwood trees overgrown with brilliant flowering vines. Nearby is the strange and fascinating Blue Hole, whose depths have yet to be plumbed, and whose waters glow with a deep iridescent cobalt blue.

Historic Spots, Scenery, Arts In New England

Mountains, valleys and farmlands, resorts, beaches and rocky coasts—all combine with picturesque fishing ports, historic villages and cities to make New England a popular area during the summer and early autumn months with vacationers from the St. Louis area.

The 1956 vacation season into New England will run deepest from Memorial Day to Labor Day, as always, though the tendency nowadays is to push the late season into October.

This post-Labor day lengthening of the New England season shows up most strongly in "sightseeing vacation travel," according to an analysis released by Cook's Travel Service, with particular reference to trips by motor coach from New York.

Vacation travel to beaches, lakes and camps will slow down to a trickle this year after Labor day, as usual, the analysis shows, due obviously to the flight of the sun southward. On the other hand, leaves turning red, brown and yellow will attract a reduced number of "sightseeing vacationers" well into October.

Historic Spots.

Biggest "sightseeing" demand throughout the 1956 season, the analysis indicates, will be for trips that take in such places as historic Concord, Lexington, Salem, Plymouth Rock; the old whaling area of Cape Cod and the offshore islands of Nantucket and Martha's Vineyard; Boston, the fishing ports of Marblehead, Gloucester, and many others along the "rocky coast of Maine."

For beautiful mountains and valleys there are such spots as Crawford Notch, Franconia Notch, Glens Falls, Sherburne Pass, Cranmore Mountain and a legion of others.

Scenes closely connected with America's birth as a nation will attract visitors literally from all over the country. A thrilling example, now sleeping peacefully at her dock in Boston, is that grand old lady of the sea, U.S.S. Constitution, known to the men who trod her decks under fire as "Old Ironsides."

Also in Boston is historic Old North Church, where lanterns were hung in 1775—"one if by land and two if by sea" — as recorded for posterity by Longfellow in his "Midnight Ride of Paul Revere."

Nantucket, Martha's Vineyard.

Sailing out to Nantucket and Martha's Vineyard brings the sightseer into a world overshadowed by the old homes of forgotten whaling captains. On shore, at Cape Cod, is the artists' paradise of Provincetown, where the Pilgrim Fathers first set foot in an Indian world before moving across the bay to Plymouth Rock. This whole area is a magnet for the seeker after ship models, antique sea chests and hooked rugs.

In the "witchcraft city" of Salem, sightseeing vacationers can see Hawthorne's famous House of Seven Gables. Elsewhere in this area is the home of Louisa May Alcott, creator of "Little Women," and the original home of presidents John Adams and John Quincy Adams. These offer a remarkable picture of life in the bygone days of candle-lit chandeliers and Colonial staircases.

GLACIER PARK

Glacier National Park in northern Montana is a 1583 square-mile national park comprising some of the finest mountain scenery, beautiful lakes, water falls, glaciers and forests, on the American continent.

It is the hub of northwest vacation land since tourists may combine Glacier Park with excursions westward to the Pacific Northwest and California, northward to the Canadian Rockies, Banff, Lake Louise, Columbia Ice Field or Jasper Park, or southward to Yellowstone Park, the Colorado Rockies, or include a leisurely dude ranch vacation.

Report on Developments In State Park System

Attendance at Country's Park System Has Jumped Over 40 Percent Since 1952; Great Interest in Camping.

This summer, even more than last, America's state park systems will be bursting at their seams. Reports from all states to the National Association of Travel Organizations indicate that camping sites especially are going to be scarce.

The increased popularity of camping is one of the vacation phenomena of the mid-twentieth century, says the association, which speaks for the whole U.S. travel industry. Tent and trailer camping in state parks grew 60 per cent in popularity from 1952 to 1954. Preliminary reports indicate there were an additional 15 per cent camping in the state parks during 1955.

The United States has more than 2000 state parks, ranging from small picnic areas to tremendous acreages with million-dollar lodges and complete resort facilities. Arizona now is the only state in the 48 without some sort of state park system. Its legislature is considering a plan drafted by the Arizona Development Board.

Attendance at the park system has jumped more than 40 per cent since 1952, and should be more than 180,000,000 in 1956.

Many states are drafting five and 10-year plans to provide for orderly expansion at least equal to the population growth, according to the National Conference on State Parks.

Recent trends in the parks:

(1) To issue revenue bonds for major improvements.

(2) To develop more parks of historical interest.

(3) To use prison labor on parks.

(4) To provide more and better roadside rest and picnic facilities.

Probably the most widely followed precept for those who operate state parks was given by Richard Lieber, Indiana park pioneer: "State parks are meant to be the show-windows of a state but, more than that, state parks are a dedication to the soul of the land . . . without vision, a land will die."

Here is a list of 1956 park developments in states of particular interest to those in this area.

Arkansas: This will be the first season for Bull Shoals Park in the Ozark playgrounds area. An extensive improved area borders the lake above Bull Shoals dam and White River below it. Devil's Den Park, near Winslow, has a new blacktop access highway.

Illinois: Seven state-owned lake areas were taken under the wing of the Division of Parks and Memorials. Historic Galena's Old Market House and the U.S. Grant home there are undergoing restoration. Ft. Massac, first acquired as a state park in 1903, has an additional 350 acres for picnicking and camping. Dixon Springs' swimming pool and bathouse is being completed, along with a new sewage and water system. Major improvements have been made to lodges and guest cabins at Giant City, Pere Marquette, Starved Rock and White Pines Forest.

Indiana: The Abe Lincoln Chapel in the Nancy Hanks Lincoln Memorial, Lincoln City, has a new electric organ. A new youth camp is being completed in Lincoln Park, adjacent to the memorial. The state appropriated $10,000 toward restoring the Wilbur Wright birthplace, near Millville. Plans are being made to raise $100,000 to erect a 60-foot Indiana limestone commemorative shaft there.

Iowa: Two new parks—Green Valley, at Creston, and Rock Creek, near Kellogg have been provided with access roads. It's hoped swimming beaches will be ready at both by midsummer. Overflow crowds at all parks have stimulated expansion of picnic and camping areas. The coming season will see 500 new picnic tables and 200 new fireplaces. Clearing operations are under way for a dam and lake at a new Montgomery County Park area. Completion, however, is not expected for at least a year. Use of prison labor in the state's 88 parks and recreational areas has been authorized.

Kentucky: The Breaks Interstate Park, owned and operated jointly by Kentucky and Virginia and called "The Grand Canyon of the South," is undergoing improvements—steps and clearances to provide more view for vacationers. Greenbo Park, near Ashland has a 250-acre lake completed. Several park lodges have been air conditioned. A revenue bond program provides for lodges and at least 25 cottages in all major parks.

Michigan: This motor state has launched an $800,000-a-year, five-year expansion program to expand further facilities in its 58 park and recreation area system. Present concentration is at Sterling, on Lake Erie; Yankee Springs, near Hastings, and Warren Dunes on

MAY DELIGHTFUL IN FT. LAUDERDALE

The steady summer influx of vacationers will not start until after the last school bells ring in June, but Fort Lauderdale already is entertaining many tourists without children in quest of sunshine and holiday luxury at post-winter bargain rates.

While prices have taken a sharp dip from March peaks, this resort city in the heart of the sub-tropics has lost none of its vacation charm. Many of the winter attractions continue, new seasonal entertainment is being added and as always outdoor sports opportunities are unlimited.

May is one of the most delightful months of the year. The temperature averages 77.3 degrees. There is little rainfall and nights, as well as the days, are just right for complete comfort.

Fringing the Atlantic, Fort Lauderdale is fanned around-the-clock by the southerly trade winds. Even in mid-afternoon when the sun exerts its most power, nature's air conditioning brings cooling breezes that chase any signs of discomfort.

It follows naturally that informality of dress prevails in spring and summer. Sports clothes are the thing for adults and youngsters alike.

TAMPA'S TARPON FISHING CONTEST STARTS JUNE 16

The ninth annual Tampa Tarpon Tournament, one of the richest and largest fishing meets in American waters, has been scheduled for June 16 through Aug. 12, 1956, by the sponsoring Tampa Anglers Association.

Derby day, a final day-long fish-off for the grand prize of a new automobile, is set for Aug. 19.

Prizes worth more than $10,000 will be awarded to contest winners of daily, weekly and numerous other divisions. Special awards and jackpots are expected to attract additional fishermen.

Those eligible to participate in Derby day competition are the eight weekly winners, the winner of the casting rod division, winners of the ladies' and men's out-of-state divisions and the winner of the ladies' open division.

As in all previous eight years, Derby day competitors from out-of-state will be flown to Tampa for the day's fishing. While in Tampa, they will be provided hotel accommodations and be flown back home without charge.

The Tampa Anglers Association is a non-profit organization sponsored by the Greater Tampa Chamber of Commerce and Tampa merchants.

AQUATIC-MINDED VISITORS HAPPY AT PENSACOLA BEACH

Water-skiing, sail boat and catamaran sailing, power-boating (from outboards to luxury yachts!, fishing from the beaches, piers, or boats, plus swimming and surf-bathing, all are available to the water-lover at Pensacola Beach, Fla.

The aquatic-minded vacationer can have any or all of these in whatever proportion appeals to him within a handy distance of his vacation headquarters in a motel, apartment or beach villa at the virgin tropical island resort now being developed by the Santa Rosa Island Authority.

In the Gulf of Mexico there's surf-bathing, surf-casting, deep-sea trolling, and on calm days, some daring water-skiers. But devotees of this enchanting new sport usually prefer the quieter waters of Santa Rosa Sound, as do the serious swimmers, the small-fry swimmers and the boating enthusiasts. The resort's fishing piers extend into Santa Rosa Sound.

If it's salt water the vacationer wants, and the necessary equipment to enjoy it, he can find it at Santa Rosa Island. There are miles of dazzling white sand beaches in both the Gulf and the Sound, and the clear, sparkling blue water turns to emerald green over the shallow portions of the gently shelving beaches.

Spanish Gallantry.

American women visiting Spain are often surprised to hear men on the street murmur something to them as they pass. They need have no fears—it's only the traditional "piropo," a polite and extremely well-bred compliment to beauty that needs no answer or even recognition. Occasionally, instead of being spoken, it is sung or hummed as part of a love song.

Take Your Choice at Tallahassee

Fishing, swimming or sun bathing—the choice is yours at the lakes surrounding Tallahassee, Fla.

RAPID GROWTH

With more accommodations in proportion to its area today than probably any other resort in the world, Miami Beach had not a single hotel at the turn of the century.

Outstanding structures here then were a Western Union a United States Maritime Service wire maintenance building and ice House of Refuge for shipwrecked mariners.

southern Lake Michigan. The state reports attendance has jumped from 5,000,000 in 1945 to 17,850,000 in 1955 and would-be campers have been turned away.

Missouri: Lake of the Ozarks has a beach area complete with new bathhouse. Other bathhouses have gone up at Thousand Hills, Big Spring and Alley Spring. There are new recreation buildings or other major improvements at Knob Noster, Roaring River, Crowder and Camp Grand River. A brand new 2400-acre park on the East Fork of Black river, now known as Johnson Shut-Ins, will be developed. There also will be a new state park at Table Rock Dam on White river.

Minnesota: Campgrounds at Lake Bemidji, Lake Carlos and McCarthy Beach all will have new facilities—buildings containing toilets, showers and laundry facilities. Mound Springs will have its first authorized bathing beach. Jay Cooke will have new camp grounds. Itasca's Lodge has a new annex.

Mississippi: Two brand new parks on the big Grenada Reservoir, both with fishing, swimming and boating facilities. They are Carver Point (for Negroes) and Hugh White. Clarke has new lights permitting night speedboating and swimming. There's a new lodge at Spring Lake and continued development of Sardis Lake.

Tennessee: Shelby Forest Park will have a new 146-acre lake and a $50,000 restaurant. Montgomery Bell will add 100 seats to its dining hall. New swimming pools will be open at Booker T. Washington (Negro) and Harrison Bay, both near Chattanooga. At T. O. Fuller (Negro), near Memphis, Chickasaw Indian burial grounds are being excavated.

Wisconsin: Like many other states, Wisconsin is concentrating on meeting the demand for family camping sites. Besides that, there will be a new dam this summer at Pattison Park to improve the lake for swimming. Devil's Lake will have a new shelter building.

At Possum Trot Farm

Work, Visitors and Fishing on Weekend

By Leonard Hall

THERE'S no place like the country for a quiet and restful weekend after a week of honest toil. Saturday morning we were up extra early to get a bit of gardening done before taking off for Ironton and the monthly meeting of the County Extension Council. For one reason and another, our potatoes weren't planted, except for a healthy looking row of volunteers which came up where we dug last year's crop and evidently missed a small spud or two in nearly every hill. At any rate, the chores were out of the way by 7:30—Betsy milked, the calves taken care of, the young bulls fed and Daisy and Ribbon treated to their small ration of oats which they hardly need, now that the grass is growing.

"A MIGHTY FORTRESS IS OUR GOD . . ."

After that, Matt and I sliced up the seed potatoes; only a few pounds each of Cobblers and Red Triumphs which produce enough to last us through the winter. Then the rows were laid off, the seed dropped—each piece with at least two eyes for sprouting—and the rows covered. Then we watered the tomatoes which we'd just finished setting out by dark on Friday night and looked over the rest of the garden which, now that the weather has warmed up, is starting to grow. Peas, lettuce, radishes, beets, spinach, onions—these are making a good show and it won't be long before the rest are up. By 9:30 we were off to town and our meeting and the weekend round of shopping and home by 1 o'clock, ready to relax for an hour before more gardening.

At 2 o'clock came Bill Daniels who heads the Cub Scouts over at Farmington and from the back of his car unloaded a dozen assorted bird houses, all nicely made to specifications for wrens, bluebirds, chickadees, titmice and any other songster looking for a home. The manufacture of the bird houses had been a father-and-son project, done as a good will gesture toward Possum Trot Farm, which certainly warmed our hearts.

Just as the Daniels were leaving, I happened to look over to the highway, a half mile off, and glimpsed three huge Greyhound busses heading north. I commented that it was a day for getting out to see the Ozark countryside; by which time a roar and a cloud of dust up the lane announced that the convoy was headed our way. And just in time I recalled that Rev. George C. Stohlman, principal of Hope Evangelical Lutheran School in St. Louis had promised to stop by with some of the youngsters who'd been out on an overnight trip to Big Spring State Park at Van Buren and other points of interest in the Ozarks. Before we knew it, 91 of them and their teachers were assembled on the front lawn under the shade of the maples. Mike and Tiger were for once getting all the petting they could handle and I was answering as many questions as I could about the farm, our animals, the songbirds and other country matters.

● THIS WAS as attractive a group of youngsters as one could find anywhere. The first thing which impressed us was that, after their strenuous weekend they were still having a good time. Their questions were intelligent, they were well-mannered and no one seemed interested in showing off. And when our visit was ended they treated us to some really excellent choral singing under the direction of their choirmaster—their second song at my request, the great sixteenth century classic of the Lutheran Church, "A Mighty Fortress":

A mighty fortress is our God,
A bulwark never failing;
Our Helper He, amid the flood,
Of mortal ills prevailing.

After that, when the big busses had pulled off up the highway—and the hymn still running through my mind—it was chore-time again. Then supper and a couple of hours at work on an article which should solve the farm problem; and next thing I knew, the clock was striking eleven.

As for Sunday, it was busier. We'd lost so much of Friday and Saturday that we were up extra early and while the waffles were cooking and we were stirring around the kitchen we listened to our friend Rabbi Isserman, to the Methodist Bishop of India, to an early mass and an Episcopal service. Then the milking and feeding. Then curry and saddle the mares for a round of the farm; the old girls feeling good and minding their manners despite this being our first time in the saddle for several months.

● ALONG ABOUT NOON, with the day warm and sunny despite cloud banks in the west, the urge to go fishing became too strong to resist. So the fly rod was rigged up and I headed for the creek; not so much in hope of catching fish as for the pleasure of dropping the lure into well-remembered spots beneath old logs and at the foot of each riffle. The long drouth just about ended the fishing on Saline Creek, for we had four seasons when almost no young fry survived the summer and the older fish were pretty well caught out. There proved to be a few lusty green perch left, however, and it wasn't long before a brace of these were reposing on a bed of watercress in my creel.

That left an hour for a bit more gardening and helping Ginnie with her flower beds. Then chore-time again—and supper—and the faithful typewriter waiting. Thus a restful, and a fairly typical, spring weekend at Possum Trot Farm.

IN CONNECTION WITH THE COMMEMORATION OF "ANDERSONVILLE WEEK," MAY 6-13, PROCLAIMED NATIONALLY BY THE AMERICAN EX-PRISONERS OF WAR, INC., ARTIST JOHN GROTH WAS COMMISSIONED TO DO THIS DRAWING OF THE LAST DAYS OF ANDERSONVILLE PRISON, GEORGIA. IT WAS DURING THIS WEEK, 91 YEARS AGO, THAT THE LAST DISABLED PRISONERS WERE TAKEN OUT OF ANDERSONVILLE.

'BIG A' AND ITS AUTHOR

MacKinlay Kantor, Writer of Pulitzer Prize-Winning Novel, Preoccupied With Subject From Time He Was Boy

By Thomas B. Sherman
Book Editor of the Post-Dispatch

THE AMERICAN NOVEL that was awarded the Pulitzer Prize last Monday is known to the public as "Andersonville," but its author, MacKinlay Kantor, now calls it "Big A." This term is convenient and affectionate but it also refers quite obviously to a top-ranking object of impressive magnitude and for the best of reasons.

Everything about it is outsized. It is about three times as long as the average novel. It has sold more than 300,000 copies, being both a best-seller in the book shops and a Book-of-the-Month Club selection. It has been purchased by Columbia Pictures for $250,000, and will be made into a four-hour film play. And for the author it represents the preoccupation of a life-time, 25 years of research and two years of writing.

The fact that "Andersonville" will be turned into a movie is but the natural result of the novel's widespread popularity but in this connection it is worth noting that Kantor has made no obvious bid for mass support. This story of an infamous Civil War military prison is unsparing in its array of sordid details. Moreover, it moves slowly, has no plot, no hero, and no strong romantic interest. Nevertheless, it is a commanding book and the public has found it a fascinating one.

Coupled with this it has provoked the strongest critical approval. The Pulitzer award confirmed the opinions of the newspaper and magazine press. The favorable verdict, in short, is virtually unanimous.

THOUGH Kantor has not compared Andersonville to Buchenwald and sees no exact parallel between wanton neglect at the Confederate prison and the deliberate savagery of the Nazi gas chambers, it was at Buchenwald that he decided to write his novel. He had been flying with the American Air Force as a combat correspondent and reached the German concentration camp shortly after it had been taken over by the advancing Allies. In trying to imagine what the victims must have felt, his thoughts turned quite naturally to the plight of war prisoners and the victims of war in general.

"Then I knew how to write Andersonville," he says.

He got around to it in 1953. By arrangement with the World Publishing Co., he was assured the necessary income to keep him going for whatever time he needed to finish the job. By that time Kantor had published 30 books, including "The Voice of Bugle Ann," a story of fox hunting in the Missouri hills. By that time, too, he was full to the brim of his subject. He had read 85 books on Andersonville, had visited the Andersonville cemetery by day and by night, had talked with the relatives of several prisoners and the only surviving granddaughter of Henry Wirtz, the hated superintendent of the prison.

In a sense, though, the inquiry into the subject began when he was a small boy in Webster City, Ia. Two survivors of Andersonville—"Uncle" Andrew Bryan and "Uncle" Moses Bone—were members of his own family on the MacKinlay side. As he listened to their sometimes bitter and always vivid recollections of the prison, the fighting and the long marches, his imagination was fired as by no other subject, in or out of books.

"Sometimes," he said long afterward, "the war would seem more real to me than the school I went to. I'd play at battles and come staggering up the road as if I had been shot. 'I see you got wounded pretty bad this morning,' a neighbor would say. 'Where did it happen this time, at Shiloh or Gettysburg?'"

The war was just as real to him 40 years later when he started writing "Andersonville" at Terremolinos, near Malaga in Spain. By then his permanent residence was at Sarasota, Fla., but that wasn't a good place for a man to withdraw from the world, especially a gregarious man who loved to picnic on the beach with his friends, sing ballads in chorus or play a special kind of poker at the Beach Club with the serial numbers of dollar bills.

SO Kantor and his wife, Irene, settled in Spain for the duration, though he couldn't really settle anywhere when the stream of words stopped flowing. At such times the voice of a servant or the thudding of a burro's hooves outside would start his nerves jumping. He would get into a car, make for the hills, set up his typewriter and portable chair and start in again. Before he had finished "Big A," however, he had traveled much farther—to France, Germany and Denmark, among other places—and in each locale one or more chapters was added.

In thinking back over his years as a writer and the special conditions that made his "Andersonville" the panoramic and thickly populated novel that it is, Kantor concludes that his early small-town life in Webster City was as much responsible for its special qualities as his Civil War lore. It gave him a knowledge of humanity in depth. You really learn to know people in a small town.

He was born in Webster City in 1904. His father was a Jewish business man who walked out on his family while MacKinlay was a child. His mother Effie (born MacKinlay) divorced Kantor and took over the burden of supporting the family—herself, MacKinlay and his sister. It was hard going. She washed and ironed clothes for her friends until she got a job on the local newspaper as a kind of social and civic editor. Her wages on the Webster City Freeman-Tribune were almost adequate.

SINCE "almost" meant "not quite," MacKinlay started work on a newspaper route when he was 8 years old. His first literary effort—a poem—was contributed to the paper he delivered and he subsequently became a reporter on the same paper.

In the early years, MacKinlay—now well set-up and rangy—was a skinny boy and looked like an easy mark to the hulking farm lads who came into town. He lost many a battle, but he apparently didn't lose any friends. For, as a book of childhood reminiscences plainly reveals, he began to cultivate people quite early. Everybody he got to know became permanently lodged in the capacious storehouse of his mind with all their virtues, frailties, eccentricities and associations intact.

Some of them served as models for the characters in "Big A." For instance, "Uncle" Moses Bone, the fife player, survives partly in the character of Merriwether Kinsman, an Iowa boy who loses his fife in the prison and no longer cares to live.

KANTOR moved to Chicago as a young man and worked from then on in many places as a reporter, advertising copy writer, poet, magazine contributor, novelist and war correspondent. He married in Chicago, has two children, a daughter, Layne, now married and living in Scarsdale, N.Y., and a son, Thomas, who is in the Air Force.

His first successful novel was "Long Remember," a war story centered around the Battle of Gettysburg. "The Voice of Bugle Ann" took him to Hollywood, where another novel called "Glory for Me"—written in blank verse—was subsequently made into the film "The Best Years of Our Lives," and received 13 different Academy awards.

Between times in his active and scattered life, he has hunted butterflies, explored caves and battlefields, studied the life of the mushroom and learned the fife in order to play such stirring tunes as "Hell on the Wabash" and the "Recruiting Sergeant." He is the only author who is a member in good standing of the National Association of Civil War Musicians.

Generally speaking, a historical novelist plays fast and loose with the facts, according to the artistic needs of his story, but "Andersonville" is distinctive, if not unique, in this respect. Its historical framework is firmly set and never violated. So the strongest and most overwhelming impression left by this narrative—that Andersonville prison summed up the past and forecast the future by representing in full range the degradation and human wastage of war—is both an historical and artistic truth.

The prison was located near Americus, Sumter county, in the southwest quarter of Georgia. Here, in 1864, a rude stockade was thrown up by the Confederate Government to take care of Union war prisoners who had become too numerous for the makeshift enclosures of Virginia, North Carolina and other points controlled by the Confederate armies. Its original 16 acres was increased to 26 before the war was over, but more than 30,000 prisoners were confined in this space by that time.

—Look Magazine Photograph.

THE AUTHOR INSPECTING GRAVES OF SOME OF THOSE WHO DIED AT ANDERSONVILLE.

There was hardly room enough for everybody to lie down. No shelter was provided, and no sanitary facilities. Scanty rations were issued raw for the most part. In consequence of exposure to sun and cold, poor food, and lack of medical care, 13,000 prisoners died in Andersonville, more than were killed on the Union side at Chickamauga, Bull Run, Antietam and Gettysburg combined.

ANDERSONVILLE is now a United States military cemetery and a national monument. Present-day residents of Sumter county know little of Andersonville's ugly history; it is not one of the oft-repeated tales of the countryside. Those that do know it, point to the fact that the South was in a state of siege at that time and suffering from a general depletion of resources and a breakdown of communications. If prisoners of war were half-starved, they say, so were the Confederate soldiers and many civilians.

Kantor's story of Andersonville is not unsympathetic to this view. He makes it quite clear that it was practically impossible to get adequate supplies at any time, and that it was not his intention to indict the Southern people.

The compassion that he extends to the inmates of the stockade affects his treatment of many principal characters—all Southerners—who live nearby or who are involved, in one way or another, with the unfolding tragedy. There is Ira Chaffey, a planter of sensibility, who foresees with a sinking heart what is bound to happen. Then there are the surgeon, Harrell Elkins, striving vainly to organize a minimum medical service; Lt. Col. Persons, whose military honor and genuine humanity are affronted by the shambles inside the walls, and many others.

But even though Andersonville soon becomes a plague spot of such festering virulence that no man can control it, it does have its evil genius. This is Capt. Wirtz, an insecure, vain and nervous personality whose conception of soldierly administration is influenced strongly by his German birth and knowledge of the Prussian military code. And behind him is the malevolent General John Winder, the man responsible for the establishment of Andersonville prison and the appointment of Wirtz as prison superintendent.

When interviewing Wirtz at Richmond Winder asks: "Do you hate Yankees?"

Wirtz says "yes" with conviction. His wounded arm, the consequence of a brief period of combat service, pains him constantly and makes the whole Union army his personal enemy. So at Andersonville he is preoccupied more with the punishment of offenders than with the preservation of the military tradition affecting the custodianship of war prisoners.

HIS fear of the prisoners amounts almost to hysteria and penalties imposed for "misbehavior" reflect this state of mind. Prisoners who complain about poor food are deprived of all food for 24 hours; men are thrown into stocks, spread-eagled against rudely contrived crosses, or weighted down with chains for any misdemeanor that seems directed against Wirtz or his authority. And anyone who crosses the "deadline"—a line drawn within the enclosure itself—is shot down by the guards on the wall.

Complete anarchy prevails inside the prison community itself. As no internal order is enforced, the weak, the sick, the dying and the merely timid are systematically robbed, beaten, maimed and even killed by the criminal thugs who take charge. Only the "regulators," a handful of resolute men, such as Seneca McBean and the philosophical but proud-spirited Nathan Dreyfoos, offer any resistance to this rule of the jungle. And it is only through them that a semblance of law—that Wirtz cannot or will not preserve—is restored.

Kantor leaves no doubt in the reader's mind that Andersonville places its special stamp of corruption on all but a few. And though it is the mass picture that stands out, a feeling for what each individual must have suffered is communicated through a long series of individual portraits, each complete in its description of background and traits of personality.

Many of these sketches have the force and vividness of full-length stories, with tension, suspense and climax. Such is the story of the boy who loves birds, but finally captures a prison swallow and eats it raw to keep himself alive; or of Willy Collins, the New York desperado, who sets up a little kingdom and a reign of terror among the dying and the dead.

The effect, then, of "Andersonville" is like that of some mammoth painting. Each of its multiple details has a life of its own, complete in design and color and recognizably human in the emotions it portrays. But as the lines and colors merge, a monstrous image appears, the composite image of the many thousands who have been drained of their humanity.

KANTOR was in Paris, conferring with a representative of Columbia Pictures, when news of the Pulitzer award reached him. As it happened this announcement coincided with the ninety-first anniversary of the release of the last prisoner from Andersonville. So "Big A" was still with him but as a mission completed. With the hardest task of his career behind him he could relax though it didn't seem likely that he would ever forget how hard it was.

As the result of an automobile accident Kantor was disqualified for military service, but as a war correspondent he flew more than 50 missions in Europe and Korea and was decorated by the United States Government. A little earlier he had worked with the New York police department, following the gruelling rounds of a patrolman on a 4-to-12 tour of duty.

"My fellows in these tasks," he recalls, "were generally half my age and even they got tired. . . . I still say that the writing of 'Andersonville' was the most exhausting experience of my life."

'Living It Up'

In Moscow---Night Out on the Town

By Ernie Hill

Chicago Daily News-St. Louis Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch. Copyright 1956.

MOSCOW, May 12.

A RUSSIAN newspaper man who spent 25 years in exile in Paris said he would show me Moscow night life. He said we must be at Neva restaurant at 6 o'clock sharp because he had a table reserved and it was a popular spot.

He was once a captain in the Czar's regiment. But he is now one of 30,000 White Russians who has embraced Communism and returned home.

He brought along his Russian girl friend who spoke no known language and so added little to the festivities and a White Russian woman from Paris days. With my wife that made five.

Dinner at Neva restaurant lasted for four hours and I had a good beefsteak smothered with mushrooms and good Georgian wine to wash it down.

The others had mixed grill or cold suckling pig with sour cream. Three bottles of vodka were consumed. We clinked glasses every few minutes to toast ourselves, our friends and a long life.

The restaurant was crowded with Russians or varying description including some of Moscow's young playboys now increasing.

At some point Neva restaurant was described as "upper middle class." When I asked what Karl Marx would say if he heard that, the description was amended to "middle income" restaurant.

● AT 10 O'CLOCK my host apologized for cutting the dinner short and said we must hurry on to Praga night club where we would have dessert and coffee and perhaps some champagne. As we left he said he remembered the Neva restaurant from Czarist days when it had a sign prohibiting admission to soldiers and dogs.

The Praga night club remains the greatest shock I have yet experienced in the Soviet Union.

It is the most lavish night spot I have seen since the roulette-supported palaces of fun in the palmiest days in Rio de Janeiro.

Praga has four floors. The dance orchestra is on the first and the music is piped up to the other three. The motif is Spanish with balconies, wrought-iron fixtures and large fountains spraying water into the air. It was jammed with at least 500 Russians living it up. They were rather badly dressed. The dancing was tremendously enthusiastic.

The orchestra played "On the Sunny Side of the Street" and I was reminded of the last time I saw Ted Lewis in Chicago during the Democratic convention of 1936. The music was about one-third American with some Latin-American numbers thrown in, including a few sambas of Brazilian flavor.

● WE ATE large wads of ice cream, drank black coffee and then went on to champagne. The champagne was something like $12 a bottle and some tables had three or four. I asked my host who these people were who could afford such luxuries in this "workers' paradise" where everyone was supposed to produce according to his abilities and be rewarded according to his needs.

A few, he said, were Army officers. Others were writers like himself or artists or musicians who are among the best-paid people in Russia.

"That fellow over there," he said pointing to a rough-looking individual, "is undoubtedly a coal miner. They get paid almost more than anybody because their work is so unpleasant."

Dancing and drinking went on to about 1 o'clock and the entire evening set back the host something like $100. That is what it would have cost me. But because of the fictitious ruble exchange it cost him much less in terms of what the money buys. To him the cost was about $25 which was cheap enough but still a shock to the visitor. One group in the corner was now singing, "When They Begin the Beguine."

● MY HOST explained to me that the present government was allowing other night clubs to be built on the theory that the population needed an outlet for fun and games after years of rationing and hard living.

Horse racing was started last year and will run during the summer months. There also is trotting racing. The Russians have founded a national stud farm and are experimenting with crossing Tibetan horses of tremendous stamina with pure Arabs.

At the front door a quarrelsome drunk was trying to get into his overcoat. He wanted to fight but people held him back.

For a few hours I had forgotten I was in Russia. It might have been Argentina, Italy or even Mars.

Try and Stop Me

By Bennett Cerf

JIM BARNES recalls a day when J. P. Morgan had to interrupt an Adirondack vacation to resolve a sudden crisis in Wall Street. He telegraphed the New York Central Railroad president that the 10:24 train was to be flagged for him at Paul Smith's station.

Arrived there, Morgan noted that the one man on duty had his feet planted unconcernedly on his desk, and was reading a sports gazette. "How about getting up and flagging that 10:24 like you've been ordered?" thundered J.P. "Not me," said the unconcerned railroad employe.

So J.P. grabbed up a red flag and waved it furiously at the oncoming train. After it had ground to a stop, he discovered that Paul Smith's was a regular scheduled stop for the 10:24!

Who's Who—and Why—In Hollywood Society

Movie Capital Seems to Have Reached Settled Stage as Far as Social Life of Players Is Concerned

By Bob Thomas

HOLLYWOOD, May 12 (AP)

WHAT is Hollywood society? You can ask a hundred people in this town and not get the same answer. Several will hotly deny that there even exists a Hollywood society.

But every town, big or small, establishes a social scheme over the years, and Hollywood is no exception. Recently I have undertaken a sociological study, combining years of observation and off-the-record talks with many prominent figures.

Hollywood social life circa 1956 appears to have reached a settled stage. This seems to be the natural result of the passing of almost a half-century since the town became the movie capital. The history of Hollywood society can be roughly divided into four eras:

1. The wild years. Extending from the start of the film business to the early '20s, this was the period when fortunes were made and lost fast. Most of the new stars and tycoons of the infant industry came from humble backgrounds. Many lacked the social graces, and entertaining was gay and garish.

This was a time of scandal, that most notable being Fatty Arbuckle's trial on a morals charge, William Desmond Taylor's murder and Wally Reid's death after revelations he was a dope addict.

2. The Pickfair Period. From the mid-'20s to early '30s, Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks ruled Hollywood society from their white Georgian mansion. They entertained kings and queens and helped counteract the nation's low opinion of Hollywood after the scandals.

3. The thriving '30s. With the divorce of Mary and Doug, Hollywood society moved from the power of Pickfair to a broader base. The talkies brought the movies' flowering era; new and brilliant stars arose. This was the time of the big parties, when Hollywood could afford to be lavish.

4. Postwar period. Despite some economic problems in the film industry, local society has survived and even thrived since World War II. But it's a different kind of social life from other eras.

THE big parties are almost gone. Because of income taxes, most stars and producers can't afford them. Most of the entertaining is done in homes at small dinner parties.

"There is no glamour left in this town," one top star complained to me. "The people here have no flair for entertaining imaginatively. They want to be sedate and respected, like average folks. But we're not average folks. We're stars, and we should live excitingly. Instead, Hollywood is getting to be like Pasadena." (The latter is a staid community with a high proportion of wealthy, elderly retired residents.)

This is an extreme view, but it bears consideration. The established stars, who set the tone for the social life, are in their forties and fifties. This is a time in life when most people cling to their familiar friends and are less inclined to extend their circles of acquaintance. So they entertain quietly in each other's homes.

There's another factor—Hollywood is a working town. Though you may think of stars as living idle lives beside their swimming pools, they actually work hard when they are working. Those in TV work almost continuously. Film actors must be up at dawn and in bed early.

How is Hollywood society stratified? It can't be. Unlike society in New York, Philadelphia, Boston or other cities, there is no clearly defined elite here. Faces come and go with the changes of fame and fortune. But, with the mustering of courage, I can define the four main groups of Hollywood society. This will no doubt be greeted with hoots and howls from those of each group. The most notable feature of social categories here is that no one likes to be categorized.

HERE are the groups: the pioneers, the settled set, the young marrieds, cafe society. These are not necessarily in order of importance. Nor are the categories rigid; some figures may travel in two or even all of the groups. To explain:

1. The pioneers. These hold a position of eminence by their power, wealth and longevity in the film industry. They include such figures as Miss Pickford, Harold Lloyd, Louis B. Mayer, Walt Disney, Cecil B. DeMille, Darryl Zanuck, Samuel Goldwyn, the Warner brothers and other heads of studios. Most of them are millionaires.

If royalty or a head of state should come here, one of these would probably give a dinner in the visitor's honor and many of the other pioneers would attend.

HOWEVER, there is not a great deal of entertaining among them. Nearly all have their own tight groups around them. And many antagonisms have developed over the years over business deals, etc. Feuds can even develop within families. Mayer, an ardent Republican, doesn't speak to his daughter, Mrs. William Goetz, and her producer husband reportedly because they supported Adlai Stevenson in 1952.

2. The settled set. This is the group that sets the pattern for the social life of the town—the big, established stars. On rare occasions, one might toss a sizable party for visitors such as Noel Coward or Laurence Olivier. But, as noted previously, most of their entertaining is done at small dinner parties.

The stars intermingle, but there are some clearly defined nuclei. Among them:

A. The whimsical Holmby Hills Rat Pack with Lauren Bacall as den mother; Frank Sinatra, packmaster; Humphrey Bogart, rat in charge of public relations. Also David Niven, Spencer Tracy (recently elected).

B. The Irish group, headed by John Ford and John Wayne.

C. The Beverly Hills group, including the Jack Bennys, Danny Kayes, George Burns and Gracie Allen, Dr. Joel Pressman and Claudette Colbert.

D. The social group, including Dick Powell and June Allyson, the Edgar Bergens and the industrialists Justin Dart and Leonard Firestone.

E. A quiet but stellar group including Lana Turner and Lex Barker, Ursula Theiss and Robert Taylor, Joan Caulfield and Frank Ross, Elizabeth Taylor and Michael Wilding, June Haver and Fred MacMurray.

3. Young marrieds. These are the ones who have come to fame more recently and whose fortunes are not yet made. Many of them move in the settled set, but most travel in a less established group.

They include such names as: Debbie Reynolds and Eddie Fisher, Janet Leigh and Tony Curtis, Marge and Gower Champion, the Gordon MacRaes, Jane Powell and Pat Nearney, etc.

4. Cafe society. These find their social life not at home but in the cafes and night clubs. Most of them are unmarried or divorced and therefore not able or inclined to entertain at home. Many of them are seeking to establish their names in show business by way of publicity. Others just like the gay life. You read their names constantly in the gossip columns.

SO much for categories. If you don't mind some more numerals, I might add some other observations on the Hollywood social scene:

1. The movies have drawn creative people from all backgrounds and nationalities. The main element for social acceptance is success.

2. Although there is drinking, there is perhaps less problem drinking than in places such as Washington or San Francisco. Reason: actors need clear minds and healthy faces for their work. There are, of course, notable exceptions.

3. Palm Springs is growing in importance in the Hollywood social scheme. Stars such as Benny, Sinatra, Bing Crosby, Lucille Ball and Desi Arnaz, Phil Harris and Alice Faye, Cary Grant and Betsy Drake, William Powell and many others have homes there. They spend many of their weekends and much of their free time in the desert during the non-summer months.

4. Hollywood society is becoming increasingly mixed with non-movie people. The tendency is for new stars to have as many friends out of the film business as in it.

5. Some top names do not integrate into Hollywood social groups because of shyness, preference for living in the East or other reasons. Among them: James Cagney, Marlon Brando, Judy Holliday, Montgomery Clift, Grace Kelly also was in this group.

6. There are sub-clusters among the four main groups. Golf, the town's favorite outdoor sport, tends to draw fixed sets together. So do restaurants. So the Lakeside golfers seldom are seen at Hillcrest, and vice versa, and the devotees of Chasen's food rarely are found at Romanoff's.

7. One notable curiosity: There is practically no intermingling with the upper crust of Los Angeles society. Hollywood's elite are rarely seen in the clubs or homes of the moneyed businessmen, although many of them reside in the same areas.

Marriage

Bored After 3 Years

By Dr. Paul Popenoe

THEY have been married less than three years, and are already bored with each other.

"We're in a rut," Mrs. McQ. admits. "We're going through the motions of marriage, but there is no spirit behind the motions. I get breakfast for him, do a little housekeeping, read a magazine, watch TV, visit the supermarket, have supper ready when he comes home. We don't have much to say to each other while we eat. After supper we watch TV, I do a little mending, we turn in early. Not an exciting life, is it?

"Why don't I take a job, you'll ask. He doesn't want me to. Why don't we go places and do things, you'll ask. He doesn't want to. Yet I know he's just as dissatisfied and bored with this whole business as I am."

I hope both of you are enough dissatisfied to become desperate, Mrs. McQ., and that your desperation will lead you to do something constructive before you reach the otherwise inevitable point where your desperation will lead you to do something destructive. Either one of you can change this situation. Let's forget for a moment what he might do, and ask what you might do.

GIVE YOURSELF a different hairdo; fix up something smart to wear; make some new curtains for one of your rooms—add a little novelty or color to your daily life.

Learn to prepare three new dishes that are interesting and inexpensive.

Serve supper occasionally by candle-light.

Inquire around until you find some club or church group that you think your husband might consider advantageous or enjoyable. Get someone else to invite him (and you) to attend.

If evening adult classes are offered in some high school in your community, pick out several that you think he might find profitable; ask him if he won't choose one of these and join with you.

Volunteer, merely on your own account, for some piece of work in a community or church organization. Don't get into anything which will entail neglect of your husband or your home, of course.

READ ONE GOOD BOOK a month (or a week) in place of your undiluted TV diet.

Take an inexpensive overnight vacation alone, away from home, perhaps by visiting a friend or relative.

Plan for a good vacation together with your husband this summer.

Along such lines I think you'll find that your marriage begins to take on a very different meaning within 90 days.

Answers To Questions.

Q. Is it fair for a husband to maintain close friendships with girls he knew before marriage?

A. If he has any sense (not to say good taste), he'll make such friendships extremely casual. Unless he is prepared to give his marriage right-of-way, he may not have a marriage very long.

Q. Is there any way to stop a child from perpetually asking questions?

A. That's the way a child gets an education. You don't want him to grow up ignorant, do you? Sometimes a child finds the only way to get attention is to make the parent keep talking to him. Try starting and directing a conversation of your own, instead of making him take all the initiative.

Q. Do you think it is ever popular for a high-school girl to ask a boy for a date?

A. Only in special circumstances. A girl who is overaggressive in taking that initiative is likely to be shunned by the boys. Try to be where boys are and make yourself pleasant and interesting. They'll do the rest.

Q. Is it all right to let a boy kiss you good-night on the first date?

A. Almost every intelligent girl will tell you no. A kiss ought to mean a genuine liking. That can hardly be expected to develop in just a few hours, can it?

Q. I have a 5-year-old daughter and 3-year-old son; can't seem to get them to eat. Do you think a child should be bribed to eat?

A. A child should not be bribed to do anything. Write me in care of the Post-Dispatch for up-to-date reprint on children's food problems. Please inclose stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Family Financier

By Christopher Billopp

THE family financier is responsible for the family finances. It is he who figures out and pays the Federal income tax and the State and municipal taxes

It is he who anticipates the cost of the summer vacation, who makes allowances for the house gradually falling to pieces and maps out a costly program of repair.

When the family financier imagines the worst is over and that now he can build up a little surplus in the bank, payment on an insurance policy falls due. Or a dear one announces she has nothing to wear and that the newest dress she owns is five years old.

This is the time for a daughter to drop her paying job and go back to college for a graduate course. It is the time for a son to announce he has found a girl and wants to get married and is looking to the old man for a loan.

IF THE FAMILY FINANCIER manages to keep his family and his domestic establishment looking respectable no doubt it will be noted by the neighbors. So they will be coming around to ask him to lead a drive and make it succeed by setting the rest of the community a generous example.

The job of the family financier calls for constant attention, foresight and courage. It requires calmness and steadiness in the face of unexpected and unpleasant surprises.

THE FAMILY FINANCIER'S PROTESTS do no good. He must accept the argument that what looks to him like gross extravagance is really a bargain, and that if a purchase is made right away much money will be saved.

Unless the family is to court disaster, the family financier must make ends meet. And yet, as far as he can see, the only expenditure over which he has the slightest control is the modest lunch he buys himself each day.

Award-Winning Architect

George Hellmuth And His Career

New Airport Terminal Is Just One of Several Major Projects Successfully Completed by St. Louisan and Associates — To Be Honored

NEW TERMINAL BUILDING OF LAMBERT-ST. LOUIS FIELD . . . ITS DESIGN IS WINNING HIGH HONORS.

By Dickson Terry

HOLLYWOOD has its Oscars, literature has its Pulitzer prizes, and medicine has its Lasker awards.

Among architects it's the First Honor Awards given by the American Institute of Architects, and though less highly publicized than some of the others, they are just as important, just as strongly coveted and considerably more rare. Only five are awarded each year.

This year one of the five awards for outstanding achievements in the field of architecture will go to the St. Louis firm of Hellmuth, Obata and Kassabaum. The award will be presented at the annual convention of the institute, which opens in Los Angeles tomorrow. George Francis Hellmuth, head of the St. Louis firm, will be on hand to receive it.

The St. Louis firm's achievement: designing the new terminal building of Lambert-St. Louis Field.

Along with the certificate of award, Hellmuth will receive a bronze plaque to be attached to the building, an adornment which few buildings in the country can flaunt.

As a matter of fact the terminal building, you may be proud to learn, has created quite a stir in architectural circles, both nationally and internationally. Architectural Forum said it is "probably the outstanding example of successful terminal architecture in the United States."

Fortune magazine selected it for inclusion with "some of the most notable America construction since 1930," some of the other examples being Rockefeller Center, the United Nations Building, the Pentagon and the Golden Gate bridge.

Photographs of the terminal hang in the Museum of Modern Art in New York as examples of "structure and space in modern engineering," and the American Concrete Institute has included it in "notable concrete structures of all time."

It has been written up in journals of architecture in both Paris and London. Architects from all over the country have journeyed to St. Louis to look at it. Delegations of visiting dignitaries have placed it on their itineraries, and any number of delegations from other cities, where new terminals are being planned have come to look, admire and learn.

THE man chiefly responsible for this, as well as for quite a lot of other notable construction in St. Louis during the past six or seven years, is a 48-year-old, stockily built man of medium height who now considers himself less an architect than an administrator, who takes his rather prodigious accomplishments as a matter of course, and whose philosophy of architecture is summed up in the quite simple sentence:

"We tackle everything from the standpoint of how good a job we can do."

During the past seven years, the firm's projects have included (in addition to the airport terminal building), the Military Personnel Records Center, which cost nearly $14,000,000; the Wendell Oliver Pruitt housing project of 12 buildings, containing 1400 units and costing $20,000,000; the John J. Cochran Garden apartments with 704 units, costing around $8,000,000 and the Joseph M. Darst apartments, the plans for which eventually call for 1200 units at a cost of close to $15,000,000, and two other housing projects as yet unnamed but known as projects 1-5 and 1-6, both adjacent to the Pruitt homes, and which will cost around $15,000,000. each. When completed the projects will provide homes for 30,000 people.

HELLMUTH WITH HIS PARTNERS IN THE FIRM, GYO OBATA, CENTER, AND GEORGE KASSABAUM.

At the present time Hellmuth and his firm are supervising construction or have on the drawing boards the Remington Rand building which will cost $500,000; the Ramsey Manufacturing Co. plant at Manchester to cost more than $1,000,000; the St. Louis County Health Center building to cost $800,000 and the Belleville (Ill.) Memorial Hospital to cost $2,250,000.

AND then, there is a three-room school house at a little community called Timber, Mo., which cost about $25,000, and a small rock church at Eminence, Mo., which cost about $30,000, both of which jobs Hellmuth did for nothing, but on which he lavished the same care and attention he gave to the airport terminal which cost $7,728,000.

Hellmuth and his rather titanic accomplishments of the last few years present something of an enigma to a lot of people, mainly because they think he is a newcomer to St. Louis, and they wonder how it all came about.

As a matter of fact, he was born and raised in St. Louis and is the product of several generations of St. Louisans. His father, George H. Hellmuth, who died last year, was a practicing architect in St. Louis for 50 years, as has been his uncle, Harry Hellmuth, who lives in Florissant.

Hellmuth's father built, among other things, the Soulard Library, the International Fur Exchange building, the Brown-Regal building, part of the buildings at the Rolla School of Mines and, his most widely known job, the Vicksburg Memorial, at Vicksburg, Miss.

Hellmuth lives in a house which was built by his great-grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Harrig, at 4464 Maryland. It's an old house of classic design. Like many architects, who spend their lives dreaming up homes and buildings for other people, he has never gotten around to doing a house for himself. Anyway, he says, he likes the idea of having a link with the past and a sense of family continuity which he gets from living in the old house.

HE was born in St. Louis in 1907, went to Barat Hall and St. Louis University High School. He then went to Washington University to study architecture, in which he got two degrees, bachelor's and master's, and also won the Steedman fellowship which gave him a year of study in Europe. The winning design was a proposed Admiral Byrd memorial, a somewhat elaborate affair showing strong Grecian influence and bearing little resemblance to his present taste which he describes as "strictly contemporary."

The creative urge made itself felt at an early age in Hellmuth. He took up oil painting at the age of 10 or thereabouts, and when he was 12 he was studying at Washington University under Fred Conway in a special class for talented youngsters. While he was in Europe he changed to water colors, mainly, he says, because Europe seems to lend itself to water colors. Conversely, the American landscape doesn't, he feels. "Everything you see in Europe makes you want to do a water color sketch of it," he laughed. "I made literally hundreds of them there."

When he got back a friend persuaded him to hold a one-man show. He did, and sold two pictures.

AFTER Europe he spent some time around St. Louis and then his father sat him down and gave him some advice. Go, he said, where things are being built. Building was slow in St. Louis and there was nothing very startling about what was being built. His father told him to go to some city where things were happening, architecturally, so young Hellmuth chose Detroit.

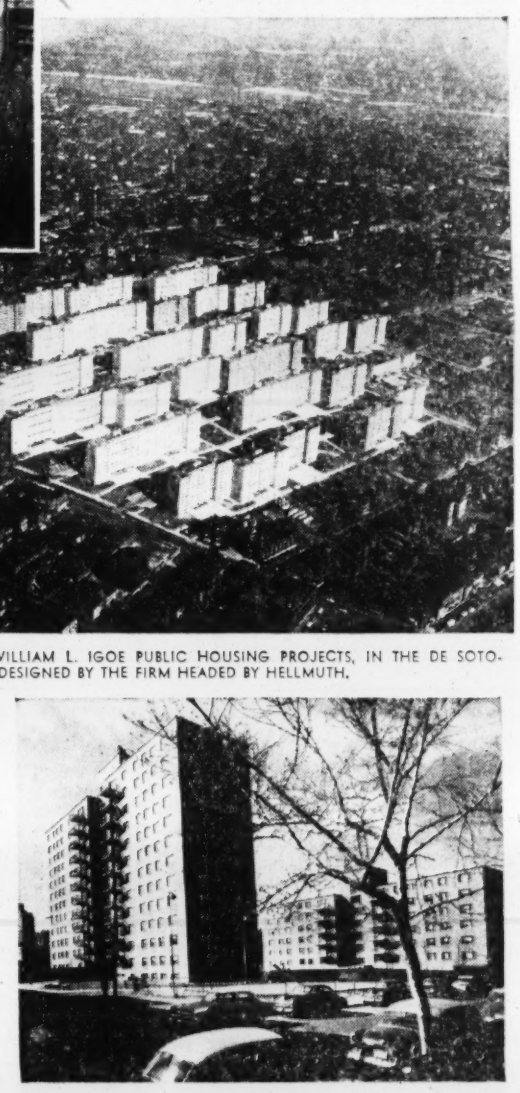

He joined the firm of Smith, Hinchman and Grylls, one of Detroit's largest and most progressive firms. He stayed there for nine years, during which time he progressed to the post of assistant to the president.

World War II came along while he was there and he was given the job of developing plans for and supervising the building of ordnance plants at Des Moines, Salt Lake City and the Twin Cities, whose aggregate cost was more than $300,000,000.

Architecture on this scale is a complex thing, involving much more than just designing a building. A man has to be, in addition to a designer, an engineer, an expert on building materials and an administrator.

As a result of his successful accomplishment of the jobs, he was temporarily detached from the architectural firm, and the Government placed him in charge of communications and correspondence for seven ordinance plants, representing more than $500,000,000 worth of work. It was this experience in the management and staffing of large contracts which prepared him for the kind of work he was doing in St. Louis.

In 1949 Hellmuth visited St. Louis, took a look around and decided that the time was ripe to come back home. Various housing projects were under consideration and there was evidence of other things to come. He felt that his experience had equipped him to handle these projects, and not only that, he knew the right people.

Hellmuth had been active in local politics before he went to Detroit and now some of the men with whom he had beat the drum for the Democratic party were now in the catbird seat, among them being the late Joseph Darst, who was Mayor.

Hellmuth brought two of his associates in Detroit to St. Louis with him—Joseph Leinweber and Minoru Yamaski—and organized the firm of Hellmuth, Yamaski and Leinweber.

HELLMUTH AT 22 WHEN HE WON A $1500 FELLOWSHIP IN ARCHITECTURE FOR 1930, ADMINISTERED BY WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY.

Through a combination of practical ability, firm prestige, energy, salesmanship and political connections, Hellmuth got himself appointed architect for the St. Louis Housing Authority and went to work on the Carr street housing project which is now known as the John J. Cochran Garden Apartments.

The project won him the gold medal of the St. Louis chapter of the American Institute of Architects and an honorable mention from the Architectural League of New York.

UNTIL 1954, the firm had two offices, here and in Detroit, doing business at both stands. In Detroit they designed the $12,000,000 Automotive Engineering Center. In 1954 Hellmuth came to the conclusion it was impractical to try to operate in two large cities, and the firm split up. Yamasaki and Leinweber went back to Detroit and took over the firm there. Gyo Obata and George Kassabaum, both of whom had been associated with the firm here, became partners, and the company is now known as Hellmuth, Obata and Kassabaum.

Obata, a third generation American of Japanese descent was educated at the University of Southern California, where his father was art instructor for many years, and at Washington University. Kassabaum, who originally came from Kansas, also received his degree in architecture at Washington University.

The firm's offices are on the second floor at 315 North Tenth street. The decor is modern, creating an atmosphere of light and space, where a couple of dozen architects and draftsmen bend over drawing boards detailing windows, cornices and steel beams. The organization includes some 60 people.

ONE of the firm's interests is designing better schools, and an excellent example of their work may be found in the Bristol Primary school in Webster Groves, which won one of five awards for the best schools in the country, given last year by School Executive magazine.

Currently in design stage are four high schools, three junior high schools, three elementary schools, and dormitories for 500 students at thet University of Missouri and for 300 students at Rolla School of Mines.

When Hellmuth isn't at his office, which is seldom, he will be found at his farm at Timber, Mo., on Sinking Creek in Shannon county, which is partly a hobby, partly a bulwark against insecurity. There he raises Hampshire hogs, Aberdeen cattle, horses and Shetland ponies.

"I get a big kick out of farming," he explains, "and I also recall the depression. I feel if a man has a farm, he has something he can fall back on if it ever happens again. He can always live off the land."

When Hellmuth was at his farm one day last year, the school board from the Timber district approached him with a problem. They needed a new school, but they didn't have much money. Hellmuth put some of his best talent on the job and came up with plans for a modern, attractive three-room school building, which he donated to the school board. The cost of the school, however, was going to run to about $40,000. The school had only $20,000. So Hellmuth donated his services also. He supervised the whole job, through his knowledge and management, got the job done for about $25,000.

When he was approached by the Catholic Church at Eminence, not far from Timber, he again donated his services. He went to Eminence and studied the surroundings and came up with plans for a church which he felt would suit both the site and the church's purse. It is built of native field stone and rough, hand-hewed timber, and the design is a pleasing combination of traditional and modern. It cost only $25,000 to build. He's about as proud of it as he is of anything in his career.

"It's tiny," he says, "but it's a gem."

HELLMUTH is a man of many and varied interests, few of which he has time for any more. He seldom does any painting. His collection of Indian relics, which used to take much of his time, is gathering dust. The pride of his collection is a set of 15 Indian knives dug up near Cahokia which bear such strong Mexican influence he has long been convinced there is some connection between the Indians of Mexico and Central America and the Indians who built the mounds at Cahokia.

For a good many years he was a devotee of falconry, "a very fascinating sport." But it takes an enormous amount of time, so it too had gone by the board. Another of his hobbies was scale model railroading.

"But I've turned that over to the kids," he says.

Hellmuth was married in 1941 to Mimi Henning, then living in San Mateo, Calif., but born in St. Louis. They have five children, ranging in age from George, 13, down to Daniel, born Easter Sunday. The others are Nicholas, 11; Mary, 9; and Teddy, 7.

Both his family and friends appreciate another of Hellmuth's hobbies, one to which he still clings. They all agree he is a great man at the barbecue pit.

Classical Records

Stravinsky: Two Phases

By Thomas B. Sherman

STRAVINSKY'S "Le Rossignol" or "The Nightingale" is wholly successful in its attempt to capture the charming fantasy of a Hans Andersen fairy story. As a product of his first period it is softer in its harmonies, more delicate in coloring and less given to explosive rhythms than many of his later works that he considers more important. A recording by a group of French artists under the direction of Andre Cluytens does justice to both its decorative and communicative elements. The Nightingale, whose song is so enchanting that it not only beguiles an Emperor, but stays the hand of Death itself, is convincingly represented by Janine Micheau. Her silvery, mercurial tone and flexibility in bravura passages justify all the exclamations of delight that they inspire in the Emperor and his court. The cast, in general, is satisfactory and the conductor's finesse is apparent in the shimmering colors of the orchestra as well as in smooth, plastic fluency of the whole work.

"Le Rossignol" is nominally a short opera and it certainly could be realized as a stage pageant even though its dramatic line is slight. (Angel, One 12-inch LP. in album with French and English libretto.)

A later phase of Stravinsky's production is well exemplified by the Concerto for Piano, Wind Instruments and Double-basses and the Capriccio for Piano and Orchestra. Both are recorded by Nikita Magaloff with L'Orchestre de la Suisse Romande, conducted by an old Stravinsky hand, Ernest Ansermet. (London, One 12-inch LP.) Magaloff is not quite incisive, or percussive enough in the Concerto; but he does well with the lighter, more humorous Capriccio. The orchestra is in "style"—crisp and propulsive—in both. Someone said of the Concerto that it sounded like "an inebriated Bach." This is a good rough description of Stravinsky's neo-classic processes in this work.

ORCHESTRAL: Westminster's contribution to the Mozart anniversary year is a set of recordings—not yet completed—of all the Mozart symphonies. Erich Leinsdorf, musical director of the New York City Center Opera, conducts the London Philharmonic Symphony in the whole set. The two volumes released for review offer the "Linz", "Haffner" and No. 37 in G Major on one record and a pairing of the "Prague" and the big E Flat Major symphony on another. They are distinguished for their clarity of line, transparency, balance and strong momentum. Fluency in legato passages and tenderness in molding the phrase are occasionally lacking though it must be said that the E Flat Major is free of these deficiencies. It is beautifully and poetically executed, and particularly so in the first movement.

A recording by the Chicago Orchestra of the Bartok Concerto for Orchestra is likely to be the definitive one for some time. Fritz Reiner, the conductor who recorded the same composition with the Pittsburgh Orchestra, shows his usual skill in presenting with the utmost clarity tthe anatomy of the music. But he also, in this case, is wholly sympathetic to its lyrical elements; and he is unmistakably authoritative in bringing out its rhythmic values. Then too the sound reproduction is in the first category of excellence. (RCA-Victor, One 12-inch LP.)

LITURGICAL: The "Magnificat" of Carl Phillip Emanuel Bach combines the vivacious style of Italian opera with the lofty, spiritual utterances such as one finds in the great choral works of Sebastian Bach. The recorded performance involves Dorothy Siebert, soprano, Waldmar Kmentt, tenor, Hilde Rossl-Majdan, alto, Hans Braun, bass, the Vienna Akademie Choir and the orchestra of the Vienna State Opera. Felix Prohaska is the conductor. The performance is bold, exuberant and eloquent. The younger Bach's melodic invention in this work is comparable to Mozart and Hayden, and the reproduction leaves nothing wanting so far as brightness and depth of sound is concerned. (Vanguard, one 12-inch LP.)

FOLK MUSIC: A song cycle designed to make a complete representation of Spain's regional music is effectively performed by the Spanish soprano Consuelo Rubio.(Decca, one 12-inch LP). They are really art songs, rather than folk songs as here presented since the composer Federico Moreno Torroba has harmonized them with considerable freedom and used plenty of color in his orchestrations. It seems apparent, though, that be has done nothing that would compromise the essential character of each for the style, and its accessory devices, changes with each one. Moreover, the melodic line is always the center of interest.

BEST SELLERS: Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra, with chorus and soloists conducted by Herbert von Karajan; and Beethoven's Eighth Symphony. (Angel, two 12-inch LPs.); David Oistrakh and the Philadelphia Orchestra with Eugene Ormandy conducting, in Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto and Mozart's Violin Concerto No. 4. (Columbia, one 12-inch LP.).

Muny Opera Announces Ten Comedians for Season

AUDREY CHRISTIE

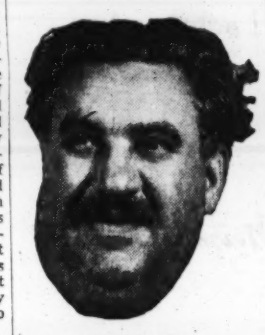

FRED HARPER

JACK COLLINS

LOU WILLS, JR.

BILLY GILBERT

TEN of the principal comedians and comediennes to be featured at Municipal Opera in the 11 productions for the season starting June 7 were announced yesterday.

They are:

BILLY GILBERT, a comedian in the theater and movies for many years (famous for his sneezes), who will play "Popoff" in "The Chocolate Soldier" the week of July 16. He starred in this role at the American in 1947, but has never appeared at Muny Opera.

AUDREY CHRISTIE, comedienne for several seasons at Muny Opera, and who returned after years of absence last season to play Ruth in "Wonderful Town." She will be Lavinia in "Hit the Deck," the week of July 2. Among her many Broadway successes was "The Women." She is currently being seen as Mrs. Mullin in the movie version of "Carousel."

FRED HARPER, who had many character roles at the Forest Park theater during the seasons of 1945, 1951, 1952 and 1954, who will be Lutz in "The Student Prince" the week of June 25.

MURIEL O'MALLEY, who played at Muny Opera in 1946, 1951 and 1954, who will do Aurelia Popoff in "The Chocolate Soldier" and Greta in "The Great Waltz" the week of July 9.

JACK COLLINS, who played the second gangster in "Kiss Me, Kate" at the opera in 1954 and Nicely-Nicely Johnson last season in "Guys and Dolls," will repeat the "Kiss Me, Kate" role the week of July 30, and will play Herman Fabricant in "Wish You Were Here" the week of July 23.

ART BARNETT, who will be Charley Davenport in "Annie Get Your Gun" the opening show, to run 11 nights. He did the role previously at Muny Opera in 1952.

LEE DAVIS, who will play Pinky Harris in "Wish You Were Here." A vaudeville man, he appeared also in Earl Carroll's Vanities and "Follow the Girls" on Broadway.

SONNY SPARKS, who will do Itchy Flexner in "Wish You Were Here." He appeared in two ill-fated Broadway productions and on many TV shows, including Sid Caesar's and Martha Raye's. He will play the first gangster in "Kiss Me Kate."

LOU WILLS JR., a dancing comedian who appeared on Broadway in "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn," "One Touch of Venus," "Best Foot Forward," "Laffing Room Only," "Are You With It," and "Make Mine Manhattan." He will play Junior in "Hit the Deck."

NAN McFARLAND, who will play Dolly Tate in "Annie Get Your Gun," Elizabeth Woodling in "Paint Your Wagon," the week of June 18, and the Grand Duchess Anastasia in "The Student Prince."

Members of the opera dancing chorus were chosen at auditions Monday and have begun rehearsals. The final auditions for candidates for the singing chorus will be held at 2 and 8 p.m. tomorrow at the American Theater. Singing chorus rehearsals will begin Thursday.

At the Movies

By Myles Standish

FANFAN THE TULIP—A gay and impudent French spoof on the swashbuckling type of costume movie, a sort of "Three Musketeers" played for laughs. Lively and pert, frequently witty and sometimes ribald. With Gerard Philipe as an audacious, agile rogue and Gina Lollobrigida as a sergeant's daughter who slaps the face of Louis XV. English subtitles. SHADY OAK.

JUBAL—A Western about a fat, ugly rancher who has a beautiful, unhappy young wife with a roving eye. She casts it on a new cowhand whose motives are pure, but that doesn't keep him from getting shot at and chased by a posse. Fairly stern, if familiar stuff, but not powerfully enough knit as drama to give its prize actors, Glenn Ford, Ernest Borgnine and Rod Steiger, more than a brisk warmup. LOEW'S STATE.

SERENADE—Mario Lanza, the temperamental tenor, returns to work at last in a watered-down version of James M. Cain's tough novel, but the results aren't good. The script is vapid, about an operatic tenor who loses his voice over carrying a torch for a society siren (Joan Fontaine) but gets it back in love for a pure Mexican girl (Sarita Montiel). Lanza's acting has more than a touch of the ham and his singing, though improved, still stresses volume over perception. ST. LOUIS.

THE REVOLT OF MAMIE STOVER—Jane Russell in a heavy-handed depiction of a money-hungry B-girl who cleans up a fortune in Hawaii after Pearl Harbor, and then in a closing gesture to appease the production code, announces she has given it all away. Richard Egan plays her socialite lover with marked lack of enthusiasm. Some striking CinemaScope photography is wasted on this trash. FOX.

GOODBYE, MY LADY—A disarmingly simple, touching and utterly charming story about a boy in the Mississippi backwoods who has to give up a beloved hunting dog and thereby becomes a man. A perfect miniature, with fine performances by Brandon De Wilde, Walter Brennan and Phil Harris. William A. Wellman has directed it with delicacy and warmth. PAGEANT.

GUYS AND DOLLS—Return of the exuberant, richly comical musical using a Damon Runyon Broadway fable and Frank Loesser's delightful songs. With Marlon Brando, Jean Simmons, Vivian Blaine, Frank Sinatra. MISSOURI.

AIDA—Return of the sumptuous and glittering Italian version of Verdi's opera about love and treachery on the Nile, brilliantly sung by dubbed-in voices. Sophia Loren is the Ethiopian princess. Luciana Del la Marra plays Radames like a stick. English narration is unsatisfactory. RICHMOND.

ROCK AROUND THE CLOCK—Lots of noise from Bill Haley's comets and numerous other rock 'n roll acts with a trite plot. At least you won't go to sleep. Also HOT BLOOD, a pretty horrible thing about gypsies in Los Angeles, with Jane Russell and Cornel Wilde. ORPHEUM.

SEVEN WONDERS OF THE WORLD—The three-eyed Cinerama camera is used unimaginatively in a desultory travelogue that follows a well-beaten path. AMBASSADOR.

DORIS DAY AND JIMMY STEWART IN ALFRED HITCHCOCK'S SUSPENSE MELODRAMA, "THE MAN WHO KNEW TOO MUCH," GET A MESSAGE FROM THE KIDNAPERS OF THEIR SMALL SON IN A CLOAK AND DAGGER PLOT. IN VISTAVISION, IT'S NEXT AT THE ST. LOUIS.

Art and Artists

Advertising Art Display

By William K. Wyant Jr.

MODERN art and modern advertising are becoming more closely allied, as anyone reading the magazines can see. The liaison is easily discernible in the exhibition of work by students of Washington University School of Fine Arts, on display through May 29 at City Art Museum.

The exhibit fills four galleries. A viewer, by starting at the south end, is able to follow the progress of students through four years of work that begins with fundamentals and winds up in the lofty realms of pure art and commercial design. Highly competent productions in both fields are shown.

Since exhibits are arranged by class-years in which they were done, the first gallery offers examples of first-year drawing, design and composition; the second has sophomore efforts in oil painting and other subjects; the third displays senior work in illustration and design, and the fourth gallery, largest and most impressive, contains advanced paintings and sculpture.

THE EARLY WORK has appeal, both aesthetically and as a study in pedagogy. Thorough grounding in anatomy is manifest in the careful, painstaking studies of bone and muscle structure in classes taught by Graves Gladney. The pencil drawings of geometric forms and natural objects—an egg, for example — always fascinate the lay observer because anybody can judge, in such representational efforts, whether or not the artist has brought it off.

The making of such a judgment is not so easy, of course, in the more complicated flights that come after the fledglings have learned to soar a bit. It is interesting to compare the realistic still life paintings done under Tanasko Milovich, who introduces students to oils, with the work of senior students, some of it highly abstract or expressionist.

In the gallery for advanced work, paintings and prints by students in some instances mirror techniques characteristic of their instructors, Siegfried Reinhardt, Fred Conway, Tom Cavanaugh and Fred Becker. A study of a woman, by Nedra Riddle, a senior in advertising illustration, has the figure broken into a series of planes in a manner typical of Reinhardt.

ANOTHER EFFECTIVE canvas in that of Tran Gordley, senior in painting, who employs vivid yellow, blue, orange and brown to give his impression of an artist in the throes of creative activity. A number of other paintings demand attention. All of the student work is shown without title or identification.

Inasmuch as one objective of the School of Fine Arts is to teach people how to earn their livings as magazine illustrators, advertising designers and the like, a significant part of the show deals with student production in illustration and design. This aspect of art has immense importance to the general public, large segments of which read magazines and look at billboards more frequently than they visit museums.

The school is not upstage about the fine art of getting people to buy things. On the walls of City Art Museum are presentations exhorting people to use finger nail polish and rouge, purchase whisky, beer and champagne, travel to far-away places, and drive a well-known brand of automobile. There are designs for long-play record covers, wrapping paper and Christmas cards.

IT HAS BEEN Dean Kenneth E. Hudson's observation that the great world of advertising is resistant to change. "Young artists," he says, "are willing to go farther in new approaches than the market is willing to absorb."

This year's student sales pitches do have freshness and verve, some of them at least, even though in theme they seldom wander too far from established Madison avenue techniques. Several could go in the next issue of slick paper magazines, right alongside those Toulouse-Lautrec and surrealist ads, without disastrous results to the products concerned.

"Anywhere," is the caption for a campaign on Scotch whisky. It drives home the concept of ubiquity, a virtue highly regarded in liquor, apparently, with a series of sketches of a mustachioed man-about-town. He is shown in a bathtub, in the Tyrolean Alps, in India charming a snake, and elsewhere—always within arm's length of a drink.

There are many clever designs, shown both in preliminary treatments and in finished form. Competent work in scratchboard and casein drawing is shown, as are some fine examples of industrial art work, fashion sketching, ceramics and ornamental objects.

RHONDA FLEMING AND ARLENE DAHL, THE SCREEN'S TWO MOST BEAUTIFUL REDHEADS, ARE COMBINED IN A PRIZE PACKAGE IN "SLIGHTLY SCARLET," NEXT AT LOEW'S STATE.

LINDA CRISTAL AS A SPANISH GIRL CAPTURED BY INDIANS AND DANA ANDREWS AS A FRONTIER SCOUT IN "COMANCHE," COMING TO THE ORPHEUM. IT'S IN CINEMASCOPE.

Community Playhouse to Do St. Louisan's Play

THE ST. LOUIS COMMUNITY PLAYHOUSE, which dropped its plans for its annual half-dozen productions during the past season because of failure to obtain a theater, will stage a belated entry with the production of "Not Even a King's Promise," a new play by Nathan Garson of St. Louis, in the Y.M.H.A. auditorium, 724 Union boulevard, for six nights beginning next Sunday. Curtain time will be 8:30 o'clock.

The drama is about a marine returning from the war who had acquired briefly, then conquered, the drug habit. He doesn't find the peace he seeks. His former professor has become a drug addict also, at the mercy of a brilliant but warped dope pusher who takes a sadistic pleasure in dragging a superior nature down to his level. He tries to persuade the ex-marine to return to the drug habit; the professor saves the young man by murdering the peddler, then committing suicide.

This is Garson's first play. The lead, Danny, will be played by Tom Allen, an Alton disc jockey who has had acting experience at the Pasadena Playhouse. Wally Hoss will play the professor, and Haskell Schwartzberg the dope pusher. Others in the cast will be Colette Barclay, Joseph Lomuto, Genevieve Bierman, Pat Dolan, Joseph Angarola, Herb Boraz, Mary Allan Stock, Dave Leitch and Herb Macklin. Maggi Speer is directing.

The Playhouse is negotiating for a county theater next season and hopes to give a full season of plays. Gil Newsome, radio and TV disc jockey, is president of the organization.

Movie 'Oklahoma!' to Missouri in June

The Todd-AO movie production of Rodgers and Hammerstein's musical, "Oklahoma!" will come to the Missouri Theater for an extended run sometime near the middle of June, it was announced yesterday by Fanchon and Marco Theaters.

The theater will be remodeled to accommodate the new depth process, including a deeply curved screen and a new projection booth. The Missouri will operate on an advanced price, reserved seat policy with special scheduled showings.

The movie, which stars Gordon MacRae and Shirley Jones, is in its eighth month in New York. Other productions which will be shown in the Todd-AO depth process are "Around the World in 80 Days," "The Ten Commandments," "War and Peace," and "South Pacific."

Asparagus Season Here; Some Recipes

By Edith M. Barber

IF YOU have a backyard garden, nothing is more worthwhile than an asparagus bed. This is sometimes possible even when there is not room enough for a real vegetable garden.

It is such fun to watch those shoots push up from the ground and sometimes it seems as if they appear miraculously. Although spring has been so late this year that the asparagus was not ready when I spent an annual weekend in the country, two warm days brought signs that in a few days it would be plentiful.

When I returned to the city I found the market full of long thin, tender stalks that had matured in southern New Jersey. They were selling at a reasonable price and I immediately planned one of my favorite luncheons of asparagus with cream sauce served on toast.

When this vegetable is served as an accompaniment for a meal, we generally choose a tart sauce of the hollandaise type or perhaps made from a base of sour cream. We also like it with lemon butter or brown butter. Cut in pieces, it is also delicious dressed merely with cream and seasoned to taste.

While I prefer asparagus in hot form, many like it even better when served cold with a French dressing or vinaigrette sauce, perhaps in combination with sliced hard-cooked egg. Sometimes the egg yolk is sieved and the white chopped and used as one of the ingredients of the dressing or sauce.

PREPARING ASPARAGUS: Wash asparagus stalks under running cold water. Cut off tough ends. In large skillet bring one inch of water to boil and add salt. Arrange asparagus stalks in the water, cover, reduce heat to medium and cook just until stalks are tender when tested with fork. Drain, return to skillet and keep warm while preparing the sauce.

SAUCE: Melt three tablespoons butter or margarine in saucepan. Stir in equal amount of flour. When blended add one-half cup of milk and continue stirring over low heat until sauce begins to thicken. Add remaining half cup of milk and stir over heat until sauce is thick. Add one-quarter cup cream, salt, pepper and nutmeg to taste. Reheat. Pour over drained asparagus that has been arranged on hot buttered toast.

Painting Metal

For painting metal that is exposed to the weather it's best to use a different colored paint for the prime coat than is used for the finish coat. In this way, should the finish coat start to fail in spots, it will be easily noted and the area can be touched up.

Monopoly Question

By John Crosby

NEW YORK, May 12.

SENATOR BRICKER'S charges of network monopoly against NBC and CBS are grossly misleading. Not that there isn't a basis for complaint in that line, but Bricker's shotgun blast obscured rather than cast light upon the problem.

Bricker's charges that CBS's income represented 65 per cent of its total capital investment is particularly wrong. As Frank Stanton, president of CBS, pointed out, Bricker only counted the buildings and equipment and completely ignored the programming costs which are the heart of the matter. They have a saying in Hollywood that movies are the only business where all the assets leave the studio every night. CBS's assets are not the cameras and microphones; they are Jackie Gleason and Lucy and Desi and "Studio One," each of which cost a lot of money that Bricker ignored completely. You can't judge the entertainment business by the same standards you'd use on the steel business.

THE PROBLEM is not that there's too little competition but that frequently there's too much which leads the networks to cutting each other's throats senselessly; everyone loses when that happens, including the viewer. But in its healthier aspects the race between CBS and NBC to outstrip one another has provided us all with better and better shows. The pugnacious competitiveness not only between networks but between different shows on the same network have consistently raised TV standards and will raise them further.

Granted, the two giants straddle the field, but a third network, ABC, which had to spot its rivals a two-year lead in the race when its sale to Paramount was held up, is coming up fast and is already giving CBS and NBC a run for their money. Then there will be three giants. Well, how many giants are there in the automobile industry? And don't tell me there isn't competition in that wild and wooly game.

IF NBC AND CBS were not big and rich, we would not get "Dodsworth" or "Caine Mutiny Court Martial" or "Peter Pan"; we'd get an endless succession of quiz shows because that would be all anyone could afford.

Of course, NBC and CBS with their control of key stations in key markets are in the drivers' seats, and their control of what you and I and 100,000,000 other Americans are going to see or not see has not always been used wisely or even scrupulously. But who is to control it, if not the networks? For years the networks were under attack not for controlling what was on their air but for abdicating control to the ad agencies and the package producers.

RECENTLY Dick Powell has been kicking up a storm because CBS has decided to put a 90-minute drama show in the spot where Powell's "Four-Star Playhouse" resides which, in effect, is putting him and his colleagues out of business. I'm personally sympathetic with Powell because "Four-Star Playhouse" is not only a successful show (with a consistent rating around 30) but also a good show.

This is the little man getting around. Already the Federal Communications Commission and Assistant Attorney General Stanley Barnes of the Justice Department have taken note not only of the Powell complaint but of other similar ones and are studying the possibility of Government intervention. Well, if the networks are to be divorced from control of their broadcasting, who will rush in and fill the power vacuum? The ad agencies again? The package producers? The very threat of Government intervention has kept the networks in line in the past. But there is almost no threat you can hold over an ad agency and none at all over a package producer. What would keep them in line?

Jane Powell Blossoms Out as Producer

HOLLYWOOD, May 12.—Jane Powell revealed today that she also wants to become a movie producer. The star, who is under contract to Metro and RKO for three pictures each, has bought movie rights to the historical novel "The Gay Saint." The book written by Paul Bailey and published in 1944 deals with the adventures of Sam Brannan. He was supposed to have assisted Brigham Young in founding the Mormon colony which became Salt Lake City, but instead settled in San Francisco and grew fabulously rich. Miss Powell has no plans to appear in the picture herself, but intends to produce it in association with a major studio.

Spouse Paying Wife Back in Own Coin

By Martha Carr

Dear Martha:

I'VE been married five years and have a small son. A few months ago I became interested in another man. My husband found this out and since then he has been a changed man. He stays out all hours of the night, never comes home for dinner or explains where he has been. I've been very patient thinking maybe he would forgive me but he tells me he wants a divorce because he could never trust me. I'm a little fed up with the situation myself in spite of the fact that it's my fault and I'm thinking of leaving him and the baby. Can you offer any help? I still want to save my marriage.

UNHAPPY.

I cannot, of course, condone what you have done and I can understand why your husband would be sick with disappointment and distrust. Whether you destroy your marriage must be your decision. I can only say that even though it will be an uphill fight, do what you can to keep your home together for the sake of your child. Don't desert him because you have been cast aside in payment for a silly mistake. But while it's hard for me to understand why you would risk your marriage and your son's future happiness for a passing interest in another man, I think your husband might well try to be a little more forgiving. Granted yours was the first mistake, he is now doing as much to undermine your marriage as you did. Too many of us are quick to cast stones even though we're far from blameless ourselves. A family agency will help you decide what would be best to do.

Dear Martha:

● I AM DIVORCED from my second husband and am still in love with him. We have been divorced more than three years but I can never get him off my mind. We had our troubles. He drank and ran around. I had two children by my first marriage and naturally they were my obligation. He was jealous of them. Now both children are grown and married. He wants us to go back together and forget the past. I truly believe he loves me. Would you suggest that we try it again? I am some older than he but he has always said that made no difference. We were married three years. P. K. B.

This is not a question which an outsider can answer for you, unless it is your minister or some other professional counselor who knows the background of the case and can offer sound advice. But these are matters to be considered before you make your decision: even though the children are grown and outside the home, will he continue to be jealous of them—or of someone else? Is he still drinking and running around or can you trust him to settle down? If you honestly love one another and are willing to make the effort—which apparently you didn't make the first time—you could have a happy and successful marriage. But it's a task for both, not just one.

Dear Martha:

● I AM 17 and have liked a boy for four years. I have dated a lot of others within that time but have never found any whom I liked better. He is in the service and in his letters has said he loved me. Now he is home on leave and at times I wonder if he meant what he said. I love him very much and could not picture my life without him. I would like very much to know how he feels about me but could never find nerve enough to ask him.

TROUBLED.

Sometimes loneliness and homesickness can persuade a boy that he is in love when he really isn't, and he forgets that sweet talk when he's back home. So be careful if he has given you cause to doubt him now that he is with you again. I don't think you should nag him into swearing his undying love, but it might be a good idea to find where you stand. And remember that the trite old adage still holds good: actions speak much, much louder than words.

Dear Martha:

● DO YOU THINK teen-agers should be allowed to talk on the telephone over five minutes? That isn't very long, only about time enough to say, "Hello, how are you, goodby!" How long do you think we should be allowed to talk on the phone with a person if we don't see that person often, and if it is approximately only the second time you have been on the phone that day?

DESPERATE.

Granted, five minutes doesn't seem long when you're having a pleasant conversation but for other members of the family who are waiting to use the telephone, it's an eternity. I can't set any maximum or minimum time on a conversation—and I'll say that adults often are as long-winded as teen-agers—but the important thing is to be thoughtful of others and make sure you are not monopolizing the telephone when someone else needs it or expects a call.

Dear Martha:

● IN MY COLLEGE CLASSES two years ago I met a likeable young woman and dated her frequently. Since our likes and backgrounds were so similar I felt she would be an excellent lifelong companion and after much consideration on the part of both, we became engaged. But after a year my fiancee very politely explained that she preferred not to "isolate" herself with one person during her remaining years at school so we called off our engagement and although we made no promise to pick up where we left off after graduation, she has never made any effort to return my ring. Since it is of great sentimental value to me, I had intentions of keeping it in the family. Most of my friends think she has every right to keep it because I gave it to her and others feel she should return it. Would it be proper for me to ask her for it, explaining the sentimental value attached to it?

J. L. M.

An engagement ring certainly falls in a category by itself, and whereas a girl might not want to return other guts when she breaks her engagement, she should send back the ring. As long as she has made no effort to do so, I think you are well within your rights to ask for it. From your letter, I judge that even though you "agreed to disagree," you did so with the utmost courtesy so I feel sure she would not want to keep a ring which you wanted for its sentiment within the family circle.

GIVE an enterprising student of design at Washington University a dozen soda straws and she will concoct an impressive beach hat in a half hour's time. Give another a few yards of gauze, and an elaborate evening gown will appear as if by magic. Complete ensembles made of handsome imported woolens, ball gowns with such bouffancy that doors must be widened before the wearer enters, fancy pants that protrude from brief little circular skirts, and a host of other ingenious creations are a part of the day's classwork for these clever, young students.

Some of the original creations of this group of embryo designers went on display last week at the annual fashion show staged in the ballroom of Hotel Statler for friends, relatives, and sleuthing members of the needle trades. The sleuths weren't there to snatch any ideas, but as talent scouts to spotlight the promising lads and lassies, and spur them on by their enthusiastic applause to even greater achievement. The show was sponsored by the St. Louis Fashion Creators who recognize that Dean Kenneth Hudson and his staff have had much to do with keeping St. Louis well recognized as a creative center for young fashions.

Thirteen junior and senior students of dress design in the Washington University School of Fine Arts presented their year's achievements totaling 101 different garments as well as numerous hats and shoes. It was a "round-the-clock" and "round the calendar" type of presentation with sleepwear, sportswear, tailored themes, and festive modes almost equally divided, and plenty of togs for rainy days as well as sunny ones, numerous air-conditioned styles, and a few warm coats and suits. The children as well as the college crowd were outfitted, this emphasis upon juvenile designs indicating that the St. Louis students are well aware that this is a manufacturing field with a definite need for fresh ideas and talent.

One young man, Robert Yarbrough, whose home is in McAlester, Okla., and who is a junior student at the school braved the competition of the girls and proved that he has a definite flair for fashion creation. Although most of his designs are of the sophisticated type, he demonstrated his versatility with children's clothes, also. The use of companion printed cottons, for example, was of special interest in a dress and coat ensemble modeled by eight-year-old Jennifer Judah. The young designer's wife, Norma, modeled the majority of his costumes in this showing, wearing smart town ensembles and high-waisted directoire late-day and evening types with an air of confidence in the talents of her creative husband.

Emphasis upon carefree fashions was noted in the many beach outfits and lounging themes presented by the students. One of Liane John's swim suits led the parade, this a bold model featuring purple stripes. Stenciled cotton print was selected by Joyce Greene for a suit and beach coat trimmed with a coppertone polished cotton. Worn with this was the novel hat, crowned with cotton, and brimmed with soda straws. Coolie coats, hour-glass silhouettes, and apron effects over tank suits were among the other noteworthy trends.

Printed coulettes covered with a bright linen sheath represented Yarbrough's interpretation of the ideal play costume. Irma Suggs contributed a pixie type of play suit in a pastel printed fabric, the suit featuring bloomers rather than shorts. A brown sailing slack suit made of a water resistant fabric was shown by Barbara Mahon.

A group of lounging fashions included ideas from the Far East, and from the Far West. The Eastern influence was seen in Yarbrough's sateen sheath over silver gray slacks. Joyce Verderber presented a Chinese coat with an accordion-pleated hem to cover sleep wear. Tops that looked like they belonged with evening dresses were teamed with slim slacks in several other designs.

In the collection of children's fashions there were several attractive sun dresses with double-duty provisions. Also, significant, was the combination of practical with very feminine accents. White lace ruffles trimmed sturdy red cotton overalls. A lavendar organdie petticoat peeped from the lattice back of a turn-about pinafore dress. An artificial apron adorned a high-waisted frock.

Large rounded collars, slim skirts with panel backs, bloused waistlines, and buckled fastenings were among the features of suits. Outstanding in the collection was an oatmeal tweed suit designed by Barbara Angelbeck. This suit had a wide collar finished with fabric fringe. The jacket fastened at the side front and was held close to the figure at the sides of the waistline to give a bloused effect.

Coats for rainy days took honors for intricate designing and handsome appearance. Typical was a charcoal gray coat made and worn by Thelma Suggs. It stressed British tailoring in its fitted waistline and deep pleated skirt section. A white leather beret was matched by a white leather umbrella cover.

For late day and evening wear, the students followed European influences with their endorsement of directoire modes. Chiffon was used extensively for elaborately draped dresses. Several ball gowns were made in versions of the harem silhouette as were after-five fashions. Plaid cotton evening dresses with floor length skirts were colorful and flattering.

New York Stage

'Lovers' Is Elaborate But Slow

By Walter F. Kerr

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch News Service

NEW YORK, May 12.

IN the lavish costume melodrama "The Lovers" that the Playwrights company brought to the Martin Beck Thursday night, Hurd Hatfield plays an anguished friar confronted with a double murder, a grisly suicide, and a community raging for blood.

As he patiently sorts out the facts that have given birth to so much mayhem, he murmurs, "There is something beneath the crust here." But I'm afraid there isn't.

The crust itself is handsome enough. Designer Charles Elson has opened the spectacle with a breath-taking visual image: a peasant with a scythe stands poised on a jagged series of rocks before a vast, curved universe that seems to stretch to world's end. Playwright Leslie Stevens has had the theatrical boldness to hurl into his ranging pageant every trapping and trick the customers and prop men could fetch from the dramatic warehouse.

He has also had the courage to use the stage at its freest: letting his story flash backward and forward in time, dip into retrospection and plunge on into outright vision.

YET A CURIOUS development has taken place: with a flexible stage and a fiercely flowing structure at his disposal, he has moved his essential narrative at snail's gait. His monkish detective settles down to endless preparatory conversation; revels and rituals and crowded neighborhood riots stop the story dead again and again; when a biting situation does come our way—a medieval nobleman demanding a subject's bride for the night, an incensed abbot insisting on her return—the scene is whisked into the wings and handed back to us roundabout by various interested and disinterested third parties. The actors scurry; the play never does.

And I think there may be a reason for so much circuitous plotting and irrelevant invention. The basic emotions on which Mr. Stevens has built his towering carnival are extraordinary simple ones, too simple perhaps to justify quite so much fuss. A beautiful young girl is about to be married to her peasant swain. The local ruler sees her bathing in a pool, exercises his "droit du seigneur," and passionately carries her off. Finding that he loves her, he decides to keep her—and she is not altogether unwilling herself.

BUT THERE ARE, beneath the fairly fundamental passions and romantic postures, almost no psychological depths to be penetrated. Lust proves to be a somewhat uncomplicated drive; such complications as ensue have a candy-box air about them; and the rages that rise over three tumbling acts end in rococo excess. Helen of Troy couldn't have caused more trouble.

Mr. Stevens has not been able to give us a Helen, or any other passionate creatures of sufficient dimensions. His players struggle vehemently. Hurd Hatfield forces his friar to a pitch of sharpness that is never quite present in the lines. Darren McGavin takes many a heroic stance, but this nobleman is a cardboard satyr. Joanne Woodward's unfortunate heroine is merely wistful, Mario Alcade's husband merely roaring. When flashes do come—Vivian Nathan has one as a suddenly venomous sister of the bride, Morris Carnovsky another as a patriarch submitting to feudal law—they only accent the hollow fury around them.

Wayne King Band at Opera House May 24

The "J. David Nichols Revue of 1956," featuring Wayne King and his 17-piece orchestra, will appear in Kiel Auditorium Opera House in two performances at 7 and 9:30 p.m. Thursday, May 24.

In addition to the "Waltz King," the show will feature Professor Backwards, dead-pan comedian from the Ed Sullivan TV program, the Commodores, singing quartet of Dot Records, Johnny Matson, musical humorist from the Colgate Comedy hour, Howard and Wanda Bell, acrobats, and Londra and Vernon, dance team.

Jim Hayes, baritone from St. Louis and Barbara Becker will handle the band vocals.

Redingote Effect

The redingote effect is continuing to be used by many of the designers. Dresses that serve also as coats are seen in this type. One yellow linen model, for example, buttons from neckline to hemline and has a flaring skirt. When worn over a printed or a dark colored sheath dress the buttons are left unfastened from waistline to the hemline. Also of interest in carrying out the redingote theme are overskirts that are detachable.

Chiffon Gowns

Chiffon evening gowns in draped silhouettes are among the handsome themes for summer wear. Pretty shades such as mint green and lemon yellow are attractive. There is a trend, too, toward using several blending shades. Tones of pink, for example, range from a very pale hue to a rosy red. These form the draped bodice and overlapping panels on the skirt.

Neckline Bows

Neckline bows adorn many summer dresses. The lace collar and tie are added to dark colored cotton and silk dresses. A sheath dress that has a wide, draped collar has a fringed bow trimming. One dark dress cut with slender lines has no decoration except a large white organdie bow at the low, V neckline.

Dimitri Tiomkin Says Best Music Written for Films

By Vernon Scott

HOLLYWOOD, May 12 (UP)

THE best music written in America today is being composed in Hollywood for motion pictures.

That's the view of three-time Oscar winner Dimitri Tiomkin, who says if Beethoven or Puccini were alive they'd be scribbling movie scores instead of knocking themselves out writing "immortal" classics.

"Throughout history," says Dimitri, "music has been written for money. The outfits offering the most cash got the best composers. At first it was the church, then royal courts, society, operas and symphony. The stage was next, and finally movies."

Tiomkin, an effusive man, speaks with a Russian accent thick enough to cut with a dull ice skate. He punctuates explosive statements with chopping hand gestures and lapel-grabbing earnestness.

"Take Handel and Scarlatti. They made their fortunes writing for the church. Lulli and Rameau were well-paid composing for crowned heads. Beethoven and Mozart were the darlings of high society. They made huge sums in their time.

"Verdi, Mendelssohn and Puccini cleaned up writing opera. And what of Gilbert and Sullivan, Victor Herbert and Rogers and Hammerstein? They found gold on Broadway.

"If all these men were starting out today, believe me," he said, clutching my sleeve, "They'd be writing for movies.

"Ha! You ask, 'What about the classics? Movie music will never last,' you say.

"Maybe it won't live, because it is an integral part of another art—the movies. It is not written for the ear alone. One needs the visual aspect to appreciate movie scores.

"But listen. As long as 'Gone With the Wind' is a classic picture, then its music, too, is classical and lasting.

"HOW LONG would opera have lasted if the music were kept and the story thrown out? Eh? People forget thousands of operas were written, but how many live today? Are they all classics? No, of course not. Neither are all movie scores. But some will live as long as great pictures endure."

Tiomkin sat down in triumph. Having made his point, he added that music is becoming increasingly important to movie exploitation. One hit song from a film, released to juke boxes a month in advance of the picture release date, can add a million bucks to the boxoffice.

He mentioned "Love Is A Many-Splendored Thing," "Going My Way" and "Three Coins in the Fountain" as examples. Two of Dimitri's biggest hits were "High Noon" and "The High And The Mighty."

"I have no ambition to write 'significant' music like a symphony," he concluded. "I want to do significant and important motion picture scores. For that is today's classical music.

"It also is the most financially rewarding," he grinned.

Tailored Dress

The tailored dress that has a detachable shoulder cape has appeared in cotton fabrics. One plaid cotton dress in shades of blue and white is buttoned from neckline to hemline at the center front. Cape that is lined with white linen and is reversible buttons to the bodice.

TEACHING OPPORTUNITIES FOR COLLEGE GRADUATES
The St. Louis Public Schools Need Teachers

There is still time for applicants to enroll in the summer program to qualify for a teaching position in the St. Louis Public Schools beginning September, 1956.

In co-operation with St. Louis University and Washington University, and with the approval of the State Department of Education, the Personnel Division of the St. Louis Public Schools has devised a plan whereby graduates with a Bachelor's Degree from accredited colleges and universities may prepare themselves for temporary or permanent employment as elementary school teachers.

Applicants for permanent teaching positions must not have reached their fifty-first birthday at the time of their appointment.

Interested persons are requested to bring their educational transcripts and credentials in person to the Personnel Division, sixth floor, Board of Education Building, 911 Locust Street.

Way to Varnish Floor

By Elizabeth Hillyer

HAVE you thought of a roller for varnishing the floor? Rollers with long handles mean you can take the job standing up. The right preparation comes first always if a job is to be easy; and for floors, this means the complete removal of all traces of wax, polish, or paint or varnish remover with a turpentine wash. The first step in the varnishing is the application of a narrow strip of varnish along the baseboard with a brush. Then comes the easy rolling.

Use a good quality mohair roller, never lamb's wool because it may leave lint. Make sure the mohair roller won't and is perfectly clean by using the vacuum cleaner on it. Don't pour varnish on the floor—fill the tray about half full and saturate the roller but free it of excess by rolling it on the shallow end of the tray. Start the roller application about a foot from the baseboard. Make cross strokes to distribute the varnish evenly, but always finish with strokes in the same direction that the boards are laid.

Learn how to reclaim and restyle old furniture with beautiful finishes—and what to do about furniture finish repair. Send today for Elizabeth Hillyer's booklet Furniture Refinishing—How to Do It Yourself. Address Miss Hillyer at the Post-Dispatch and enclose 15 cents in coin, please, with a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Washability Feature Of Children's Clothes

WASHABILITY is an important feature of children's clothes for summer wear. Most of the clothes for boys and girls are labeled as to fabric content and handling, so that there may be no danger of damage from laundering. Garments often have crease and soil-resistant finishes. There is an increased interest, too, in materials that require little or no ironing.

To make washing easier, take a spot check of the clothes before they go into the machine, and remove any special stains that may become permanently set in hot water. Chocolate, a stain that follows through childhood, should be soaked in lukewarm water first and then washed out with soap and water before the regular laundering.

To remove fruit stains, pour boiling water through the fabric. Sponge off spilled soft drinks with cold water as soon as possible. Soak milk and ice cream stains in cold water to remove protein content, and then wash in hot, soapy water. Mud splatters should be permitted to dry, then brushed off as much as possible after which the garment is soaked in cool water before washing.

New Play Clothes For Little Girls

NEWEST play clothes for little girls feature very feminine types. An edging of tiny pleated net ruffles on sun suits and pinafores is an example of the trend. Stripes, either bright and bold or in pastel shades, also are favorites for carefree clothes. Crisp cottons that have a textured surface contribute to the full-skirted look that is flattering to juvenile figures.

Embroidered organdy is being used extensively for dresses that may be worn for many occasions. The popularity of eyelet batiste that prevails in adult fashions is noted in many of the fashions for little girls, too. Dark shades, including navy blue and brown, are chosen for play dresses as well as those for party time.

Two New Stars, Clint Walker, Jeff Richards

HOLLYWOOD—May 12—Two new actors get their first crack at stardom in pictures to go before the cameras shortly.

One of them, Clint Walker, is a former Las Vegas policeman. Very handsome.

Warners, who have been grooming him for some time, will star him in "Backtrack," a film which will be made in Utah.

The other newcomer who gets a big break is Jeff Richards. At M-G-M, where he is under contract, it is claimed that he has everything that Gable has, plus a wonderful singing voice.

So they are starring him in "Your Cheatin' Heart," a story based on the life of the folk singer and composer, Hank Williams.

Cafe curtains are simple to make with looped tape now available in most drapery or notions departments. May be used on bamboo as well as fabric curtains.

Cooling Hint

A wire rack with feet that hold it up from the table is recommended for cooling cakes and cookies because it allows the air to circulate under the baked products and keeps them from becoming soggy.

Comedy About First LST in World War II

HOLLYWOOD, May 12—The serio-comic adventures of the crew that sailed the first LST into the Pacific in World War II will be dramatized on the screen by Harry Tatelman, independent producer. "The 446," which was the number of the craft first offered to the British navy and rejected, will serve as the title of the movie. Tatelman has obtained details about the adventure from Cooper Adams, a Mid-western textile manufacturer, and Roger Aston, a New Mexico oil man, who were assigned to the craft and sailed it to Pearl Harbor with a green crew. At the time Adams and Aston themselves were newly-commissioned "ninety-day wonder" ensigns. Tatelman has not yet made any distribution arrangements for the proposed production. His last work was on "Run for the Sun," starring Richard Widmark, which United Artists will release.

The Packing Of Winter Garments

By Dorothy Brainerd

IF your storage space is extremely limited — a situation which unhappily seems to be all too prevalent—here is a suggestion that you may find helpful for packing away small winter garments.

First of all, be certain that every article is absolutely clean, by dry-cleaning or laundering. (And remember that dry cleaners stress that clothing should be wrapped and stored immediately after cleaning.)

Spray woolens carefully and evenly with a moth-repellent liquid, then for extra precaution sprinkle some moth crystals among the folds before wrapping. Dry cleaners, incidentally, offer a special service of moth-proofing garments and packing in sealed bags or boxes, ready for storage.

But for those little things such as woolen sweaters and scarves, mittens, caps and snowsuits, proceed as follows:

Cut squares of household aluminum foil to fit the article. Fold the top of the foil snugly in a double wrap and turn in well at the sides. Seal the package carefully with strips of masking tape. Make sure that you do a neat job, folding and sealing securely, or you may leave an opening—and one is all that these little pests need.

Take time to mark on the tape with a heavy pencil so that you won't wonder which package is Dad's muffler, and which is Sister's mittens.

The big advantage, of course, is that these flexible foil packets take up far less space than rigid boxes and can be stored on shelves or in drawers.

Fur collars, muffs and hats can be protected from dust and moths by wrapping securely in foil packets before storing in sealed boxes. The same thing can be done with knitted or felt hats.

MRS. E.M.B. asks for a recipe for chicken and dumplings, explaining that she wants "the kind you roll out and use the chicken broth to make the dumplings.

"I would like the exact measurements, and enough for four persons," she concludes.

How much is enough for four, Mrs. B.? If that includes two growing boys, this may not do it; it makes about 18 dumplings.

Rolled dumplings: Two cups sifted all-purpose flour, two teaspoons baking powder, one teaspoon salt, two tablespoons melted fat, one egg, one-half cup milk or chicken broth, two quarts chicken broth for boiling the dumplings.

Sift flour with baking powder and salt. With fork, beat egg and melted fat. Add milk, and pour mixture into a well made in dry ingredients. Stir just enough to combine ingredients. This is a soft dough.

Turn out on lightly floured board or pastry cloth. Pat or roll dough to one-half inch thickness. Cut into one and one-half inch squares.

Meanwhile bring chicken broth to boiling in a kettle or saucepan about 10 inches in diameter. Drop dumplings into briskly boiling chicken broth. Keep broth boiling. Boil covered, five minutes.

Remove promptly from broth with slotted spoon or whisk. Drain thoroughly over kettle. Serve promptly with chicken gravy, creamed or stewed chicken.

WE HOPE that this note from Mrs. K.S. will serve as a warning for other homemakers. Please, please, keep plastic away from the wooden surfaces of your furniture.

"In November I bought a lovely eighteenth century mahogany bedroom set, and could not afford glass tops right away," she explains.

"Someone suggested that I put a sheet of plastic under a scarf to protect the top. Now I find prints of the plastic in the wood, and nothing will get them out. I don't want to have the top refinished on this new furniture, if I can avoid it. Is there anything you can recommend?"

There is nothing I can recommend, since furniture refinishing experts have told me that no satisfactory method has been devised.

However, a reader told us that she did remove the imprint from a plastic tablecloth successfully by washing the table top with mild soap suds, then very carefully scraping off the print with a dull knife, and ending with a coat of paste wax.

This certainly would be a delicate operation and one for which I cannot assume responsibility, but I pass it along for your consideration.

MISS A. L. H. wants an "easy" way to remove wallpaper which has been painted, and is now loosening from the walls in some places.

We always hate to fall down on a request, but we must disappoint Miss H., since there really is no "easy" way of removing paper once it has been painted. It should be steamed off to do a good job, and this certainly is not easy for an amateur.

Jack Palance Tired Of Dying in Films

HOLLYWOOD, May 12 (AP) —Jack Palance is Hollywood's deadest actor—for the fifteenth time in his short but violent screen career he has died on camera.

In fact, he has only lived through three pictures.

In his current "The Lonely Man," Palance plays a gunfighter of the Old West who has failing eyesight. You know how much chance he has of living under those conditions.

Jack has asked his agent to look for a script with a title like "Let's Live a Little."

High-Priced Stars Now Hollywood's Biggest Headache

By Bob Thomas

HOLLYWOOD, May 12 (AP).

WHEN studios had dozens of stars under contract, filling the cast of a picture was no problem. Today, casting is Hollywood's biggest headache.

Until a decade ago, nearly all the top stars in the movie world were tied down to studios. There were a few notable exceptions—pioneer free-lancers like Cary Grant, Claudette Colbert, Irene Dunne and Ronald Colman. They set the pattern for the star system of today.

With only a score of name players under exclusive contracts these days, studios have to compete in the open market for acting talent. And the competition is fierce.

Because studios have failed to develop enough new talent, there are fewer big stars than ever before in film history. Names like Marlon Brando, James Stewart, John Wayne, William Holden, Gregory Peck can write their own ticket with any producer.

"You wouldn't believe the demands some of these stars make," a movie maker moaned recently. "But what can you do? Names still sell pictures, despite rare exceptions like 'Marty.'"

In order to get the names, producers have to pay whopping salaries—$150,000 is not uncommon, and some get much more. The most sought-after stars can also hold out for 50 per cent of the picture's profits, and that's what hurts the producers most. But they usually have to give in.

This sort of deal was pioneered by James Stewart. Starting with "Winchester .75," he deferred his salary for U-I Pictures in return for 50 per cent of the returns. He has taken in over a million dollars on some of the films.

The star shortage is further aggravated by the fact that many names have virtually taken themselves off the market by incorporating themselves. For a good part of the year, Holden, Wayne, Brando, Kirk Douglas, Burt Lancaster, Frank Sinatra, Marilyn Monroe, Doris Day and others are unavailable because they are working for their own companies.

THE REASON for this is simple: Money. What's the good in earning $250,000 in salary for a film if Uncle Sam is going to take 90 per cent of it? Stars have found the only way to save money is through the advantages of a corporation. Taxes on income are much less, and the firm can later be dissolved as a capital gain.

Humphrey Bogart is reported to have cleared a cool million when he broke up his Santana productions. He could probably never net that much on a salary, even in his high bracket.

With stars' demands increasing daily, blame falls on their agents.

"We're not casting actors any more," sighed producer Joe Pasternak, "We're casting agents. They're running this business."

On the other hand, Editor Joe Schoenfeld of Daily Variety says: "It isn't the agents' fault. They merely reflect the wishes of their clients."

Whatever the cause, star demands continue to skyrocket. This builds up the cost of pictures and cuts down studio profit, while theater attendance continues to shrink.

What is the answer?

"For one thing," a studio executive told me, "we've got to build up our contract list again. We've got to create new stars and hold onto them. It's better to keep stars on salary at $2500 a week than to give them half the studio so they'll make a picture for you."

Van Heflin as New York Crime Reporter

HOLLYWOOD, May 12—Van Heflin will be starred by Universal in "If I Should Die," a magazine story by Hugh Pentecost which Paramount had owned. The picture will be produced in the fall by Howard Horwitz, who last week moved over from Paramount to Universal and interested his new employers in the story. It deals with a New York crime reporter who sees through a plot to pass off the body of an unidentified person as that of a big-shot racketeer. The film will be the first to be produced by Horwitz. He started in the movie business as a press agent and then became an assistant to Don Hartman, who until recently had been production supervisor at Paramount.

Hollywood Briefs

HOLLYWOOD, May 12—Universal has signed Charles Bickford to co-star with Tony Curtis and Martha Hyer in "Cory." Bickford will portray an old time gambler who introduces Curtis to a big time Chicago gambling syndicate. . . . Jean Danet, French film and stage actor, will have the romantic lead opposite Gina Lollobrigida in "Notre Dame of Paris," which Allied Artists will release in this country. Anthony Quinn will be co-starred in the role of the hunchback.

Jerome Moross, theatrical, concert and motion-picture composer, will write the musical score for "The Sharkfighters," a Samuel Goldwyn Jr. production for release by United Artists. Moross's last movie work was on the Cinerama picture "Seven Wonders of the World."

Opera Excerpts

A program of opera and operetta excerpts will be presented by the Opera Department of the St. Louis Institute of Music under direction of Ladislao Vaida at 8:15 p.m. Saturday in the Wednesday Club Auditorium, Westminster place and Taylor avenue. Included will be portions of "La Boheme," "Rigoletto," "Madame Butterfly," "Boris Godounoff," "Brigadoon," and "Carousel." Eudoxia Gonzales of Mexico City will sing Spanish songs.

Mozart Opera at Washington University

A concert version of Mozart's opera, "The Abduction from the Seraglio," will be given by the Washington University Opera Workshop at 8:30 p.m. tomorrow in Graham Memorial Chapel on the campus.

Dorothy Ziegler, workshop musical director, will supply piano accompaniment. The cast will include Naomi Blake, Martha Deatherage, Albert Kennedy, Betty Pearson, Kay Roemer, Rex O'Hara, Otho Reeves, Henry Rhetta, David Sallade, Peter Sozio, John Van Nest, James Wainer, Orville White, William Wilcox and Robert Williams.

'The Incredible Yanqui' To Be Filmed

HOLLYWOOD, May 12—"The Incredible Yanqui," a novel by Herman B. Deutch about an American locomotive engineer who becomes a powerful political figure in Honduras during a rebellion there, has been bought by Lindsley Parsons. The Allied Artists producer acquired rights to the property from Capital Productions, independent company operated by Milton Bren and Ed Lasker. Parsons is negotiating with Dana Andrews to star as the engineer. The producer also has engaged Mari Blanchard to co-star with John Ericson in his next Allied Artists production, "The Curel Tower."

George Murphy Wants American Film Festival

HOLLYWOOD, May 12—The American motion picture business will be urged to consider plans for holding an international film festival in this country, George Murphy, who returned yesterday from the Cannes film festival in France, said Americans who participated in the event were in agreement that "they should sit down with other industry representatives soon to pool their thoughts and evaluate the whole subject of a U.S. festival." Murphy, actor and director of public relations for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, attended the Cannes festival as special representative of the United States Department of State. He said American film people were very well received, particularly such stars as Susan Hayward, Ginger Rogers and Kim Novak.

Borgnine Signed

HOLLYWOOD, May 12—Ernest Borgnine, Oscar winner for his role in "Marty," has been signed by Hecht and Lancaster to star with Sophia Loren in "Bandoola" for United Artists release. Borgnine has a non-exclusive multiple-picture deal with Hecht and Lancaster who also cast him as "Marty."

College Course In Fishing

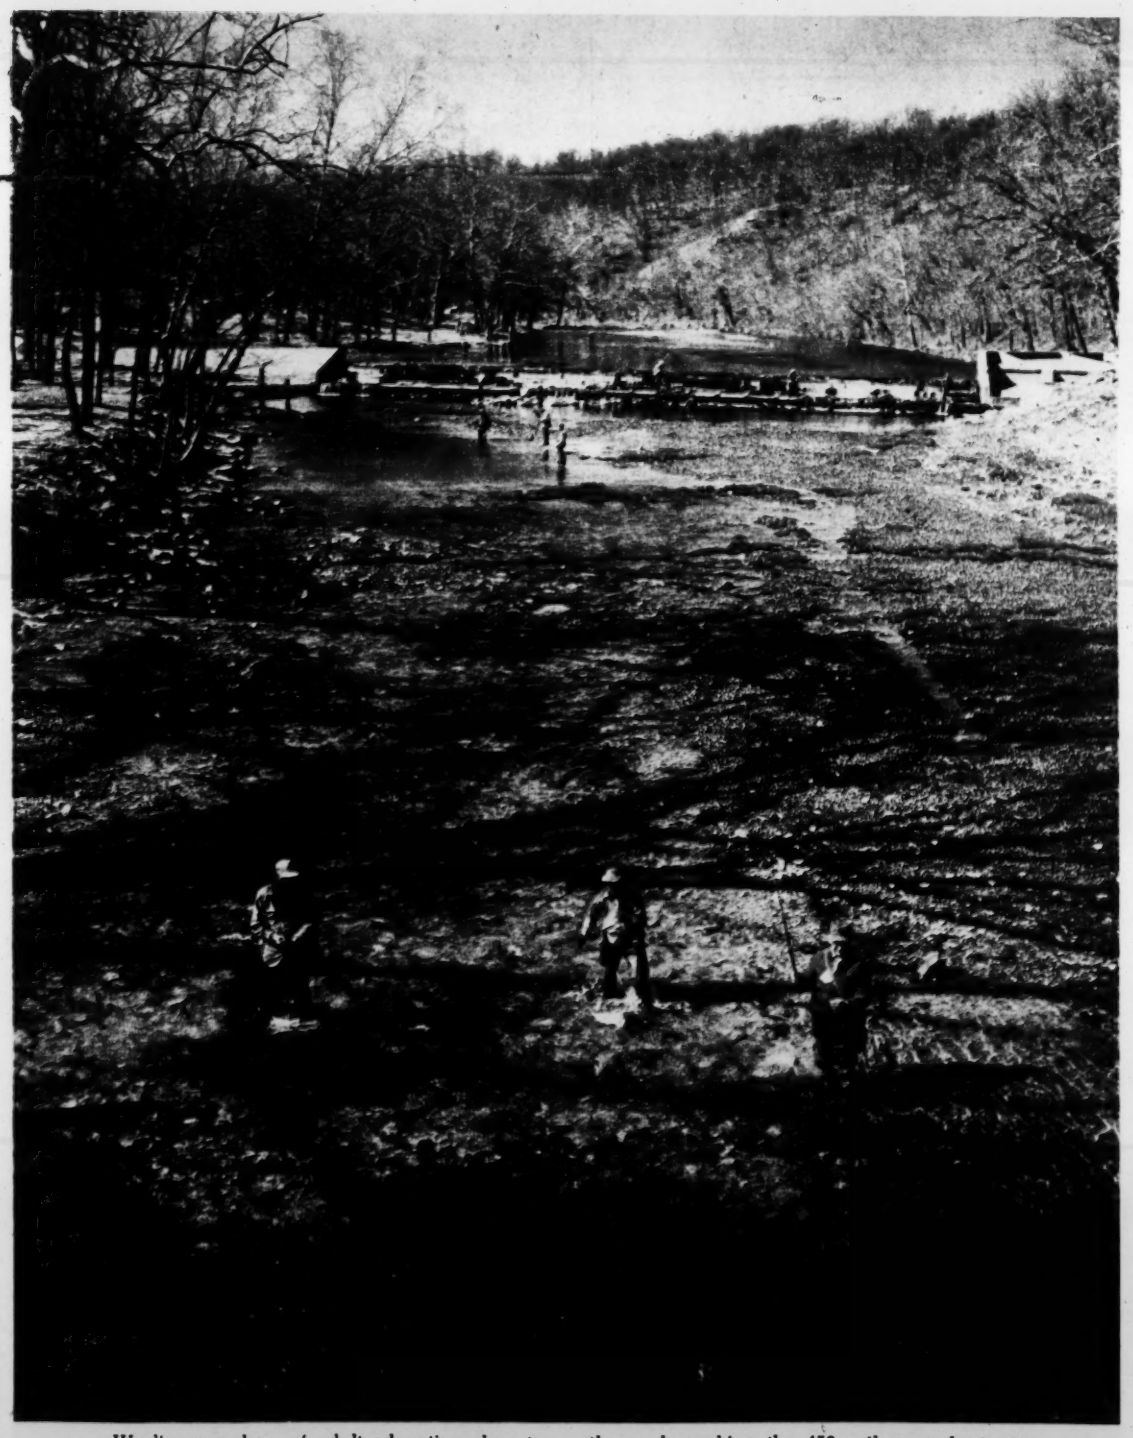

It Is Given, With Credit, at State Teachers College at Kirksville

Dr. Rosebery demonstrates to adult education class how to wrap line guides on fly rod. Woman seated in foreground has brought fishing rod along to try casting in the gymnasium. Rosebery, who holds bachelor and master degrees from the Kirksville school, also teaches general science, bioecology and introduction to forestry.

On an open space of campus, members of the undergraduate class practice casting under the watchful eye of Rosebery (far left). Students are taught to use fly, spinning and bait casting rods. Bait casting is least popular because its inherent backlash tendency is difficult to master. Course is offered only in spring quarter.

Wading members of adult education class try their luck for trout at Bennett Spring State Park, near Lebanon, Missouri. Spring and dam are in background. About 25 students from both classes participated in weekend field trip to the park, making the 450-mile round trip in private automobiles. In addition to fishing at Bennett, they also heard lecture by superintendent of the state fish hatchery there and inspected the hatchery's rearing ponds.

FISHING, GENERALLY considered a pastime in which skill is acquired by experience, holds a respected place on the curriculum of Northeast Missouri State Teachers College at Kirksville. How to operate a rod and reel, make and repair fishing equipment are but parts of a course called game fish management. Included are lectures on such topics as the biology of fish population, fish conservation, identification of major inland game fish and their environmental requirements. And in addition there are field trips for some real live fishing.

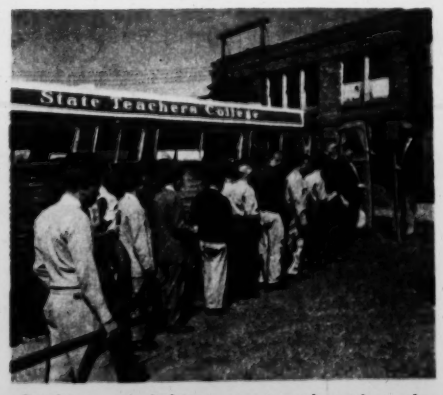

Idea for the course originated several years ago when the head of the science department asked Dr. Dean Rosebery, general science professor, what course he would like to teach the next quarter. "Fishing" was the professor's half-joking reply. With permission, Rosebery outlined a course, falling back on knowledge he had gained while working for four years with the Virginia Fish and Game Commission. Reaction of the college's president, Dr. Walter Ryle, when presented with the outline, was: "Set it up. I'll be the first one to enroll."

This is the third year for the course, which carries two and one-half hours' term credit. Of 56 enrolled, 25 are undergraduates. The rest are townspeople and teachers from nearby who are taking the course in night classes in an adult education program.

At night adult class, two rural school teachers from vicinity of Kirksville place trout flies they have just tied on an exhibit board. Learning to tie flies is part of the course.

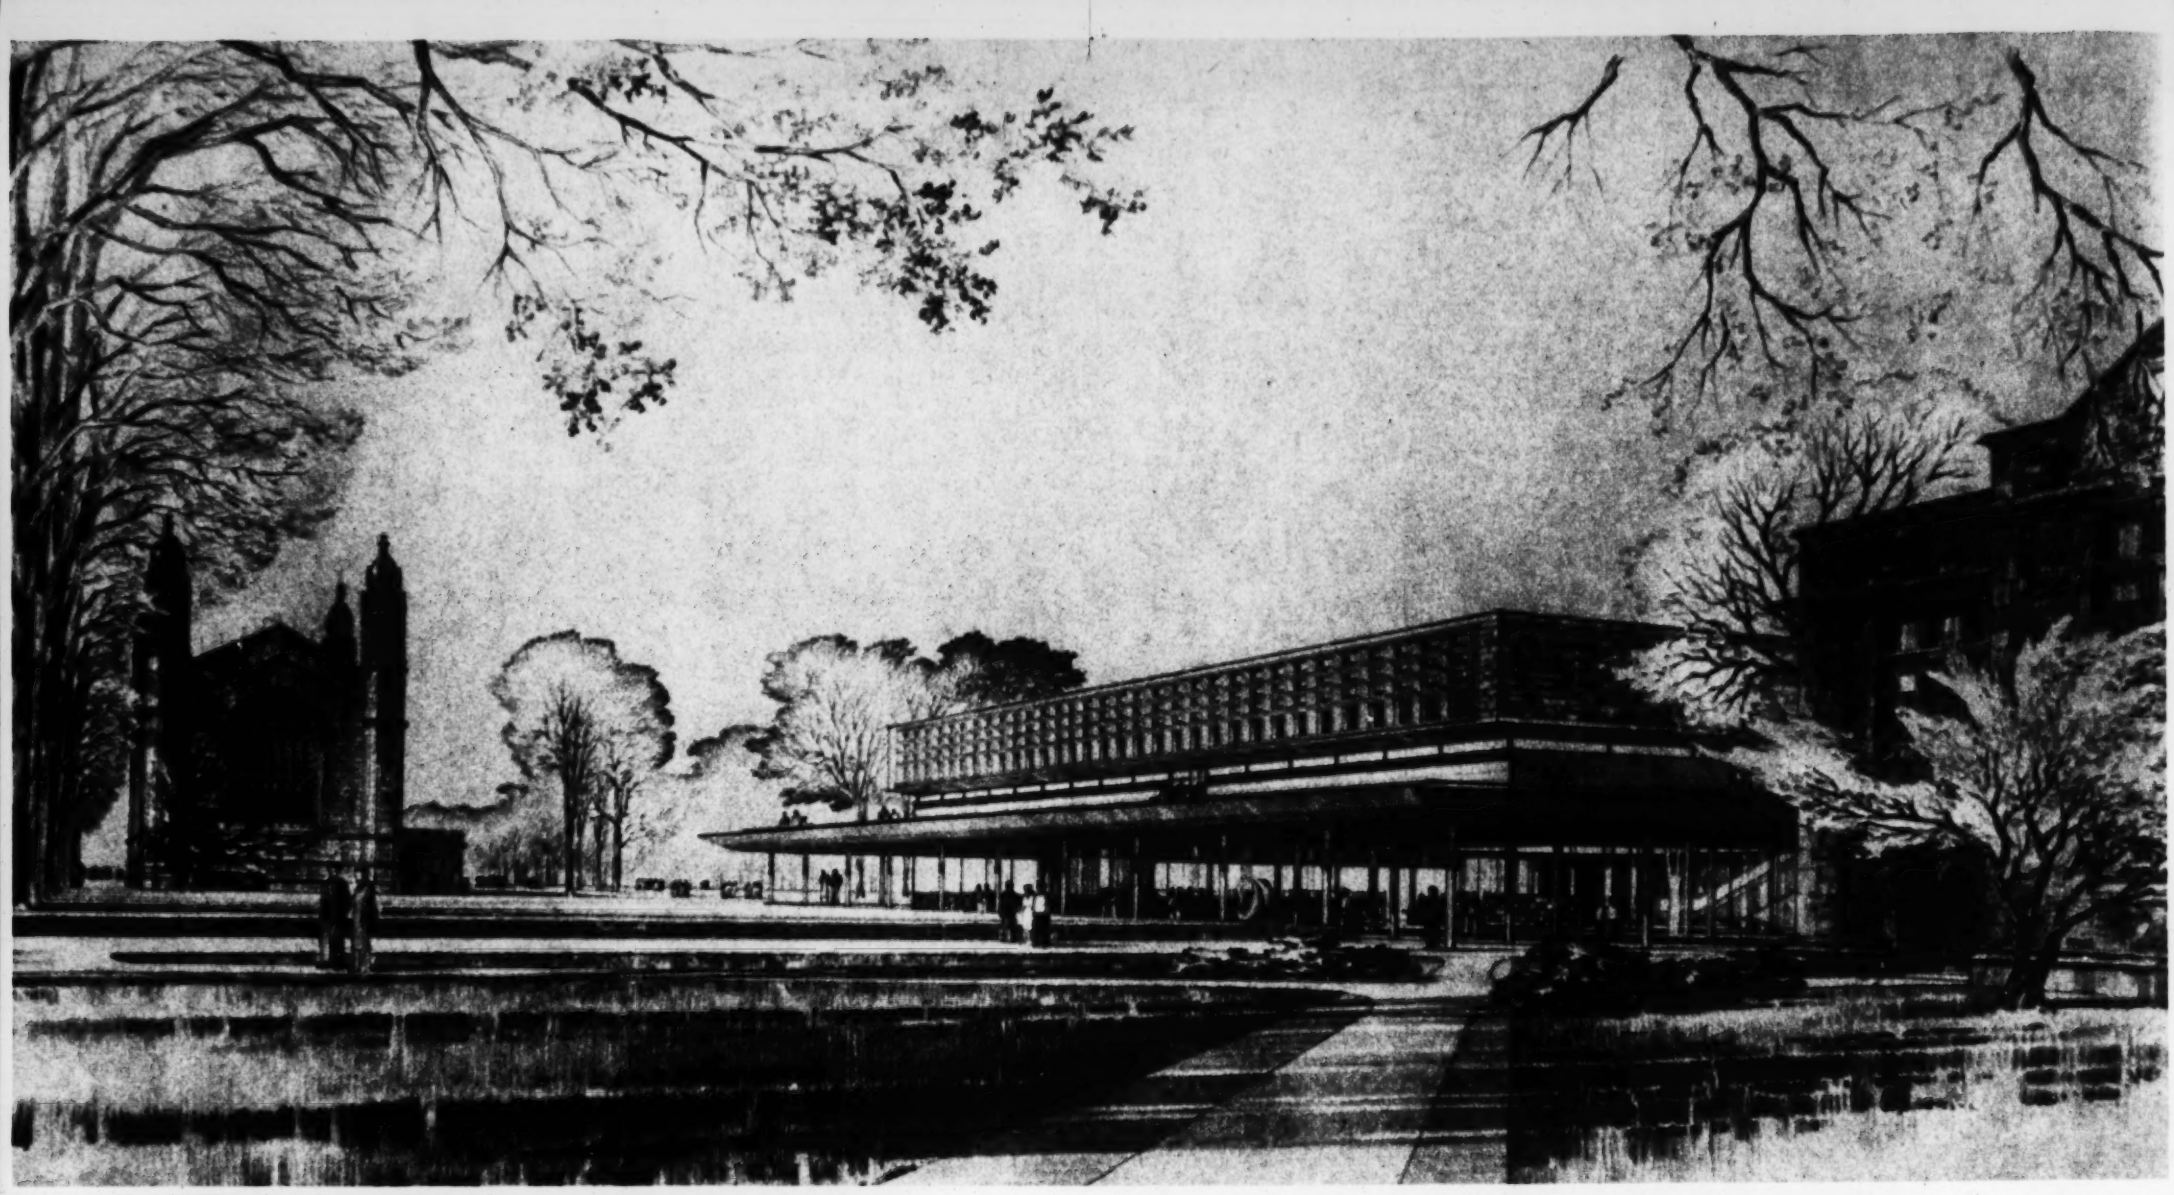

Students of fishing, equipped with rods, board school bus for six-mile trip to Forest Lake, in Thousand Hills State Park near Kirksville. Rosebery holds bus door and President Ryle, an ardent fisherman since taking the course, is at head of line.

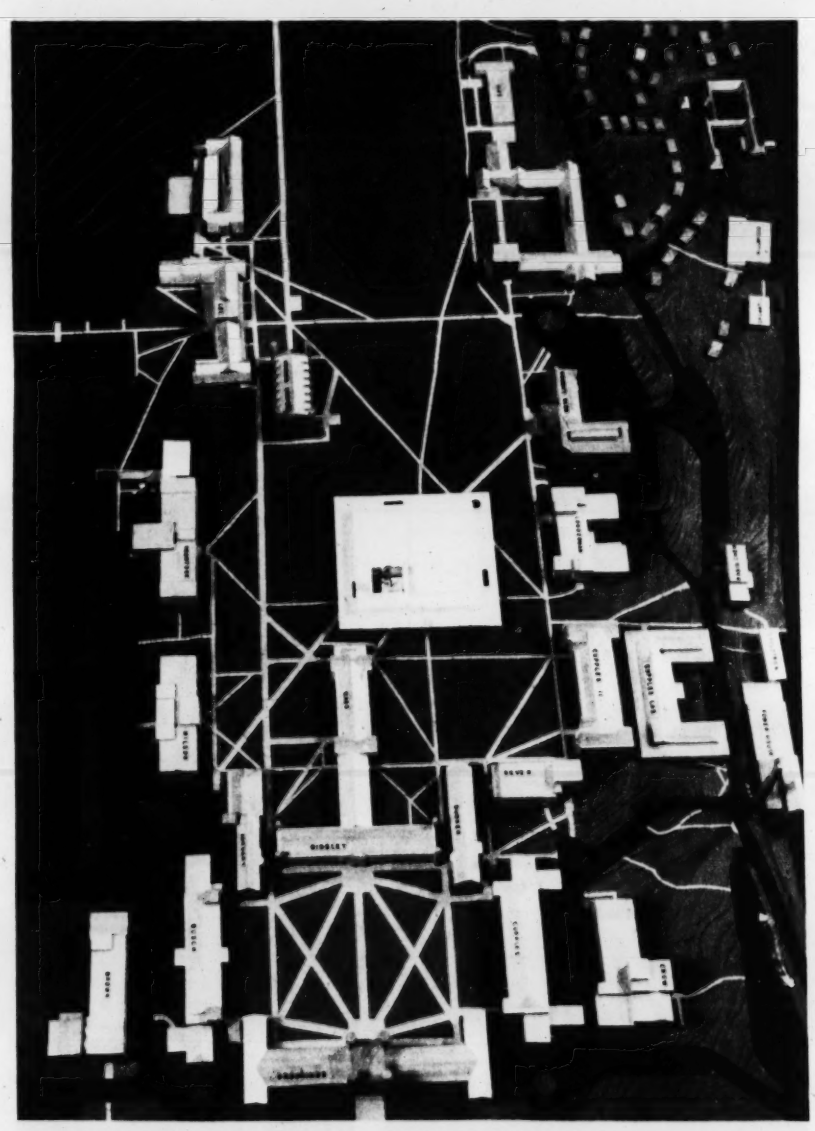

Bill Barton of Jefferson City, student at the college, takes trout off lure at Bennett Spring. Rosebery says several colleges teach separate phases of fishing, but only one other, North Carolina State, has as complete a course as his.

Architect's rendering of Washington University's proposed new library, viewed from the southeast. Ground floor walls will be of glass, preserving campus vista. Exterior stone will be Missouri pink granite, matching that used in older campus buildings. Library's proportions also harmonize with earlier structures. Graham Memorial Chapel is at left, Eads Hall on other side.

Model of campus section, west from Brookings Hall, with library in place. To keep vehicles out of heart of campus, architects propose library loading platform north of Louderman Hall with cart-size tunnel to the new building.

$3,500,000 Library Design

Washington University Building to Have Study Areas Among Book Stacks

One of building's features will be the gallery surrounding it. Gallery roof will serve as second-floor promenade.

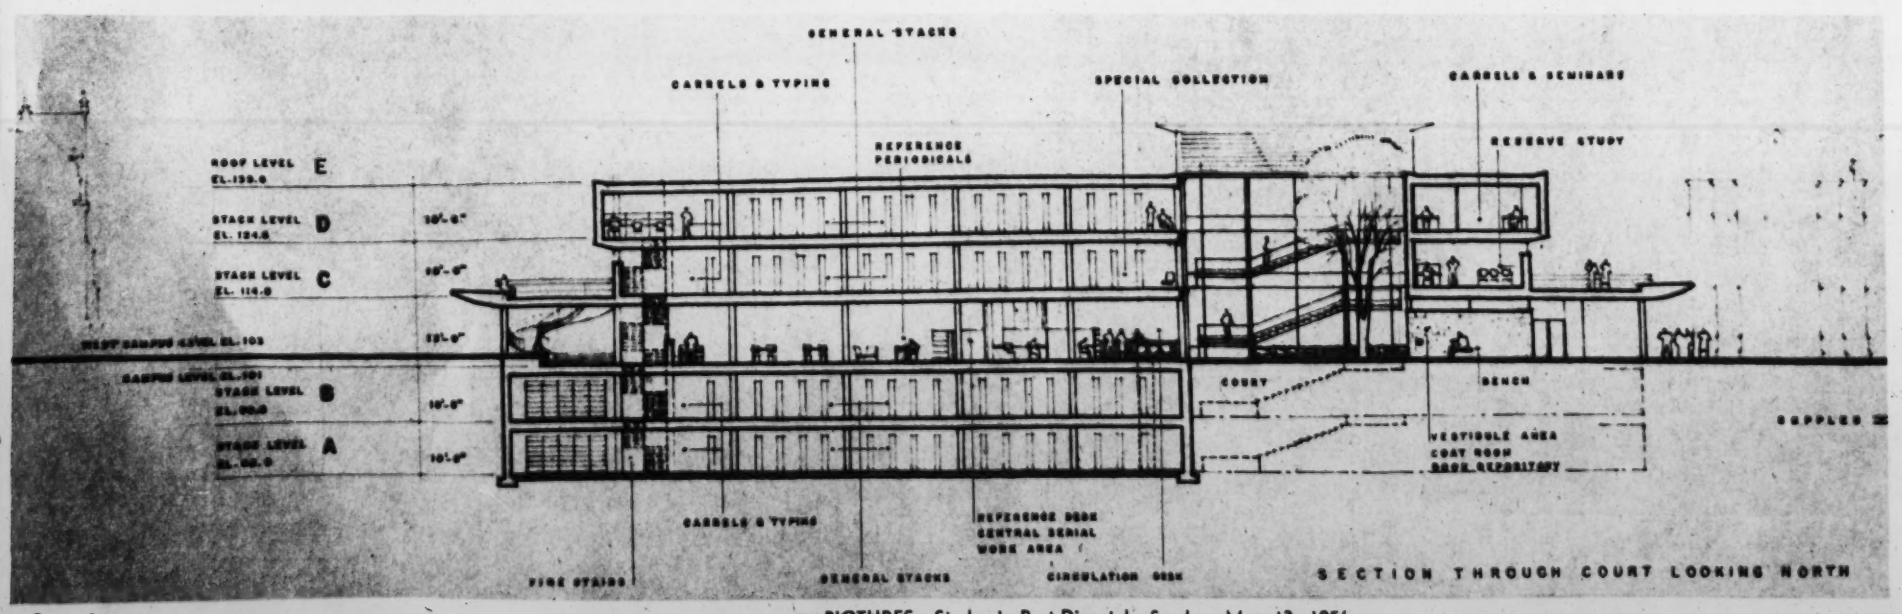

A CONTEMPORARY DESIGN that harmonizes with other buildings on the campus, some of which date to 1900, has been selected for Washington University's new main library. The proposed structure is intended to break down as many barriers as possible between student and book.

The design, by the St. Louis firm of Murphy and Mackey, was chosen by an out-of-town jury in a national architectural competition. Three St. Louis firms and three from other cities participated, on invitation from the university.

For guidance, the participants had a report by a faculty committee that spent nearly two years studying the university's library needs. Gist of the findings was that library users should have easy access to the books, that reading facilities should be close to the books and that the building should have an atmosphere inviting to students and conducive to study.

In the winning design there is no massive reading room so typical of college libraries. Instead, there are clusters of smaller reading areas of varying size. Study facilities will be spaced conveniently through the stack areas where most books will be housed. The building will be air conditioned and its humidity closely regulated. Happily, the committee found that temperature and humidity conditions most comfortable for people also are best for preserving books.

A replacement for overcrowded Ridgley Library, the building will hold 900,000 books and have facilities for 1200 students and 75 faculty members. It will be named the John M. Olin Library, for the Alton industrialist who has given more than $1,000,000 toward its $3,500,000 cost. Construction is tentatively scheduled to start next spring for September, 1958, occupancy. It will be first building in the school's second-century development program.

Sandwich plan, with two floors above and two below ground level, minimizes distance library users must go to get books. To control circulation of books, building will have one entrance, on east. Penthouse is for mechanical equipment. Building, 34 feet high, will be about 175 feet square above ground, exclusive of the gallery.

WEB-FOOTED HOE HANDS

Geese Do Most of the Weeding in Nursery's 60-Acre Evergreen Plot

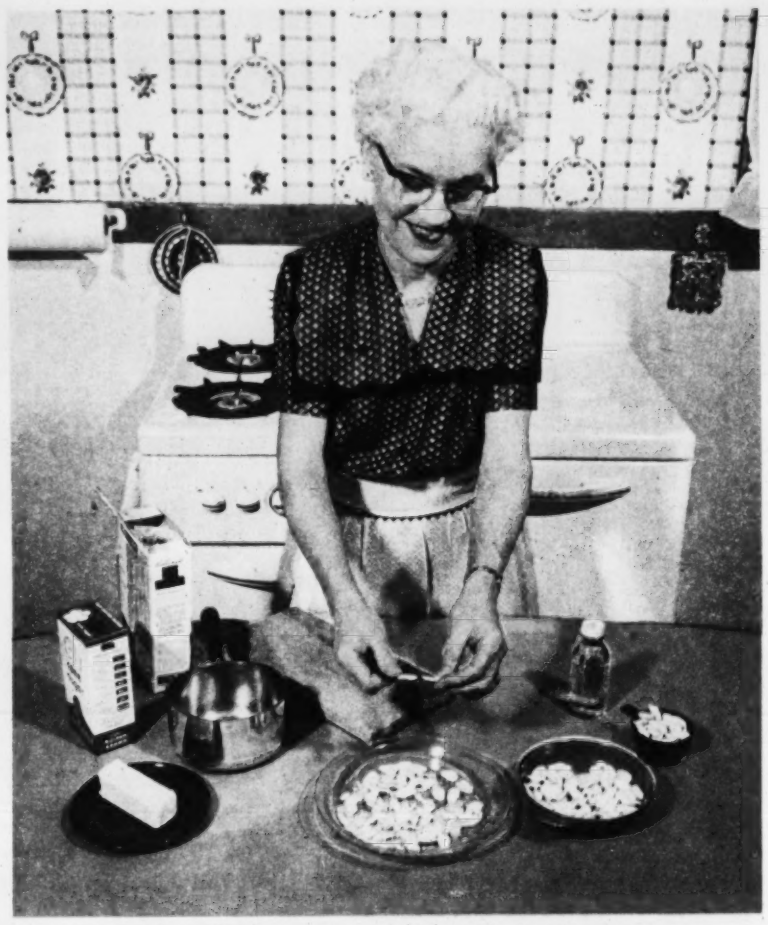

AMID NEAT EVERGREEN ROWS at a nursery near Elsberry, Missouri, this gaggle of geese is hard at work at an unusual occupation—for geese. They are weeding a stock-growing area. As supplementary hoe hands, the birds really earn their keep. Owner Hugh Steavenson of the Forrest Keeling Nursery credits them with doing the work of some 20 laborers keeping down pesty weeds in 60 acres of stock plots. Disdaining the nursery plants, they confine their nibbling to grass and weeds, and are adept at getting under low-growing bushes where a hoer can't reach. The flock, which numbers about 165, can work over a five-acre area in a week or 10 days; grain is placed at one end of a row and water at the other to keep the birds browsing back and forth across a field. Good as the web-footed weeders are, however, some human hoers still are needed, for the geese won't eat certain plants, like smartweed and wild onion. Steavenson got the idea of employing geese in his nursery from the South, where such fowl have been used for several years as weeders in cotton fields and strawberry patches. Geese not only do a good job but cheerfully work seven days a week—and when the growing season is over, their utility doesn't end. Having worked themselves into a plump condition, they can be disposed of for Thanksgiving meals.

Almond Cream Pie, De Luxe Dessert

By MERNA LAZIER

A TOASTED ALMOND CREAM PIE makes a rich, beautiful dessert for special occasions. Mrs. Anna Stratmeyer of St. Louis builds it up from a crisp crumb crust covered with a thin layer of chocolate custard. Over this is poured a vanilla custard containing crunchy almonds, and the final touch is a frill of whipped cream around the edge, dotted with split almonds.

Mrs. Stratmeyer splits the almonds, then toasts them with a little olive oil in a 300-degree oven 15 to 20 minutes or until golden brown. A few halves are reserved for trimming the finished pie, others are crushed or minced finely. Rice cereal is placed in plastic bag to be crushed very fine. It is then mixed with melted butter and brown sugar. Crumbs are pressed into a nine-inch pie pan and baked a few minutes in a 375-degree oven until lightly browned and set.

Custard filling is made with the egg yolks, milk, part of the sugar and vanilla. Gelatin, which has been soaked in milk, is dissolved in this hot mixture. One-half cup of the custard is added to melted chocolate and sweetened with two tablespoons sugar. Both mixtures are allowed to cool. Chocolate mixture is spread over the baked crust. Crushed almonds and stiffly beaten egg whites with one-fourth cup of sugar added are folded into cooled custard, then it is poured into pie shell and chilled. Whipped cream is used to border edge of pie with toasted almond halves stuck into the surface.

INGREDIENTS

One-half cup blanched almonds
One teaspoon olive oil
One tablespoon gelatin
One and three-fourths cups milk
Five-eighths cup sugar
One-fourth teaspoon salt
Three eggs (separated)
One teaspoon vanilla
One square baking chocolate
Whipping cream as desired for garnish

For the crust
Four cups rice cereal
One-fourth cup brown sugar
One-third cup butter

AZALEA GARDEN in the COUNTY

HANDSOME and bold with deep scarlet, comely and delicate with light purple, these azaleas hang heavy with full blossoms. Their resplendence is accentuated by a brilliant sun. These shrubs form a part of the approximately 2000 azalea plants on the property of Vester Mullins at 8045 Park Drive, Hampton Park, in Richmond Heights. Small prim roses, almost hidden, border the azalea bed. Blooms of these azalea plants will last about three weeks. Other varieties, blooming later, provide the yard and garden with a six-week spread of azalea blossoms. But the dark green leaves will last throughout the hot summer and cold winter, give promise of another spring. Mullins began his stand of azaleas 12 years ago.

635-TON MOVING JOB

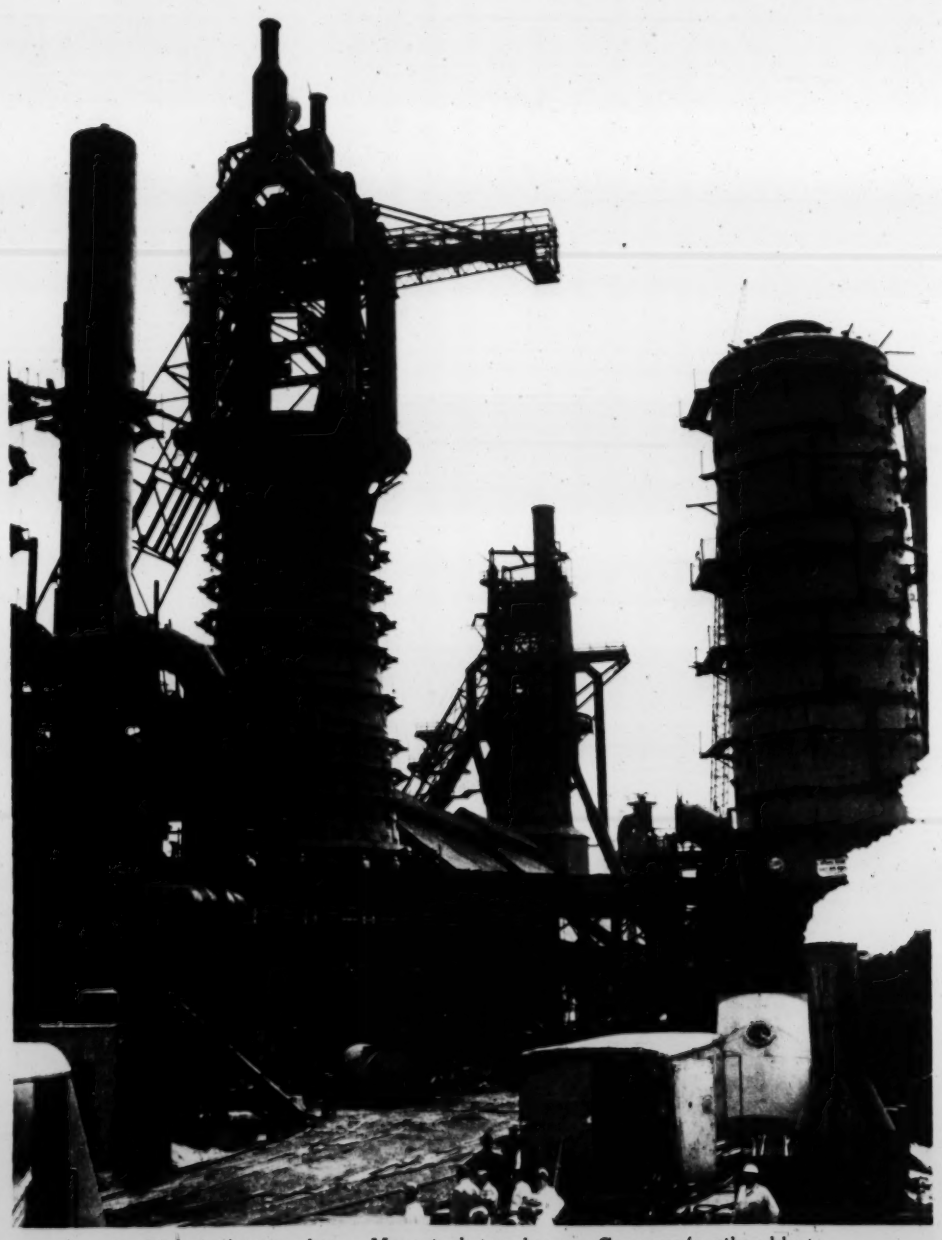

Blast Furnace Shell 172 Feet High Is Installed at Granite City

1. Start of move. The blast furnace shell, 172 feet tall, was pulled toward the left along tracks laid on top of trestle structure, moving on rollers laid in its path. Shell rests on platform on which it was built. The shell includes huge conical stack, gas uptake pipes rising from stack and two bleeder stacks at top. Projecting frameworks are part of system for hoisting raw materials into the blast furnace.

2. At halfway mark, workmen lined up along trestle take rollers from behind the shell, pass them up to be laid ahead of it. Base of the stack is 39 feet in diameter inside, tapering to 17.6 feet at top. In pig iron production, iron ore, coke and limestone are put in top of the stack. Coke combustion frees the iron in the ore.

3. The shell is in place. Move took two hours. Company's other blast furnace is in center background. Large cylinder-shaped object at right is one of three stoves that will heat air for injection into furnace.

WITH FEWER difficulties than householders sometimes encounter in shifting the living room sofa, a blast furnace shell was moved 84 feet at Granite City Steel Company. It was a big, complex job, and the seeming simplicity was the result of detailed planning that began months in advance. The shell weighs 635 tons—as much as 400 automobiles—and is approximately as tall as a 13-story building.

The structure is part of a new blast furnace being constructed by the company to replace a smaller one, built in 1920. Furnace replacement normally involves tearing down the old one and erecting the new unit in the same place. Meantime, considerable production is lost. To keep the unavoidable shutdown time as brief as possible, in face of the heavy demand for steel, the Granite City firm decided to build the shell of the new furnace a short distance from the old one and then move it into place. Cost of building a replacement on a new permanent site would have been prohibitive, since other expensive installations are integrated with the existing location.

Because much of the foundation of the old furnace will be used in the new one, the shell was built on a platform 38 feet high. On moving day, the shell was hitched to a winch and pulled on steel rollers over a specially constructed trestle to the old site. Once in place, the shell was lowered by jacks to its foundation.

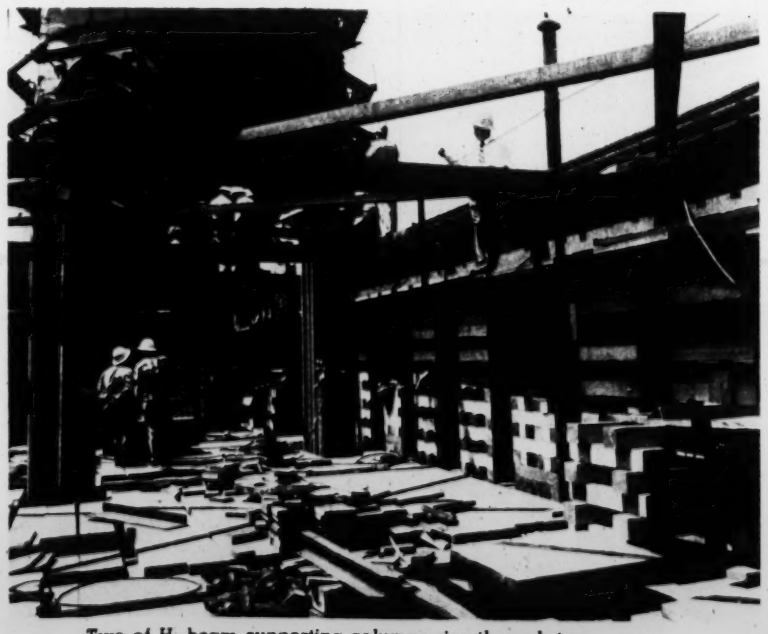

Throughout the move, Charles L. Welty Jr. of Pittsburgh, who was in charge of the operation, remained as calm as though he were superintending the transfer of a carton of cotton. "We know everything has been engineered right," he would say reassuringly to those with less stable nerves.

Much work—including installation of the shell's lining of 725,000 refractory bricks—remains before the new furnace is finished, about July 1. It will produce 1200 tons of molten pig iron daily, double the capacity of the old furnace. Meanwhile, because of the off-site construction method, used only three times previously in the history of the American steel industry, the Granite City company got 50,000 extra tons of production from the old furnace.

Workmen on trestle adjust steel rollers. Rollers were placed on three sets of four rails, one set on each side of trestle and one in middle. Shell base rested on a steel framework called a traveler.

Two of H-beam supporting columns rise through temporary flooring. As shell was lowered onto columns, wood cribbing beneath main trestle beams was removed. Moving was done by a Pittsburgh corporation that specializes in such work.

THE $100,000 LOOK

Store Puts Money in Window to Attract Attention, Gets It

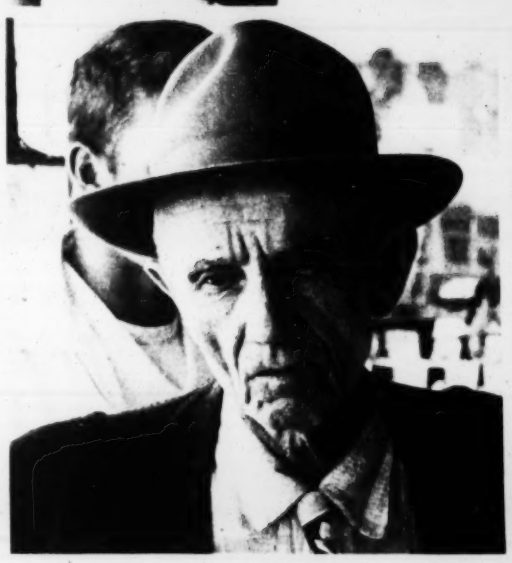

MOST PEOPLE go through life without ever seeing, much less possessing, $100,000 in cash at one time. The sight of this much money in one pile is enough to stop almost anyone in his tracks. And that was precisely the reaction of hundreds of passers-by of all ages when a Maplewood jewelry store displayed a hundred grand—in brand-new, crisp $1 bills—in one of its windows.

Immediate smiles on the faces of most viewers first reflected amused awe. Some faces broadened into anticipated ownership. Others gazed soberly—but just as longingly. And some first had to convince themselves it wasn't play money.

So many people stuck heads in the door of the store and asked if samples were being given away that this standard wit became boring to private detectives, Maplewood police, store and bank personnel who were on guard.

At night the money was returned to the bank in Maplewood from which it was obtained. The three-day stunt was designed to promote a product which sponsors a television give-away show.

The photos on this page are of passers-by who visited the store to look at the money.

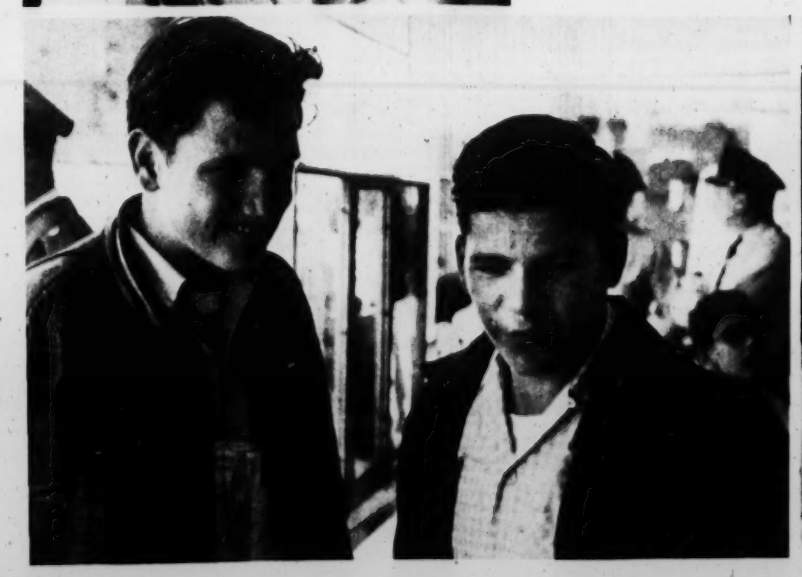

View, from sidewalk, looking into store window containing $100,000 in cash. Each bundle, held together by rubber bands, contained one thousand $1 bills. Total weight of the money was nearly 300 pounds. The money was carried from bank to store and back in canvas bags. Each time it was returned to the bank it was counted.

Barkley's Home Town Pays Its Last Respects

In Paducah, a city of 32,828, street outside undertaking establishment is filled with mourners waiting their turns to file past open casket of the former Vice President. Schools were dismissed, some industrial plants shut down, construction workers stopped their labors in honor of the "Veep."

TWELVE YEARS AFTER the end of the Civil War, Alben William Barkley was born on a farm in Graves County, Kentucky. He left the farm to attend college, tended fires to help pay his way. In 1901, at the age of 24, he was admitted to the bar at Paducah. There, he was elected to the first office that he held in 50 years of public service—prosecuting attorney of McCracken County. From this beginning, Barkley went on to win his country's respect, and its affection, as a member of the House of Representatives in Washington, as Senator, as Vice President in the Truman Administration. Finally, after only a brief period out of office, he again ran for his old seat in the Senate and returned to the Capitol as the junior Senator from Kentucky.

Senator Barkley was 78 years old when he died of a heart attack while addressing students at Washington and Lee University. After simple funeral services in Washington, his body was taken back home. Most activities in Paducah came to a halt as mourning townsfolk, as well as distinguished visitors, paid final tribute to the man who had started his political career there so many years before.

Mrs. Frank Wyatt pauses to lay a hand on Senator Barkley's brow. A year older than Barkley, she said she had voted for him every time he ran for office. A member of the honor guard, which came from Washington with the body, stands by the casket. In photo, below, another woman touches Barkley's hand.

Mrs. Ollie Hanson, an old friend of the family, listens to grave-side service from seat on nearby grave marker. Fifteen hundred persons filled the Broadway Methodist Church of Paducah for the 20-minute service, thousands of others waited outside. Negro servants from Barkley's home sat in the front row. More than 40 Senators came to Paducah for the funeral, as did former President Truman.

Sniper Shoots Up A Church Service

As some 400 worshipers gathered outside the St. Dumitru's Romanian Orthodox Church on New York's West 89th street for the midnight observance of the Eastern Orthodox Easter, a volley of shots was fired into the congregation. The church warden, Vasili Cucuia, was killed and five other persons were wounded. Less than 48 hours later, Todurchi Sava (left), a 60-year-old handyman, surrendered to the district attorney and was booked on a charge of homicide as the sniper who fired at the church-goers. Detective at right holds rifle from which police said the shots were fired.

Associated Press Photo

On morning after the shooting, worshipers resume the postponed service. Former Romanian Princess Ileana, who was present the night before, wears shawl as she joins in the morning worship. Third-floor window across the street, where man is visible, is one from which shots were fired. Police described Romanian-born Sava as a "disgruntled dissenter" and a heavy drinker. Sava, who lived in neighborhood of the church for 20 years but was not a member, rented room five weeks before the shooting. The congregation meets in one of the brownstone houses that line the street.

ST. LOUIS WEATHER BALL

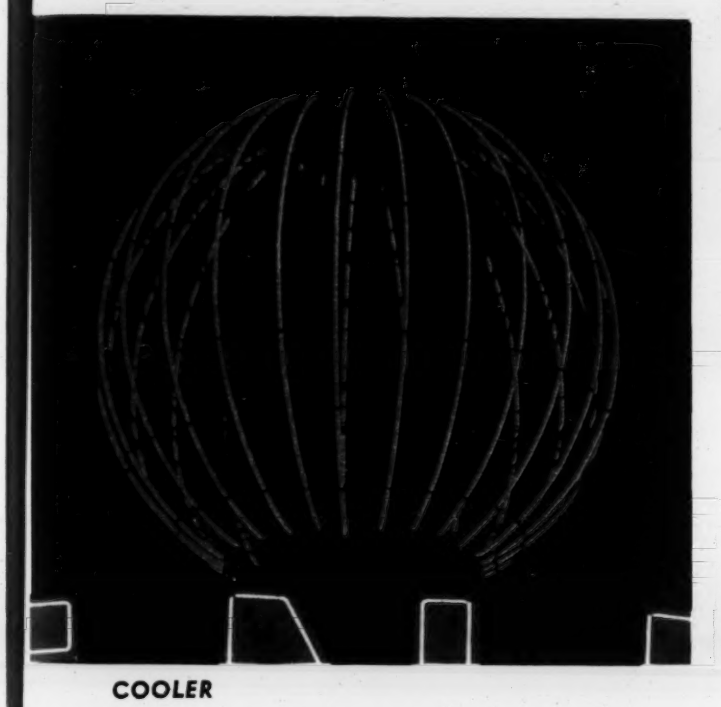

With Colored Lights It Signals Government Predictions

WARMER

NO CHANGE

COOLER

Photos by JACK GOULD of the PICTURES Staff

A NEON-LIGHTED "WEATHER BALL" has been put in operation here to relay the weatherman's forecasts over much of the downtown section and adjoining areas. The ball, eight feet in diameter, shows steady green when no temperature change is expected, red for warmer and blue for cooler. When precipitation is predicted, the ball flashes in the color of the temperature trend expected to accompany the moisture.

The forecast signal is operated by the General American Life Insurance Company. It is on top of the firm's 12-story building at Fifteenth and Locust streets. At night, the ball—199 feet above the ground—can be seen 10 to 12 miles away in places where hills or tall buildings do not block it. However, it is intended primarily to serve close-in sections.

Forecasts shown are received by teletype from the United States Weather Bureau. The ball is in operation from 7 a.m. to midnight.

START OF THE TOURIST SEASON IN ATHENS

A woman with long and determined stride leads a throng of sight-seers on the rocky Acropolis of Athens. The Acropolis, a prominence on which numerous ruins of the classic Greek period are situated, is a must for tourists. Last year, Americans set a record for foreign traveling. An estimated 2,000,000 persons will travel abroad this year, surpassing the number who set out from home in 1955.

BLIND MAN'S TRIUMPH

Van Johnson in Mystery Film "23 Paces to Baker Street"

1. A blind American playwright, Phil Hannon (Van Johnson), sits in his London apartment and broods. His new play, appearing in the city, is a success, but Phil is bored and frustrated. He whiles away time by dictating unnecessary changes for the play into his tape recorder. His English secretary, Bob Matthews (Cecil Parker), transcribes the changes and rushes them to the theater.

2. Jean Lennox, Phil's fiancee before he became blind, arrives from the United States to try to renew their romance. Phil, bitter about his handicap, rebuffs her and goes to a pub to drink. There, he hears two voices in the next room, apparently plotting a kidnaping. The barmaid can give Phil only a sketchy description of the two persons. He leaves remembering the plotters only by their voices and the scent of a perfume one wore.

3. Back in his apartment, Phil dictates the overheard dialogue into his tape recorder and calls the police. The police see no sinister implication in the bits of conversation. Determined to find the plotters on his own, Phil follows clues to an employment agency, sends Jean to look it over under pretense of hiring a servant. The agency sends Miss MacDonald (Patricia Laffan) to see Jean (Vera Miles). Phil eavesdrops on their conversation, recognizes Alice's voice and her perfume as belonging to one of the plotters. Phil's secretary follows her to an old warehouse.

4. A servant girl telephones Phil to set up an appointment to meet "her father," a Mr. Murch, another member of the agency. When he finds Phil is blind, Mr. Murch leads him into a ruined building, tells him to open the door and walk ahead. Phil feels fresh air, stops just short of a fatal plunge. This attempt on his life, and the murder of the servant girl, bring police back into the case.

5. A child is kidnaped in the way Phil had heard the plotters describe. At the scene, he finds the child's doll, which has traces of the now-familiar perfume. Phil remembers that the ruined building where he was almost murdered also was redolent with the same scent. He sends police to the warehouse.

6. There, the kidnaping gang is caught. When police phone Phil to congratulate him on the capture, the telephone suddenly goes dead. Phil hears footsteps. He switches off the light, since he will have the advantage in the dark. He struggles with an intruder, who falls from the fire escape and is killed. It is Miss MacDonald dressed as a man. Realizing he has solved a crime almost single-handed, Phil gains back his self-respect, happily resumes his engagement with Jean.

I'll always remember...

A LESSON FROM DAD

by WILL ROGERS, Jr.

Tolerance is a great thing. It's not easy to learn, and it's not easy to practice. But I'll never forget the lesson my father taught me about it.

It was while I was still in grammar school, after the first World War. Several prominent people were in for dinner that night, and the subject of disarmament came up. I knew Dad was what they called in those days a "Big Army, Big Navy man" (a throwback to the Teddy Roosevelt era). Apparently, some of the guests weren't.

I remember entering into the discussion with both feet, taking the family position, of course. When one of the grown-ups started to argue back to me, pointing out that there was something to be said for disarmament, I snapped right back at him and then appealed to Dad. Of course, Dad already had a wide reputation for making sharp commentaries on the contemporary scene. But to my surprise, he said, "Now wait a minute, son . . ."

"But you said...and you wrote..."

"Listen, son," Dad went on, "I think one way and I feel I am right. But other people, who think differently, also feel they are right. Don't be so cocksure. Remember even your old father's position may be wrong. Anyway, it's impolite to argue with your elders at the table."

I've forgotten who was there, and I may have forgotten Dad's exact words, but I'll never forget the lesson I learned that night—that tolerance, understanding and a willingness to listen to the arguments of others are among the greatest things a person can have.

Now, long years after, I realize something that I never noticed at the time: it was Dad's sympathy and his readiness to concede sincerity in others, that allowed him to make the pointed remarks he did and yet remain friends with the people he criticized. ■

TOLD FOR THE FIRST TIME:

How to drop an H-BOMB

Here's the timely story of a unique Air Force assignment: putting a bomb on target without losing the bomber

WASHINGTON, D.C.

On March 1, 1954, A South Pacific atoll disappeared with an excruciating explosion into a giant mushroom cloud 100 miles in diameter. The nearest observers watched from a B-36 bomber, 47,000 feet up and 25 slant-miles away. Still, the terrible blast tossed the great plane like a silver snowflake. It wrenched off the bomb-bay doors and ripped patches from the fuselage. Heat scorched the outside aluminum and blackened the instrument panel inside. That the occupants weren't killed was a near miracle.

Their close call shook the whole Air Force. Obviously, no bomber could let go of the giant explosive and get 25 miles away before the bomb hit the ground. From this fact sprang an unexpected but basic question: How could a plane drop the H-bomb — and survive?

Today, with new tests going on in the Pacific, PARADE can report that the answer has been found. It results, as such things usually do, from long, painstaking experiment. Handling of A-bombs as well as H-bombs was involved. Split-second aerial maneuvers, testing in the extreme both men and planes, were plotted by slide-rule and equation, then proved out by trial and error.

Actually, bomb-blast hazard existed even in World War II. The birth of the A-bomb multiplied the problem a thousand-fold. The B-29 Superfortresses, which laid the first atomic eggs, were instructed to make a diving turn to escape the awful aftermath as fast as possible. That turned out to be a mistake: by diving, a B-29 exposed its underbelly to the A-blast's full force.

Many other methods were tried. The goal was an evasive maneuver that would speed the plane away from the blast without putting it through contortions so severe as to buckle the wings or impose a paralyzing strain on the crew. The exact heat wave and blast force had to be measured against the ability of plane and pilot to take it. The pressure a plane could withstand in a climb, dive or turn was worked out with mathematical exactness. So were the exact angle of bank, air speed and rate of turn the plane should (or could) make.

Tests for Fighter-Bombers

The scientists had a separate, if related, problem in jet fighter-bombers equipped to carry A-bombs. Their best attack was to slip under enemy radar and streak in at tree-top level — a suicidal altitude, as now was clear. The solution seemed to be to send the plane to an I.P. (Initial Point) perhaps 10 to 15 miles from the target. There it would zoom up at an incline, releasing its bomb at a pre-fixed altitude.

The effect was to toss the bomb, like a shot put, in a huge arc at the target. Meantime, the jet fighter would reverse direction by looping over on its back, twisting with a half-roll into normal flying position and speeding off.

The jet boys became amazingly accurate at this. (In practice, the planes carry dummy A- and H-bombs the exact size, shape and weight of the real weapons.) But their exercises were not without danger. On one occasion, the heavy bomb clung to the fighter as it swung over on its back and threw the whole delicate performance off balance; the plane barely escaped crashing. "A real hairy maneuver," commented one pilot to PARADE.

Because a pilot streaking 600 miles an hour can't easily pick out his I.P., the maneuver had to be modified. Instead of a gradual incline, pilots were instructed to switch abruptly from horizontal to vertical flight at the target's edge. This meant turning a 90-degree corner from straight-and-level to straight up-and-down, a terrific strain on both fighters and flyers.

Today a secret device automatically releases the bomb at a pre-set altitude. When bomb and plane part, the jet-tossed bomb continues shooting almost straight up. The fighter flips over on its back, turns upright and beats it out of there. The exact height the bomb is released and the distance it travels before it loses momentum and falls on the target, of course, depend on the bomb's speed and the plane's speed. Both are figured with scientific precision. Pilots fly strictly on instruments and every life-saving move is calculated to a fraction of a second.

How Bigger Planes Do It

B-47 pilots are trained in the same square-corner maneuver so they, too, can carry out L.A.B. (Low Altitude Bombing) missions. This means the swift, medium jet bombers can attack at 50 feet or 50,000.

What about the B-36, the big bomber assigned to deliver the H-bomb? Its problem couldn't be solved by hedgehopping and low-altitude acrobatics. The scientists weighed known factors against past experience and concluded the big planes should catch the blast on the tail. This would keep them from taking the shock on their broad, vulnerable bellies or backs.

Numerous turns and maneuvers were tested. Finally, in contrast to the first diving turns used by the B-29s, a climbing turn was decided upon. The exact degree of turn, calculated to a hair, is a military secret. So is the speed with which the bomb is dropped (something else that was modified after considerable research and testing). This much can be said: When the H-bomb explodes, the plane that laid it will be soaring in the opposite direction.

What's it like to drop an H-bomb? Here's how it is described by pilots who have gone through the experience:

The bomb itself is so heavy it must be loaded aboard a B-36 with an outsize hydraulic jack. Once airborne, the bomb is armed by an expert weaponeer. The B-36 approaches the target at an altitude of more than 50,000 feet. On signal, the H-bomb is sprung loose. The plane, suddenly free of its great load, lurches violently upward. The pilot goes into a climbing turn and gets out of there.

For a brief interval all is quiet. Then comes a blinding flash, followed by what the pilots call the "double whammy" — the separate, almost simultaneous shocks of the bomb burst and the shock wave rebounding up from the earth. If all has gone well, that's that.

Pilots hope they will never have to drop the H-bomb except in practice. But they are prepared, down to split-second timing, just in case. The simple command, "Bombs away," has become an exact science. ■

Adams: Excuse me, Mr. Tremont, but what facts?

Tremont: Why, facts about the company's product, its dividends, its chance for getting bigger. Nice thing about being part owner is that if the company grows you can grow with it. Good way to get ahead in the world, eh, Adams?

Adams: But how do you buy stock, sir?

Tremont: See a broker with a Member Firm of the New York Stock Exchange. First time I went I was scared. Turned out to be most likable fellow I ever met. Gave me information about some companies, how they were doing. Warned me the price of stock could go down as well as up. Said don't ever buy on "tips" without the facts. I started buying good common stock. Never regretted it. Now Adams – Adams! Where'd he go, Miss Waterbury?

Waterbury: He's gone to call your broker, Mr. Tremont.

TWO ACROBATS ARE A LOT

The dazzling array of arms, legs and torsos you see in the picture above is no optical illusion. The human-windmill effect is the result of a multiple exposure, made in total darkness, of the two (don't count 'em) Bagdy Brothers, Samy and Yakia, famed Egyptian tumblers who are really first cousins and descended from a family of acrobats.

Their treadmill routine took six hours — and a few broken vertebrae — to perfect. Samy, who is 29, lies flat on his back, rigid from the base of his spine to the top of his head. Yakia, 18 and suppler, balances on Samy's feet. Samy's legs start pumping, and Yakia, arms outstretched, starts spinning around in a circle. Dizzy way to make a living, eh?

What does she see? Mrs. Dixon says the crystal above can show her the future.

FIVE WHO FIGURED IN DIXON FORECASTS THAT CAME TRUE →

GEORGE MILLER, business associate: Mrs. Dixon told him the man at the next desk was having a heart attack. He did.

Washington's

Even VIPs listen to prophet

WASHINGTON, D.C.

LAST JULY 6, a woman suddenly slid out from under a hair dryer here and dashed to a phone to call her real-estate office. "George," she told her assistant urgently, "get an ambulance and a doctor quickly. Mr. Mitchell is having a heart attack."

The call is stamped on George Miller's memory for life. "Mitchell, one of our salesmen, was sitting at a desk behind me," he explains. "He had just returned from vacation, and I had never seen him looking better. With the telephone still in my hand, I turned to look at him. As I did, he keeled over with a heart attack."

Mrs. Jeane Dixon, who made the call, says: "I was sitting under the dryer when I had a vision of Mr. Mitchell having a heart attack. Naturally, I rushed to call the office."

There are those in Washington — including some in high places — to whom the eerie episode is credible simply because it involved the incredible Jeane Dixon. An amateur seeress with a crystal ball, she has foretold events for presidential assistants, cabinet members, senators, ambassadors, society leaders and political columnists. Some things she has told Washington society, newspapers headlines later told the world. Her reputation has even crossed the Atlantic, partly because of her forecast of Sir Winston Churchill's postwar election defeat and later triumphant comeback.

Her crystal-gazing is only a hobby with Mrs. Dixon. Her career is the real-estate business she and her husband, James, conduct. She does not charge for her psychic services, inviting wealthy patrons to contribute to their favorite charity instead. Recently, she says, she turned down a $100,000 offer to appear on TV because the producer insisted on dictating some of the forecasts.

Attractive, dark-haired, intense, she sometimes gives the impression of "not being with you" — of concentrating instead on mystic impulses swirling about her. Obviously sincere about her readings, she hopes and believes they do good.

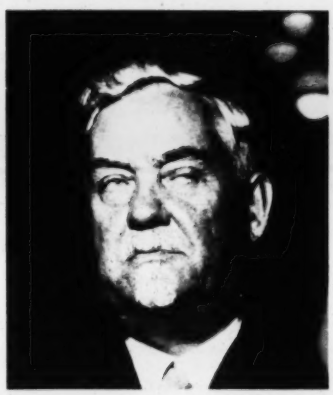

NATIVE DANCER: Favored in the 1953 Kentucky Derby, he lost. Mrs. Dixon saw it all days before in her crystal ball.

SIR WINSTON CHURCHILL: His post-war fall from power and later return in triumph were early Dixon predictions.

HOUSE SPEAKER SAM RAYBURN: Mrs. Dixon predicted downfall in 1952, return by his 73rd birthday. He made it.

SOVIET PREMIER BULGANIN: She said a man with "high, wavy hair" — like his — would replace Malenkov.

by JACK ANDERSON and FRED BLUMENTHAL

PARADE WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENTS

Incredible crystal-gazer

Jeane Dixon, who predicted the President's illness and the Kremlin shakeup

She is said to drop in at the White House occasionally. "About six weeks before Ike's illness," she told PARADE, "I saw a dark cloud over his head in the crystal ball. I told a high official at the White House that Ike would become ill. About 11 o'clock on the night of the President's heart attack, I received a call from this official. He told me of the President's illness and asked if it would be fatal. I told him it would not. He exclaimed, 'Thank God,' and hung up."

Mrs. Dixon says she can get insight about a person by touching his fingertips and feeling the vibrations. A handshake also tells her things. So do clothes, colors, mannerisms. But mainly she relies on her crystal ball, which she says is not unlike a television set — except that she tunes in on "the channel of psychic vibrations." She sees symbols, dates, figures, names and persons, all in three dimensions and full color.

Her Husband Started It

Her first crystal was given to her as a girl by a boy who had been a playmate since she was 4. (He is now her husband.) When this crystal was stolen in 1943, a White House official presented her with a new one. It lacked the right psychic quality, so James, her husband, gave her another. This she still uses. PARADE reporters, allowed to look into it, saw nothing but their own reflections.

A religious woman, Mrs. Dixon goes to church daily to ask the Lord's help in using her talent. "The Bible says that all events are foreshadowed," she says. "I am just the means of communication." She is a Catholic, which she thinks is a help because "it is primarily Catholics who believe in visions."

Born in Wisconsin of German parents who moved to California when she was small, she grew up on the West Coast. As a child, she had a German nurse who encouraged her to close her eyes and tell what she saw. "Sometimes," she recalls, "I saw things that hadn't happened yet. Once I asked Mother for the black-bordered letter. Mother said she didn't have any such letter. About two weeks later, a black-bordered letter came from Germany telling of the death of my grandfather."

She claims her unusual talent brings her "peace of mind" but not "peace of life." That is because of the constant clamor for her readings. She has one self-adopted restriction: she does not reveal impending tragedies unless they can be averted.

Is Mrs. Dixon a true psychic or a fast-talking entertainer? To check on her occult powers, PARADE interviewed those who know her best. Some skeptics suggest she hedges her forecasts. Her predictions are sufficiently enigmatic, they say, that she can disclaim them if they go wrong. They also note that she is bolder about predicting the far than the near future. Others, like George Miller, swear by her. All agree she seems completely sincere.

One Washington couple told PARADE that Mrs. Dixon had warned against an operation for their baby. They disregarded her and the child died on the operating table. Then they were told they could have no more children. The crystal ball foresaw two healthy children, and Mrs. Dixon is now their godmother.

Another woman claimed her unexpected divorce was foretold to the month. Another heard from the seeress the day PARADE reporters called. Mrs. Dixon predicted trouble with a new maid and described the incident in detail. Events as she described them came true within a matter of hours.

Although she doesn't use the crystal for gambling purposes, Mrs. Dixon "saw" the finish line of the 1953 Kentucky Derby, days before the race. "Native Dancer was the favorite," she says. "But I saw in the ball that he would be second or third. I couldn't tell which because the horses were running too fast." Several people, including a congressman, confirmed that she had made the prediction.

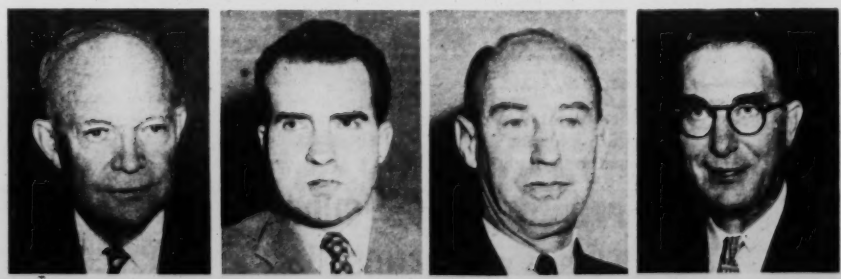

In a 1953 benefit performance with Bob Hope, she stopped the comedian cold. He had played golf with the President that afternoon and asked her to tell him his score. "I told him the exact score," Mrs. Dixon recalls. "He was so dumfounded that I thought our program would break down."

Washington hostesses vie with one another to get Mrs. Dixon to come and tune in on the political future. One still talked-about party she helped to put over was given by famed party-thrower Perle Mesta early in 1945. "At this party," Mrs. Dixon says, "I predicted that President Roosevelt would die in office, Mr. Truman would complete the term and be elected to a full term in 1948."

At a 1952 party, Mrs. Dixon told the late Sen. Robert Taft he would never be President. Later she predicted General Eisenhower would win the White House. She says: "One man who heard me won a $1,000 bet. He offered me $100 after the elections, but I refused it."

AMAZED BOB HOPE is stopped short at a benefit performance after Mrs. Dixon told him his exact score in a golf match with the President.

She sees trouble in 1960

Months before the 1952 election, Mrs. Dixon predicted the downfall of House Speaker Sam Rayburn — but announced he would regain fame when he was 73. Sure enough, Rayburn had to turn the Speaker's gavel over to Rep. Joe Martin that year. But the 1954 election put Rayburn back on the Speaker's rostrum — almost on the date of his 73rd birthday.

The seeress scored another "scoop" in 1953. At a televised party, she shared the cameras with Joseph Davies, former Ambassador to Moscow. She recalls: "Mr. Davies asked what I thought about the new Kremlin lineup after Stalin's death. I said Malenkov wouldn't last two years, and would be succeeded by a man with high wavy hair, parted on the side. Mr. Davies was amused. He predicted Malenkov would stay in office until he died or was assassinated."

Crystal gazing won out. Malenkov was ousted after 23 months. "When I saw the newspaper pictures of the new Premier," Mrs. Dixon says, "I was tempted to send one to Mr. Davies with a ring around Bulganin's high, wavy hair."

Her crystal ball is non-political. "Some election years the Republicans love me," she says. "Other years, it's Democrats." Right now, she should be the darling of the GOP. She told PARADE: "President Eisenhower will win — if the Republicans aren't too complacent." She counts out Adlai Stevenson, says Averell Harriman will "never call the White House home" and thinks Sen. Estes Kefauver should have waited until 1960.

Vice President Richard Nixon she considers underestimated. The crystal ball "shows his shadow encircling the world." Of New York's ex-Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, she says flatly: "He will be assistant President in Ike's second term."

On the world scene, Mrs. Dixon came up with this exclusive forecast for PARADE: "Prime Minister Nehru of India will not remain in power much longer. He will recede into the background and his policies will not prevail. One of two men will take over. Their names passed through the crystal quickly, but they appeared to be Deshmuki and Desra."

Looking Farther Ahead

But Mrs. Dixon thinks Americans should be most concerned with the more distant future — specifically the 1960s, which the crystal shows as "years of upheaval at home and international eruptions abroad, but not necessarily war." She adds: "Russia will do some good things, but also some terrible things. Americans will have to rise personally, physically, mentally and spiritually to the challenge."

As for the 1960 election, Mrs. Dixon thinks it will be dominated by labor and won by a Democrat. But he will be assassinated or die in office "though not necessarily in his first term."

Despite these clouds, she does see some brightness in the future. "Things will get better, much better, in the '70s," she says. "In that decade, we will really have peace." ■

Beauty Expert Discovers Why . . .

Older Women Look Younger!

By NANCY ANN STOKES

I WAS there last Tuesday night, when Hollywood's leading beauty authority, Mr. Ern Westmore, revealed the 3 things that make a woman look older. Then he showed how to remove 5, 10 even 15 years from your appearance with nothing more than a lipstick and eyebrow pencil. It was so ridiculously easy I was amazed.

You see, to create a youthful appearance you must first understand what makes a woman look older. If, while applying lipstick, you turn the corners of your mouth downward, you sag the expression of your face. Even more distressing, "bent-down" lips make your nose appear longer and your chin heavily drooped.

For a youthful appearance flatter the corners of your lips with a pleasant upward flourish. Your face will suddenly appear younger. Your nose more delicate. Your chin firm and proud. You'll give "lift" to your features, freshness to your face.

Beauty Secret Number Two

What could be a more cherished possession than the flashing eyes of youth? And the secret to eyes that shimmer and shine with a magical twinkle is the way you shape your brows.

Flat brows burden your face with a top-heavy look. Thick brows cloud your eyes with the drowsy stare of middle age. Arch your brows too high and you're left with a gaping, vacant expression. Then what is the perfect shaped eyebrow? Oddly enough there are 5 perfect eyebrows . . . but only one is meant for you.

You see, there are 5 basic shapes of faces. Either you have an oval shape face, a round shape face, a square, oblong or triangle shape face. And there's a special way to arch your eyebrows for your shape face. In a moment you'll discover just which shape brows can reawaken blossoming youth in your face. But first, let's discuss your big stride to youthful loveliness.

Your Face Never Grows Old

Did you know that your face never grows old? Yes, once you've reached the age of 21 all your facial features are set for life. From 21 years on you'll always have the same eyes, the same nose, the same chin. Your features never change . . . but your skin does! Your face doesn't age . . . it's your skin that grows old. And nothing telegraphs age faster than dark under-eye circles . . . unsightly marks and blemishes . . . or lines and wrinkles that weave a murky "cobweb" in your complexion. That's why you must wipe away these signs and lines of age once and for all! You must stop your complexion from shouting your age to the world!

Right now you are probably saying . . . "Well, you've told me the three things that'll make me look younger. The right shape lips, proper eyebrows and a perfect, flawless complexion. But just how can I accomplish these things?" So let's start at the beginning.

Lips Meant for You

In Hollywood there's an old saying . . . "Nature just gave you lips . . . but Ern Westmore gives Beauty to your lips." What's his secret?—his plastic Hollywood lip outlines. And I've made special arrangements for you to get a complete set of these easy-to-use lip-outlines as a FREE GIFT.

Then select the proper lip outline for your shape face—place it over your lips . . . and fill in with lipstick. Your newly shaped lips will remove years from your appearance and add vivid warmth to your face.

Now Let's Give You Beautiful Eyes

Here again, you use another Ern Westmore beauty-aid that's yours as a free gift . . . his Hollywood eyebrow outlines. Simply select the right eyebrow outline for your shape face . . . place it over your brow . . . then fill in with your eyebrow pencil. Your eyes will sparkle and gleam even at the end of a long, long evening.

But wait! . . . You're not finished yet. To complete your new and thrilling appearance you must take one more beauty-step. You must rid yourself of every line, mark, wrinkle and blemish. You must make your skin supple and smooth . . . give yourself an appealing "peaches-and-cream" complexion.

Tells Truth About Movie Stars

"Often people ask me, how is it so many actresses who are "older" can still play glamour-girl parts? It's simple. It's not how old you are . . . but how old you look! These actresses just don't happen to stay young-looking . . . they've got certain secrets.

That's why I invite every woman over 25-years-old to read this page. Here are the same beauty-tricks we use on the stars. Try them yourself. See if the first two tricks alone don't make you look 10 years younger in just a few minutes."

Here's How . . .

Can you imagine a make-up so incredible, it covers up marks, blemishes and wrinkles completely out of sight? Can you imagine a make-up so unusual it makes dark circles and crows feet disappear instantly! Can you imagine a make-up so different from any you've ever tried. It removes the shiny gleam from oily skin . . . restores a dewy-freshness to dry skin . . . glides a wondrous smoothness onto "crepe-paper" skin . . . actually conceals all your flaws without masking your face in a harsh, "made-up" look. And can you imagine a make-up so revolutionary it enlivens dull-skin with a bright luminous glow—makes sallow complexions blossom forth in subtle tones of pink . . . pampers every skin with a feathery-light texture . . . and gives you the glorious effect of constantly being seen in a delightful candlelight glow. Yes, a magical make-up that blends so naturally with your complexion you can't even tell where the make-up ends and skin begins.

Lasts 24 Hours . . . and You Don't Even Need Powder

And just imagine! It lasts 24 hours! You apply a few drops in the morning . . . your complexion remains so fresh and bright you need no more make-up . . . NOT EVEN A TOUCH-UP . . . for the entire day! Because here for the first time is a complete make-up—a foundation, powder and cover-up all in one.

'SILENT SOUND'

It's medicine's newest way to relieve aches

by ANDREW HAMILTON

A middle-aged arthritis sufferer, a 6-year-old boy with agonizing neck-muscle pains, a ballet dancer with a nasty skin ulcer — all have received dramatic, near-miraculous relief from "medicine's newest magic," ultrasonics.

The little boy, sobbing uncontrollably before visiting the doctor, happily played baseball three hours after his first treatment. The arthritic walked normally for the first time in 16 years. And the dancer's ulcer cleared up in a month "without leaving a scar."

Hopeful cases such as those — usually involving banishment of pain and swelling — are being reported more and more often in medical journals.

For in the past five years, research with ultrasonics — in New York, Washington, Chicago, Los Angeles, Denver — has surged ahead. Today, ultrasonic therapy is coming out of the laboratory and into hospitals, clinics and doctors' offices.

Exactly what is ultrasonics?

Three Theories

It can best be described as "silent sound" — that is, sound too shrill or high-pitched for the human ear to detect. But even the experts aren't sure exactly how this inaudible sound works on aching muscles or inflamed tissues.

There are three theories: 1) Sound waves "massage" body cells, increase blood supply and stimulate metabolism; 2) The waves are converted to heat (which cannot be felt) and thus benefit affected tissues; 3) The waves create subtle, beneficial chemical changes in cells themselves.

Whatever the answer, treatment with ultrasound is remarkably simple. Dr. John H. Aldes of Los Angeles, a pioneer in the field, recently demonstrated how it works.

The instrument that produces ultrasound is about as large as a portable dishwasher. It is covered with levers, dials and lights. From one side extends an electric cable, capped with a stainless steel "sonic head" that resembles a radio microphone.

The sonic head is placed against the

Q. How does she keep her complexion this clear?

A.

She keeps tiny clogged pores from causing trouble —with Lifebuoy soap! Today's Lifebuoy is good news for everyone, especially teen-agers, because it contains a new bacteria-fighter called TMTD.

Lifebuoy with TMTD helps clear your complexion of blemish-causing bacteria that the usual toilet soap just can't remove. These bacteria are the tiny trouble-makers that get into clogged pores, help make them grow into full-fledged blemishes.

What's more, the protection of TMTD stays with your complexion under make-up and between wash-ups. Treat your complexion to a daily facial with mild, fragrant Lifebuoy. Lever Brothers Company unconditionally guarantees you'll love what Lifebuoy does for your complexion—or your money refunded!

Good results—but no cure-all affected part of the body (see photo) — or an ailing foot or hand is placed under water and the sonic head is moved slowly back and forth about a half-inch from the skin.

When the machine is turned on, the patient hears only a soft hum. There is no vibration, no feeling whatever.

Dr. Aldes explained that inside the sonic head there is a piece of quartz crystal about the size of a silver dollar. When alternating current is passed through the crystal, it contracts and expands at the rate of 1,000,000 times per second, producing sound waves at the same rate.

This is called the "piezo-electric effect." These sound waves are what enter your hand, leg, back, etc., to relieve aches and pains. They penetrate to a depth of about two inches and can be beamed, reflected or refracted like rays of light.

Ultrasonic waves pass through skin, muscle, blood and bone. But air stops them cold. That's why an uneven surface, like a hand or a leg, often must be treated under water. The course of treatment, says Dr. Aldes, usually consists of a series of 12 ultrasound radiations, daily or every other day. Each treatment lasts three to 10 minutes.

Work with ultrasonics began in England back in 1883. The theory that ultrasound consisted of waves pitched too high for the human ear to hear is credited to Pierre Curie, the French scientist best known for his discovery of radium.

3,000 Cases Treated

It wasn't till the 1920s that doctors in the U.S. expressed interest in ultrasound for medical treatment. At that time there were skeptics in the medical world. There still are some.

But since 1950 the U.S. has taken the lead over European researchers in the field of ultrasonics. Dr. Aldes himself has treated more than 3,000 selected cases with ultrasound. The result has been successful in about four cases out of five.

At the Columbia University (New York) medical school, another physician has treated crippling hand conditions successfully with ultrasound. In Chicago, a doctor has experimented with the new treatment technique to relieve pain and spasm among certain aged patients.

Last fall, team physicians of four Big Ten universities used ultrasound to treat football-caused sprains, bruises and "charley horses."

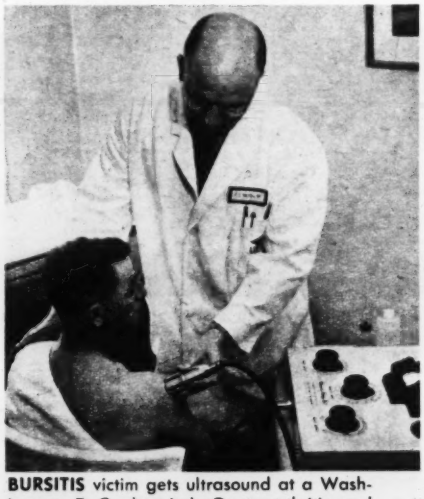

In dentistry, ultrasonic drills are being used experimentally to determine whether they can do the job more efficiently than standard drills.

Thus, used alone, ultrasound is proving its value. New tests indicate that it may be even more effective when used in conjunction with certain injected drugs.

Dr. Aldes has already experimented with cortisone-family drugs along with ultrasonics in animal studies, and in a few people. Preliminary results are hopeful. The patients reported considerable relief from joint pains for several months.

Ultrasonics has been criticized in some quarters as being a "dangerous" form of treatment. So it is — in unskilled hands, just as the frivolous use of any ordinary therapy is dangerous.

But, doctors say, safe dosages have been worked out for all parts of the body. Careful analysis of each of his 3,000 treated patients has assured Dr. Aldes that none experienced a harmful chemical or physical change. On the contrary, "success stories" such as these continue to bolster the case for ultrasonics treatment:

BURSITIS victim gets ultrasound at a Washington, D. C., hospital. Gout, arthritis and neuritis also have responded to the therapy.

- A 47-year-old Arkansas man had suffered arthritis for eight years. Pain and muscle contraction had made him a virtual cripple. All known treatment was tried and failed. Ultrasonic treatment, however, produced results. Soon after he was given "silent sound," the pains began to subside. Now he is able to climb stairs and take walks, two activities that had been impossible for years.
- A 53-year-old Florida woman had arthritis in her hands so badly that she could not pick up a pencil or a toothbrush. A series of ultrasonic treatments made her hands usable once again.

Understandably, doctors shudder when a single treatment is labeled a "cure-all." Doctors who have used ultrasound make no such claims for this therapy.

But one distinguished physician has this to say: "Ultrasonics may one day take its place alongside other medical 'greats' — like the X ray and antibiotics." ■

PARROT being worn by his owner is a Mexican type named Bimbo. Obviously they like each other.

They go to your head

It may surprise you to know that birds rank second to dogs as the most popular pets. Many of their owners belong to one or another of the 400 U.S. bird clubs and take their hobby seriously indeed. Some will pay as high as $500 for a mynah bird; others are content with a $1.98 department-store parakeet. Some birds reciprocate with affection, as these two photos indicate. For people who like birds in their hair, these examples suggest that it's fun being the place where chickens come home to roost.

PIGEON settles on a delighted little girl's head. When child grows up, she may wear parrots too.

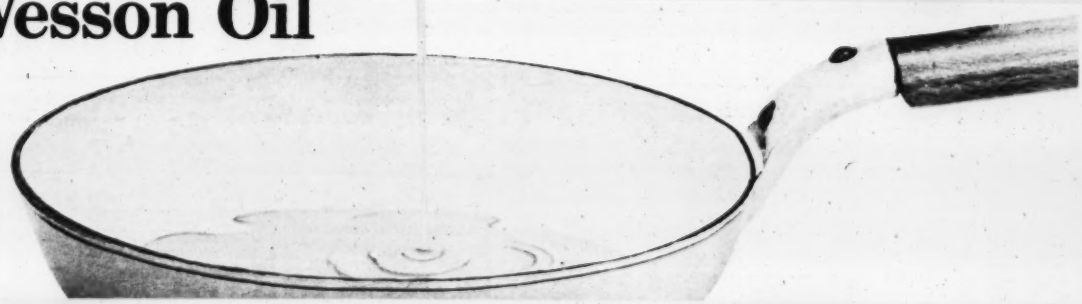

SOLID SHORTENING PRICES CLIMB TO 5-YEAR HIGH !

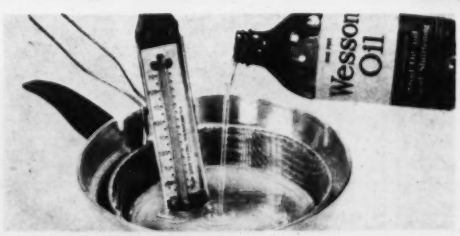

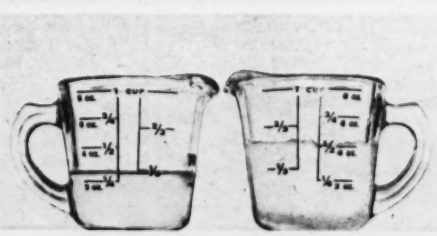

Price of 3-pound can of all-vegetable shortening nears dollar mark

Here's how you save real money with liquid shortening ... delicate Wesson Oil

Thriftier for FRYING

No waste—pour only what you need. No melting. Wesson is instantly ready to use. Safer for digestion, too. You can heat Wesson Oil far higher than all other leading shortenings—and still Wesson will not smoke or burn. Solid shortening turns gray and unappetizing after even one frying. Mild, pure Wesson Oil keeps sparkling clear. You can fry with Wesson again and again and be sure of fresh good taste and beautiful browning.

Goes further for BAKING

You use less shortening with Wesson recipes. You make luxurious 2-egg Chiffon layer cake with just ⅓ cup Wesson Oil. Most solid shortening layer cakes call for at least ½ cup shortening. No air, no thickening. Wesson is all shortening in the purest form. So easy and accurate to measure and mix, there's no fear of costly baking failures. You're sure of delicate flavor too, because Wesson keeps its delicacy at highest baking temperatures.

Save on SALAD DRESSINGS

Fresh, homemade Wesson dressing costs less than bought dressings...takes just one minute to make ... brings out the shyest flavors of your fresh salads. None lighter, finer, fresher than Wesson in all the world. Next time you shop—notice how solid shortening prices have risen, and save with delicate Wesson Oil.

Extra Thrifty: Buy Wesson Oil in the economical gallon size—it's almost like getting a quart free.

PARADE WEST COAST CORRESPONDENT

SAN DIEGO.

Frances O'Connor, a local matron of 42, looks at first glance like a typical young American mother. Trim, attractive, 5'5" and 130 lbs., she frequently is mistaken for 35. She dresses neatly, lives in a two-story, four-bedroom house, drives a 1950 station wagon.

There her typicalness stops.

Whereas the average U.S. housewife has 1.2 children and usually acts like a woman with too much to do and too little time, Frances O'Connor is the mother of 13 children, seven girls and six boys. More important, she is serene and content with her role in life, the role which so many less productive members of her sex currently find frustrating, oppressive and unsatisfying.

In 18 years of marriage Mrs. O'Connor has:

1) been pregnant 13 times; borne 13 children, including one pair of twins; suffered one miscarriage;

2) never had a vacation;

3) never been confined in a hospital longer than two days (except for her last baby, who weighed in at 10 lbs., 13 oz. and required one extra day);

4) never employed any full-time help around the house.

In addition to doing her own housework, taking care of her own brood, preparing and serving 45 individual meals per day, Frances O'Connor also works three hours a day, six days a week in her husband's liquor store.

Although the O'Connors support their family on approximately $800 a month — "We haven't had steak in the house since we were married," says Jerome O'Connor — Frances claims she is happy, fulfilled, completely content.

"Jerome and I," she points out, "may not be rich in things like cars and clothes which so many people seem to value. But we're rich in children. And for a woman, at least for me, children are life's greatest riches.

"What can you possibly compare to a child — a diamond? a new rug? a fur coat? a Cadillac? Nothing can possibly give a woman more lasting pleasure than a baby.

"Women say to me all the time, 'How do you do it? How do you do it?' They talk as if children were some strange kind of obstacle course or some unbearable illness. Raising children has come to be regarded in many quarters as an unpleasant duty. Sure, it's tough. Sure, the hours are long. Sure, the responsibility is enormous and always present. But bearing and raising children is a woman's primary function in life.

"I never expected or wanted anything different. I never wanted to be ambassador to Italy or a motion-picture star or a top fashion designer or a book reviewer. I always wanted a husband and a family. For me children are the beginning, the middle and the end.

"When we first got married in 1938," Mrs. O'Connor continues, "my husband said to me, 'How many kids do you want?' I thought for a moment. 'About six,' I said.

"Jerome howled. 'Holy smokes!' he screamed. 'You some kind of foreigner or something?' At the time he was only earning $5 a day. But we started in on a family right away. Very early Jerome came to realize that the best thing we could do was to build our life around children — not around his business, nor money, but around people. For us it's paid off in happiness."

O'Connor, a feisty, balding little man of 51 who once fought locally as a bantamweight, agrees absolutely with this.

"I'm one of the richest guys in San Diego," he boasts. "Not in money, of course. In flesh and blood. Guys keep kiddin' me all the time about the size of my family. But secretly they really envy me, because I've got the guts to raise 13 fine kids.

"I don't want to sound highfalutin but man was born to reproduce, to keep the life cycle goin'. The married man who can do the job and doesn't is generally selfish or a coward or both.

"A man's kids are the only insurance he's got for friendship in his old age. I've been around a long time; and years ago I came to the conclusion that while money talks, you can't talk to money.

"I've seen wealthy men," O'Connor explains, "guys with yachts, mansions, cars, even private planes. They've got one, maybe two kids. But usually money is what they want out of life, not friendship, just money and the things money can buy. They've got time for nothin' else.

"Their kids grow up without gettin' to know the old man. When the kids leave home, the wife's got nothin' to do. Money doesn't guarantee happiness, and it certainly can't buy love or respect. All it can buy is comfort — and fear.

"When you got a big family, on the other hand, you're loaded with potential. potential for love and friendship. You also got no time for shenanigans or self-pity. You're too busy lookin' after the kids. They keep you on your toes, and they keep you young. You're never lonely.

"Take me and Mama. How're we gonna spend our old age? The same way we spent our young age — raisin' our kids. We're livin' for our children and through our children and it ain't destroyin' our individuality, either. The main thing we give them is ourselves.

DIVING IN at a neighborhood pool, O'Connor kids make an outsize splash.

"I've been told it's impossible to raise 13 kids well without a lot of money. Money is something we ain't got a lot of. But our kids go to parochial school, and they're all healthy and I don't mind tellin' you one of our secrets. One of the secrets of raisin' 13 kids is potatoes.

"In our house Mama serves all kinds of potatoes — mashed potatoes, fried potatoes, baked potatoes, potatoes au gratin, potato salad. None of the kids has ever tasted steak. But you know what? They've all won medals for swimming, except the three youngest, and none of them has got what the scientists call a personality disorder.

Five or Six More?

"I'm just hopin' for five or six more before Mama calls it quits. That's true wealth. Wanna know how rich you really are? Ask yourself what you'd have left tomorrow if you lost every buck you own today. We'd have 13 wonderful kids. Can you top that?"

Frances Shinnick O'Connor doesn't think you can. Born in North Dakota and reared on a 125-acre farm, she was herself one of eight children. She remembers the bitter cold of the Dakota winters ("I froze both my legs when I was a kid playing basketball"), the rigorous daily chores ("I had to serve meals to large teams of wheat thrashers"), the basic advantage of a large family ("I was one of five girls, so I was never spoiled or lonely").

Frances prepared for a nursing career at St. Michael's Hospital in Grand Forks, N.D. After passing her state boards at Fargo, she found work in Minnesota. Then, in 1937, she took off for Mercy Hospital in San Diego. A week after she arrived, she met Jerome O'Connor at a St. Patrick's Day dance. Nine months later they were married.

Work on a family began immediately. Before the year was out the O'Connors were blessed with their first-born, a boy christened Patrick. After that babies came like clockwork: seven (including the twins) in seven years. All told, in 220 months of marriage, Frances O'Connor has been pregnant 124 months, or approximately 54 per cent of the time.

Taking care of 13 children and a husband, Mrs. O'Connor puts in a 14- to 16-hour working day, but unlike many mothers she never complains of nervous or physical fatigue. "A woman's attitude," she says, "is really the important factor in housework. If she regards it as a drudge, if she finds it too confining, too lonesome, if she'd rather be with adults than children, then housework becomes hateful and almost unbearable. Certainly it offers no intellectual stimulation. But just think of all the men in the world who are stuck in jobs they don't like. Compared to them we women have it easy.

"I'm reconciled to the fact that I will never finish my housework, that I never have time to read except late at night. I do the best I can, and that's it. To me it's more important to spend a little time with my three youngest than, say, wash the woodwork. It's better to have well-adjusted children than sparkling windows. It's better to have a new baby than a new living-room suite you're afraid the children will scar."

SUNDAY MASS finds the O'Connors pausing on church steps for a word with the priest. Mrs. O'Connor takes the baby because he can't be left home alone.

Mrs. O'Connor's daily schedule begins when she rises at 6:30. She prepares breakfast for her three oldest sons, Pat, Mike and Dennis, who take off for high school before 7:30. The grade-school girls then are fed and sent off. Next, Frances feeds and dresses her three babies, and heats up another meal for Jerome, who has to be at the store by 10.

Her home cleared, Mrs. O'Connor sets about housework. This includes making up the four bedrooms, washing the dishes, getting the clothes into the washer, drying, preparing lunch, cleaning the rest of the house and, if time allows, shopping.

HOME HAIRCUTS save O'Connors money. As one result, all the younger girls wear bangs.

The O'Connors have one washing machine, one refrigerator, one stove, one TV set. They also have three major household problems. "We have only two bathrooms," Frances points out, "and that makes things difficult in the morning. It's tough getting to use our one telephone, either calling in or out. And then there's the constant necessity of getting enough food on the table at any one time. This family eats like a family of bears — especially those growing boys."

The O'Connors use 75 quarts of milk, 8 pounds of butter, 22 dozen eggs and 45 loaves of bread per week. A single meal calls for 4 pounds of hamburger, 3½ pounds of hot dogs or a 10-pound roast. Each week at least one child gets a new pair of shoes. In the clothes department hand-me-downs are used as much as possible.

Mr. and Mrs. O'Connor rarely spend any money on themselves. "I get a new dress about once a year," Mrs. O'Connor says. "About eight weeks ago I bought a purple knit. It was on sale. Cost $18. I never spend any more than that. Jerome hasn't had a new suit in years. Three or four years ago there was a big sale down at one of the stores here. He bought three suits. Nothing since."

By 3 p.m. the O'Connor children begin to wander in from school, start in on such chores as gardening and baby-sitting. Mrs. O'Connor then drives down to the store and relieves her husband behind the counter until 6. Jerome meanwhile drives home, collects all available small O'Connors and chauffeurs them out to the neighborhood swimming pool. All of the children except the three youngest are crack swimmers. Sharon and Diane have won top honors in rhythm swimming in both local and Los Angeles meets.

"The reason I picked swimming for the kids above any other sport," says O'Connor, "is that it builds up the body without straining the heart. It's also great for growin' girls. Gives them grace and poise."

By 6:15 each evening Mrs. O'Connor is home, having relinquished her store job to Husky Velasco, a young prize-fighter O'Connor used to train. He is on duty till 10. During this time the O'Connors have dinner, after which Frances puts the babies to bed and sees to it that the school-age children do their homework before they sneak off and watch television. At 10, Jerome returns to the store and stays till 2 a.m. Frances normally retires by 11:00 or 11:30, having stayed up until the older boys check in.

From 6:30 a.m. to 11 p.m. is a long day for any mother. From 9:30 a.m. to 2 a.m. is an even longer day for any father. But neither parent ever gripes or complains.

"What's there to gripe about?" asks Jerome O'Connor. "Take a fella like me. I'm 'way ahead of the game. When I was born in Dodge City, Montana, my old man was dead. When my mother came down here with me, we had it plenty rough. I left school at 14 to make a livin' fightin'.

A Man's Possessions

"Today I've got me a store, a little income property, a house of my own, a pretty good reputation in the community and a wonderful family.

"Under these circumstances, who minds workin'? So my teeth need fixin' and we could use a new car, so we don't have too much leisure and a TV set in every room, so what? Hard work never hurt anyone. Besides, Mama and me are used to our kid-rearin' routine. And once you're used to something, it goes easy.

"A little while back we had Mama's sister here. She's a physical-education teacher from Seattle. She said she could handle the 13 kids, and we could have a vacation week end in San Francisco. Know how long she lasted with our tribe? One night. We called off our vacation.

"But all in all we lead a pretty good life. Mama belongs to the Catholic Nurses Association. The kids get along just fine together lookin' after one another. Pat's going off to St. Mary's next year. We hope to send every one of the kids to college who wants to go. And all of us are in good health.

"God's blessed this family with love and children. And in our hearts we've got nothin' but thanks. We O'Connors have always operated on one motto: 'Better rich in smiling faces than rich in money.'" ■

This split-level design, "The Wedgewood," is a plan with a future. It's a three-bedroom home built in a tasteful combination of brick, stone, shingles and board siding that gives the exterior a warm, welcoming appeal.

The living room is to the left of the foyer, one wide step down. Behind it, one step up, is the dining room, which opens onto a terrace at the back.

The kitchen is designed for a circular dinette with counters and storage cabinets surrounding sink, stove and refrigerator. A broom closet gives extra storage space.

A half-flight of stairs in the front hall leads to the sleeping rooms. All are close to bathing facilities: a lavatory with stall shower, attached to the master bedroom, and a tiled family bathroom at the back, with a vanity alcove for guests. There's also a guest lavatory near the front door.

The 1,450 square feet of floor area in this spacious home does not include basement (a short flight of steps from the foyer) or garage (beneath the bedrooms) — both are optional when you build.

junior fashions

THE SECRET here is vinyl. These waterproof pants can be washed over and over, need no ironing.

NEW PANTS FOR BABY

As these photos show, even baby fashions have been glamorized lately. Today there are baby pants with rows of ruffles, lacy inserts and embroideries, and bibs with hand-painted nursery-rhyme characters and gay hand-screened designs. Made of hardy no-press nylon and sponge-off plastics, they're a boon to busy mothers. With the use of a few soap flakes and water they come out looking fresh and clean no matter how many times they're washed.

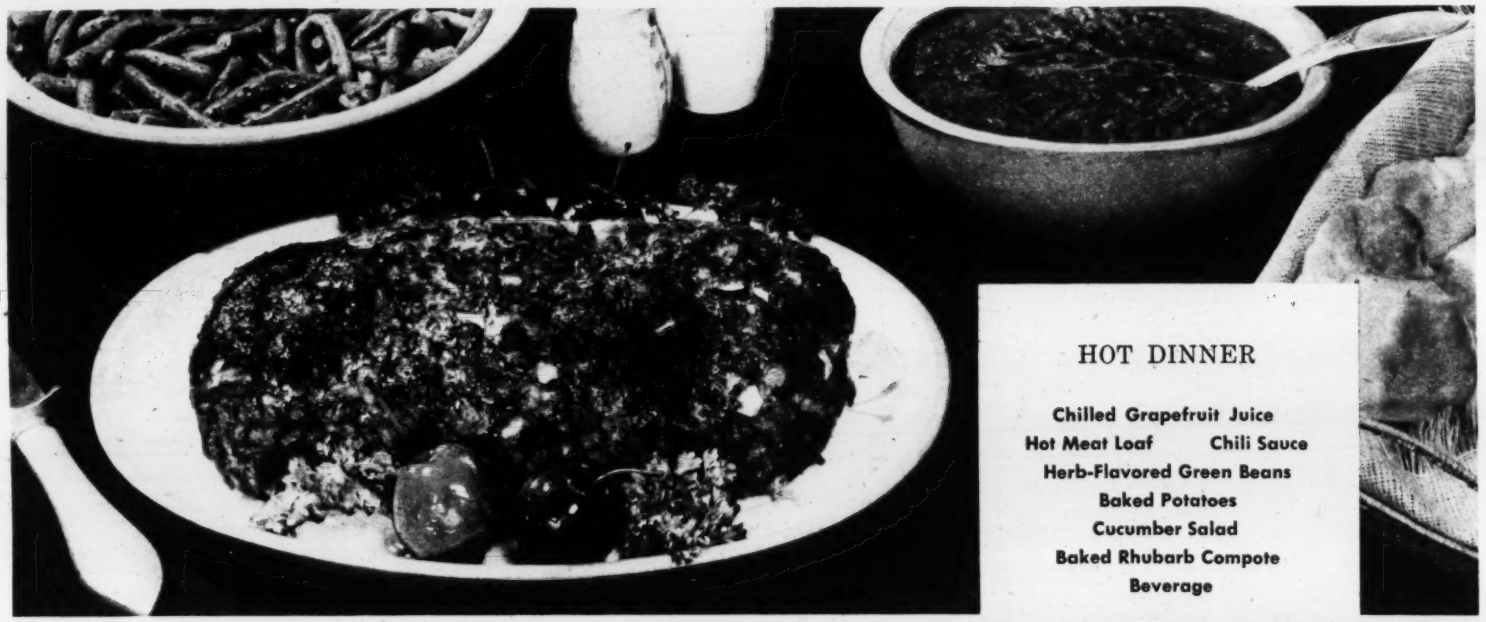

Even if you're not concerned with the "height of style," items like these by Playtex will keep your baby neat and pretty — the easy way.

▲ RUFFLED baby pants of nylon, lined in waterproof vinyl, are just the thing to "dress up" a toddler's first birthday.

◀ "SPONGEABLE" plastic bibs with hand-screened design provide complete cover-up — front and back — for small fry.

Double-duty meat loaf

Two loaves from one quick and easy mixing

This easy-to-prepare recipe for meat loaf will delight you. With one mixing, you'll have two loaves. Serve one hot; chill the second and serve it cold another day. You'll enjoy these recipes for herb-flavored green beans and marinated mushroom salad, too.

MEAT-LOAF DUET

- 1 cup evaporated milk
- 2 eggs
- 1 teaspoon bottled hot-pepper sauce
- 3 cups soft bread crumbs
- 3 pounds ground beef
- ½ cup ketchup
- ⅔ cup finely chopped onion
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon mono-sodium glutamate
- ¼ teaspoon each: thyme, savory and marjoram (optional)

Combine first three ingredients; beat until blended. Stir in bread crumbs. Add remaining ingredients; blend well. Form into two loaves in shallow pan. Bake in moderate oven (350°) 1 hour and 15 minutes.

HERB-FLAVORED GREEN BEANS

- 1 #303 can Blue Lake green beans
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- ¼ teaspoon each: rosemary, basil and curry
- Salt and pepper to taste

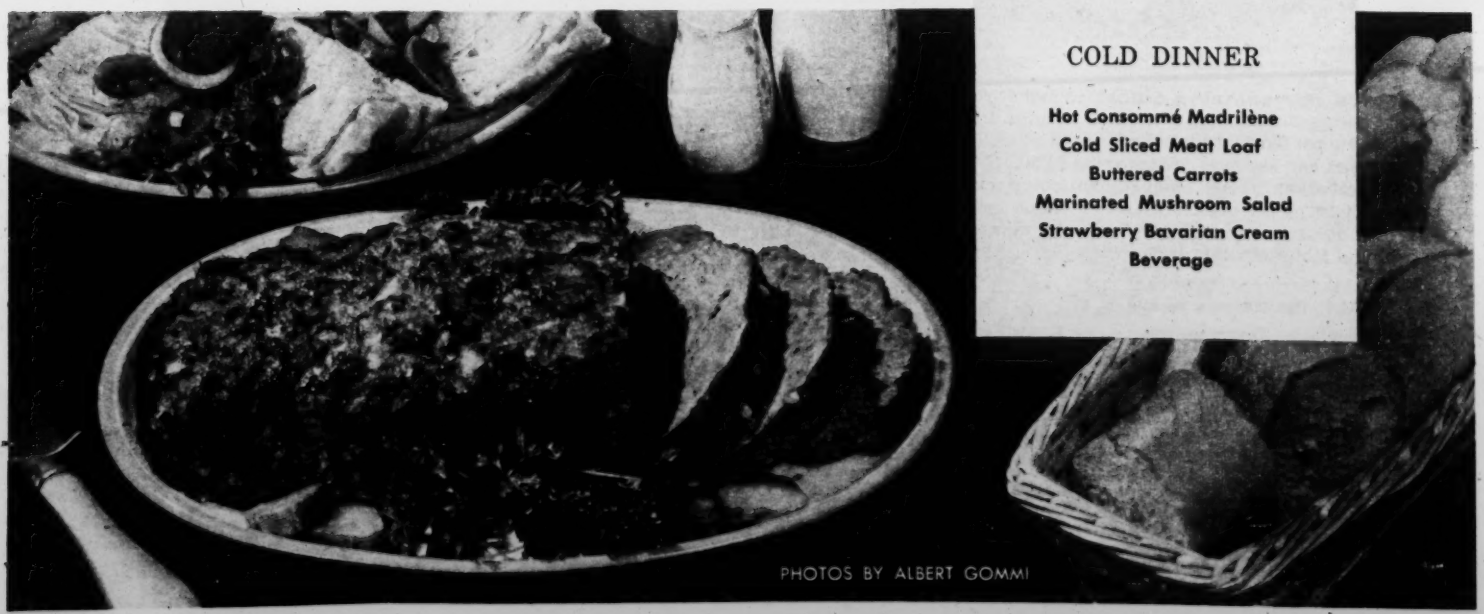

Drain liquid from beans into saucepan. Boil liquid uncovered until reduced by half. Add beans; cook about 8 minutes. Melt butter with seasonings. Pour over heated beans. Makes four servings.

MARINATED MUSHROOM SALAD

- 1 pkg. French salad-dressing mix
- 1⅓ cups (2 4-oz. cans) sliced or button mushrooms
- Rings from 2 small onions
- ½ cup diced green pepper
- 2 tablespoons diced pimiento

Prepare salad-dressing mix, as directed on package. Measure ⅔ cup. Drain mushrooms; combine with remaining ingredients and measured dressing. Chill several hours. Serve over lettuce wedges. Makes four to six servings.

Teen-age Topics

Right now, many of the letters I receive from teen-agers are concerned with the upcoming prom season. Here are some of them:

Q. I am a boy of 17. I do not drive a car but wish to date a girl from an outlying community for the Junior Prom. How do I go about asking her to meet me and what do I do about getting her home? — M.J., Bayonne, N.J.

A. If this girl's parents have friends who live in town, perhaps she could stay with them. In that case, you would meet her at the bus or train and then take her to their home after the dance. If this is impossible, ask her to take the train or bus into town in her party clothes (she pays her own transportation); you meet her and return to her home with her after the dance. If her parents can put you up, fine, otherwise you'll have to make the return trip home. Never suggest that she should go home alone.

Q. When a young teenager is calling for his date and is being chauffeured by his father or mother, should the parent be invited into the girl's home? On Prom night there usually is some delay; the girl's parents often like to take a number of pictures before the couple leaves. — M.K., Bridgeport, Conn.

A. Yes, the parent should be invited in. In any case, the father or mother of the girl should ask the boy whether he would like to bring his parent in for a few minutes. If it is the mother who is doing the chauffeuring, then the father of the girl goes to the car and invites her in. She need not accept the invitation, of course, especially if parking is difficult or if they are somewhat late.

Q. I am quite sure that a boy I like very much will ask me to the Prom, but someone I don't care for has beaten him to it. Is it all right to say no to him and then show up at the dance with the boy I like? — P.D., Reedsburg, Wis.

A. A lady may always refuse an invitation. You may say, quite truthfully, that you have "tentative" plans and therefore cannot accept his invitation. This will give him a chance to say that he will ask you again later — and, if he does and your first date has not come through, you still are free to go with this boy.

Q. What is the proper way to dress for a Junior-Senior Banquet — the best color evening dress, the type of purse and shoes? — L.E., Trenton, S.C.

A. Dress your age. A pastel-colored dress is most suitable, with matching or contrasting slippers. Matching evening bag and slippers would look pretty, if you have them; if not, the shoes could match the dress and an evening bag of gold or silver would pick up an accent color from the dress. The important thing is to discuss this with the other girls; when you know what they are going to wear, you will avoid looking freakish yourself.

QUESTIONS FROM READERS will be answered as space permits. (Miss Vanderbilt cannot answer letters personally.) Address: Amy Vanderbilt, PARADE, 285 Madison Ave., New York 17, N.Y.

BUTTERSCOTCH OATMEAL

PRESIDENT OF THE BROOKLYN DODGERS

as told to JOHN DEVANEY

BROOKLYN, N.Y.

One of the most spectacular plays in baseball history occurred in the 1920 World Series between our Dodgers and Cleveland. With men on first and second, Brooklyn's Clarence Mitchell slammed a line drive at the Cleveland second baseman, who caught it, tagged the runner from first and stepped on second for an unassisted triple play.

That's a play rarely seen in baseball and never before or after in a Series. Yet I'm sure not one fan in 20 could tell me the name of that second baseman. He was not one of the all-time greats, he never made the Hall of Fame, but he turned in a play a Series may never see again.

There are many others like him, forgotten major-leaguers who should be remembered for what they did during one great play or short period of an otherwise ordinary career. What I would like to suggest, therefore, is an addition to baseball's Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, N.Y., to honor those players and keep alive the memory of their plays. (Some of my own favorite great plays are shown in photos on these and the next two pages.)

Let me make this clear: I don't mean for this annex to let run-of-the-mill players into the Hall of Fame. The annex would be a separate part of the Hall at Cooperstown. In fact, it would include plays by many Hall of Famers; any

Local boy makes good

WHEN THE LATE Ebenezer Hubbard, a patriotic Concord man, left a bequest for a statue, there luckily happened to be a real sculptor close at hand.

Even more luckily, young Dan French had never yet sculped a whole statue—had, in fact, recently started by whittling on turnips. So he took the job for expenses—glad to get it—and two years later, his very first statue went up.

Now, during his great lifetime, Daniel French was to make many more statues, but his fame needs only two to rest secure. One is the massive, brooding figure in the Lincoln Memorial. The other is his first: the big, bold, living bronze of the Minuteman of Concord.

When, in 1941, a symbol of American strength was sought, the President picked the Minuteman. Ever since, the Minuteman has been the emblem of the great savings program that helps keep Americans safe and secure. This year, the 15th anniversary of U. S. Series E Savings Bonds, finds 40 million Americans owning $40 billions of Bonds. Are you among them? Invest in United States Savings Bonds regularly. And hold on to them!

BOB FELLER gets ball from Jim Hegan after pitching third no-hitter of his career to beat Tigers, 2-1, on July 1, 1951.

An example for kids to follow great play — whether turned in by a famous star or a nobody — would be honored.

Such an exhibit, I think, would make a terrific impression on youngsters visiting Cooperstown. It would let them realize that baseball's great plays were not all performed by the super-stars; many were turned in by ordinary players who met a challenge by briefly rising above their natural talents to greatness. That's an example many kids would profit by following.

To make up the exhibit, photographs of the great play itself — if obtainable — could be mounted with whatever other mementos are available — the ball, bat or glove used, the uniform or spikes worn that day, the official scorecard and so on.

On what basis should the greatest plays of all time be picked? I'd be willing to leave that up to the men who would do the choosing — fans, sportswriters or whoever might be named — just as we now leave it to sportswriters to vote for Hall of Famers each year. Granted, some arguments might crop up over the choices; but I've found that a good rhubarb never hurts baseball.

PARADE asked me to list some of the plays I'd like to see immortalized. There are many, but I know of 10 that certainly should be included. Seven of these are described in the captions under the photos on these pages. Here are the remaining three:

- Bill Wambsganss' triple play — did you remember his name? — in the 1920 Series.
- Duke Snider's four homers in the '52 Series.
- Carl Hubbell's whiffing of Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Joe Cronin, Jimmy Foxx and Al Simmons in the 1934 All-Star game.

Let's put those great moments where they belong — in baseball's shrine.

CYD CHARISSE:

A dancer starts to act

For 14 years she's been 'promising.'

Now the promise may be coming true

HOLLYWOOD.

For the past 10 years the long-stemmed dancing beauty at left has been touted here as one of the screen's great potential stars. Each time she twirls her graceful, frequently torrid way through a movie, some studio executive says flatly, "The kid's got everything. From here on in she can't miss."

They said it first in 1945, when Cyd Charisse danced in Ziegfeld Follies; in 1951, when she flitted through Singin' in the Rain with Gene Kelly; two years later, when she scored with Fred Astaire in The Band Wagon. Today, her notable job in Meet Me in Las Vegas has the prophets talking overtime.

And for the first time in her 14-year, 23-film career, the gentle, brown-eyed actress believes that what they say may be true.

"In most of my pictures," she softly explains, "I've just been a dancer. In order to catch on with the public you just can't do specialty numbers. You've got to come alive as a personality so that people identify you as warm or funny or ladylike or something.

"Meet Me in Las Vegas is the first real acting break I've ever had out here. It's the first time a part was actually created for me so that I could generate a little personality.

"It's proved to me that, given a good script, I can be accepted as an actress as well as a dancer. Maybe from this point on, I'll get better pictures and a larger following . . ."

This undemanding approach is typical of Cyd. Most actresses fight, conspire, try by any means to land meaty roles. But Charisse has been serene and impassive about her movie progress since 1948 — the year she married crooner Tony Martin and decided that thenceforth marriage would come first, career second.

Behind that conclusion lay a background stretching all the way to Amarillo, Tex., where Cyd was born 33 years ago. Daughter of a jeweler named Ernest Finklea, she was christened Tula Ellice. She began taking dancing lessons at the age of 6. The purpose, according to her mother, "was to give the child an appetite. She was always tall and thin." What the lessons actually gave her was a driving ambition to become a great ballerina.

The summer his dancing daughter was 12, Ernest Finklea took his family to Hollywood. Cyd auditioned for Nico Charisse, former ballet master for Fanchon & Marco. "Your daughter has talent," Charisse announced. "If you will stay here and work with me, I am sure she will become a big star."

Cyd stayed. For three years she practiced eight to 10 hours per day. By the time she was 16 she was so proficient that she was signed by the famed Ballet Russe. She also fell in love with her teacher, who was 20 years her senior.

They were married in France (the bride was 17), then returned to Hollywood and a small apartment. Soon they were joined by Cyd's mother, brother — and resultant strife. After a son, Nico, Jr., was born, Cyd went to work in films. A bit part in Something to Shout About set her ambition to flame. Three more pictures, and her career became more important to her than her marriage. Under the circumstances the latter went to pot.

"I was much too young," Cyd now admits, "to know what marriage was all about. I was interested in getting ahead as a dancer. To me that's what counted."

The Charisses were divorced in 1947. By then Cyd had given the screen everything she had, but stardom had eluded her. Gradually she revised her sense of values. After she married Tony Martin, she was offered the lead opposite Gene Kelly in An American in Paris (which later won the Academy Award), but turned it down to honeymoon in Europe with her new husband.

"My No. 1 job," she said at the time, "is to keep Tone happy. After that comes my career. You see, I've learned that a career is a very nice thing to have. Only you can't talk to it on lonely nights."

Cyd still feels that for her marriage and family are paramount. When Tony is singing in top night spots in Las Vegas, Chicago or New York, Mrs. Martin accompanies him — unless she is needed at home by her two sons, Nico, Jr. (now 15) or Tony, Jr. (5).

MR. AND MRS. Tony Martin: She claims keeping him happy still is her No. 1 job.

Ironically, Cyd's career has gone much better since she abandoned overambition. She is genuinely well-liked in film circles. Although she appears devastatingly sexy on-screen, she is open-faced and friendly off. "If Meet Me in Las Vegas leads to bigger and better parts," she says, "that's great. If not, I'll be just as happy as Mrs. Tony Martin."

At MGM, however, the big boys insist that Cyd is finally ready for stardom. They've penciled her in for the leads in two forthcoming pictures, Silk Stockings and Designing Woman. And it may well be that after 14 years their star of promise is at long last ready for the top rung of the success ladder. ■

Interested in saving time and money? Try these new ideas from U.S. industry

FASTER ROASTING: You can save about 40% on roasting time -- and fuel cost -- by first piercing meat with slender metal triangles (one for each half-pound) that conduct the oven's heat into the heart of the roast. According to maker's tests, you save one half the shrinkage and get a juicier roast. Triangles can be used over and over. Set of 12: $1. W. I. STEARNS CO., Arlington, Vt.

DOOR BUMPERS: Streamlined hard-rubber guards on the opening edge of your car doors will prevent damage from hitting garage walls, etc. Strong steel clips fasten them firmly to doors of all makes of cars. $1 a pair. GEORGE H. HAMMOND SALES CO., 2455 Guardian Bldg., Detroit 26, Mich.

WATERPROOF YOUR BASEMENT: A cement paint with silicones added is your latest answer to dampness in basement or masonry walls. It's said to penetrate into masonry pores and provide a water-repellent coating that won't peel or crack. Comes in white, gray, green, rose, buff. SILIPHANE, 10 E. 40th St., New York 17, N.Y.

PETTICOAT KIT: Want to make a crinoline petticoat to go with today's full-skirted fashions? A new do-it-yourself kit has everything you'll need: Fiberglas cloth, an adjustable nylon waistband, nylon bias tape, hooks and eyes -- plus simple directions. In white, black, pale pink, powder blue: junior size, $2.95; adult size, $3.95. GENERAL FIBER GLASS CORP., 192 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y.

AUTOMATIC FIREMAN: A new aerosol can automatically gives off a dense flame-smothering fog whenever the temperature reaches approximately 165 degrees. Hang it in any room; it's effective 18 feet away against all types of fire, won't harm fabrics. $3. CYEMBA SALES CO., Dept. 1, Derby, Conn.

FIGHT THOSE TERMITES: You can protect your house from termites for about 1/10 the cost of a professional job, maker claims, by using a special chemical dissolved in water. One treatment lasts for years. $18 worth treats from 27 to 106 linear feet, depending on type of soil. COMPASS RESEARCH ASSOCIATES, 90 Clairton Blvd., Pittsburgh 27, Pa.

MOTHER'S HELPER: Keep baby's playpen neat with a new, washable terry-cloth cover for the bottom pad. Fits any 40"-x-40" playpen, ties safely with strings. $2.98. ANN & VAN, Box 243-PR, New Rochelle, N.Y.

How to Make Barbecued Broilers Tastier with Ac'cent

Outdoor eating at its best—2 or 3 broiler-fryer chickens, split lengthwise and sprinkled with 2 teaspoons of Ac'cent, for finer flavors, then slow-cooked over glowing coals!

To prepare Cook-out Barbecued Broilers with Ac'cent

Chicken: Hook wing tip behind shoulder joint on to back. Shake Ac'cent on both sides of chicken. Place on grate. Brush both sides with barbecue sauce. Start cooking with cut side toward grate set 12 inches or more from heat. Cook slowly until tender, turning frequently and basting each time. Allow 1 to 1¼ hours cooking time. Use any left-over barbecue sauce for dunking.

*Excellent results depend upon slow cooking—glowing coals (not flame) and proper distance from heat source.

Finest flavor depends upon Ac'cent

'Miss Frances'

Millions of Small Fry Never Skip Her Classes

By Virginia Irwin

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

NEW YORK, May 12

MISS FRANCES, the pet teacher of the millions of small fry who would no more think of missing "Ding Dong School" (KSD-TV 9 a.m. Monday through Friday) than their parents would consider skipping the "$100,000 Big Surprise," has two prized possessions. One is a half of a gingerbread man and the other is a baby tooth. The half of the gingerbread man came as a present from a four-year-old boy who wanted to share his favorite Christmas cookie with "Miss Frances—my favorite lady." The tooth came from a young miss whose mother wrote to explain that her daughter, while watching "Ding Dong School" became so absorbed in Miss Frances's direction for growing a sweet potato in water that she wiggled her loose front tooth to the point that it came out without the pain of pulling.

Dr. Frances Horwich . . . "Ding Dong School" teacher on KSD-TV weekday mornings.

"Every mail brings something unusual," the warm-hearted, soft-spoken star and producer of the award-winning children's program explained. "Letters pour in, usually at the rate of about 300 a day, but some special features on the program may run the count into the thousands."

* * *

PHENOMENALLY POPULAR, "Ding Dong School" last month had its 900th performance on television. Started as a six-weeks' experiment in educational television for the 2-to-12-year-old set, the program is now three and a half years old and Miss Frances has set something of a record for never having missed a telecast. Miss Frances puts in long hours on her seemingly simple program.

Besides the five-day-a-week "Ding Dong School," Miss Frances recently began "Parents Time With Miss Frances," a daily five-minute radio series offering advice to parents of children up to seven years of age.

Behind the scenes at NBC, Miss Frances is Dr. Frances Horwich, supervisor of children's programs for the entire network.

"AT LAST COUNT," she said, "1696 ideas for children's programs had Children pour out to see and hear "Miss Frances" of "Ding Dong School" on personal appearances. This picture was taken in Memphis.

crossed my desk since last July. And out of that number I think we have found 16 that are really terrific. Within a few months you are going to see new programs for children—ideas that have never before been tried on TV."

Miss Frances readily admits that the success of "Ding Dong School" surprised her from the very start. Begun on a local station in Chicago, the program was being carried on a nation-wide network only seven weeks later. Literally dozens of awards have been heaped upon it. When it was only four months old, it received the coveted Peabody Award as "the outstanding children's program of 1952"—even though it had been on the network for only six weeks that year. The Christophers, Look Magazine, the National Association for Better Radio and Television, Billboard, the Associated Press, Ohio State University, the Saturday Review and many more special award groups, polls and organizations have honored the "Ding Dong School" teacher.

AS AN AUTHOR of articles and texts in her field, Dr. Horwich is known to educators everywhere for her human approach to the problems of children and of young teachers preparing to work with small children.

Born Frances Rappaport, in Ottawa (O.), she attended grade and high school there before beginning studies at the University of Chicago. Married in 1931 to Harvey L. Horwich, a writer of documentaries and former civilian historian with the U.S. Air Force in Korea, Miss Frances "keeps house" in a five-room New York apartment. She loves to cook and bake, and always is busy at some bit of needlework. For "Ding Dong School" she wears rather severe dresses but off camera she likes decidedly feminine clothes.

The Television Letter Box

Letters Intended For This Column Should Be Addressed To Television Editor, TV Magazine, Post-Dispatch, St. Louis 1, Mo.

OUR family of four adults made it a point to stay up Thursday nights just to see Chick Chandler and John Russell in "Soldiers of Fortune" on KSD-TV. It was wonderful, well-acted and different from the usual run-of-the-mill stuff. Now they are no longer on. Is there any chance of them being put on at a later date?

THE WINE FAMILY

(New "Soldiers of Fortune" episodes are now being filmed, but no date has been set for return of the series.—Editor.)

"Navy Log" is one of the most adult and intelligent half hours on the air.

What happened to "One Man's Family" which was on television some time ago? This show had real heart interest for both young and old.

B. C. F.

("One Man's Family" still is on radio (KSD, 6:45 p.m. weekdays) but was discontinued as a television series.—Editor).

The TV Magazine is terrific—our whole family enjoys it. We particularly enjoyed the article about "The Nelsons." They represent the happy families throughout America. Our family enjoyed the show when it came on at a reasonable hour, but it's too late now for the children.

MRS. NORMAN ULLRICH

We are sorry that the Perry Como show is not going to be on the whole year through. We enjoy it so much. And we enjoy the TV booklet. Keep up the good work.
